WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL

and

WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL-CAMP

The peace-time educational system developed at Wassookeag School-Camp and Wassookeag School from 1926 to 1928 has become a pattern for war.

The colleges are operating on an accelerated schedule; the draft is digging deeper into the ranks of youth; the stride of events is lengthening toward complete mobilization of man power. All this demands that we do more for boy power and do it quickly.

The boy who previously entered college at eighteen, the candidate of average or better ability, can and must enter college at seventeen. The boy who entered college at seventeen, the boy of outstanding ability, can and must enter at sixteen.

Candidates for college can save a year without sacrificing sound standards if they begin not with the senior year in school, but with the freshman or sophomore year. Now more than ever before we must look ahead surely and plan ahead thoroughly.

First—FILL THE SUMMER VACUUM

Wassookeag's scholastic system was introduced at the School-Camp in 1926 as a summer study-program for boys thirteen to nineteen. This program was developed to meet the need for greater continuity in the educational process, the need for constructive use of the long vacation months. The purpose—to speed up preparation for college by stimulating higher attainment and by effecting a saving of time.

Second—DEVELOP A YEAR-ROUND PROGRAM

In 1928 the speed-up program of the summer session at the School-Camp was extended to a year-round educational system by the founding of Wassookeag School. By actual count over a period of twelve years, the majority of Wassookeag students have begun the school year in July rather than September—an "accelerated program" on the secondary level.

Third—BEGIN NOW

Wassookeag's function in education has been the planning and directing of timesaving programs for schoolboys. Over six hundred such programs, each different because each boy is different, have been followed through at the School and the School-Camp. Send for information regarding the extent of scholastic schedule and the types of speed-up programs that schoolboys have carried successfully, that can be built into a well-balanced school experience and a well-balanced summer vacation.

ALL meetings of the Alumni Council and of the Directors of the Alumni Fund were held at the University Club in Boston on November 19 and 20. A distinct Bowdoin atmosphere hovered over the University Club for two days as the Bowdoin Club of Boston held its fall dinner meeting there on Friday, November 19. Attendance of Council Members and Fund Directors helped to make the gathering the largest in recent years. Many expressed the hope that a similar grouping of Bowdoin meetings might be arranged again.

The Council received the report of the special Council committee on Alumni Association membership and privileges and took steps toward presenting the recommended changes before the Alumni. Dean Nixon was applauded for his letter to the Alumni Clubs demonstrating the proved value to the boys and to the College of Bowdoin's experiment with students under draft age. The Council urged continued Alumni activity to the end that more younger boys, capable of college work, be made acquainted with and interested in Bowdoin.

Directors of the Alumni Fund discussed plans for the 1943-44 campaign. Chairman Sayward announced that the objectives for this year's campaign are 3000 contributors and $40,000. Particular emphasis is to be put upon an effort to enlist in annual giving to the College a substantially larger proportion of the more than 6000 living Bowdoin men. Directors believe that "the income on a million" should be the Fund's minimum dollar goal. It is planned to continue the award of Alumni Fund Scholarships but the major part of the 1943-44 Fund proceeds will be applied to an unrestricted Alumni gift to the College "that Bowdoin may begin her second 150 years with vigor and confidence."

Both the Council and the Fund Directors pledged their support and assistance to an effective guidance and placement service for Bowdoin men, particularly for those returning from the armed forces.

Prominent among the contributions which have made Bowdoin enduring is the long and devoted service of her teachers. Recognition by the Faculty of Professor Roscoe James Ham's completion of forty years as a Bowdoin teacher calls to mind that, in the 141 completed academic years of the College, he is one of the ten who have taught so long. The others are: Parker Cleaveland (1805-1858), Alpheus Spring Packard '16 (1819-1884), William Smyth '22 (1823-1868), Thomas Cogswell Upham (1824-1867), Henry Leland Chapman '66 (1869-1914), Henry Johnson '74 (1877-1918), William Albion Moody '82 (1884-1926), Charles Clifford Hutchins '83 (1885-1927) and Wilmot Brookings Mitchell '90 (1893-1939). It is interesting to note that seven of the ten are graduates of Bowdoin. Professor Ham's forty years at Bowdoin were interrupted by a stay at Trinity from 1907 to 1909. Still active, he began his forty-first year this fall.

It seems highly unlikely that any Bowdoin man requires identification of the two sturdy gentlemen appearing on the cover. For the possible few whose stay at Bowdoin may have been too recent—or too brief—and for those other ALUMNUS readers whose educational processes were unfortunately not leavened by contact with these revered and loved teachers, let it be said that Professor Stanley Barney Smith's informal but revealing portrait is of Professors Emeriti Wilmot Brookings Mitchell '90 and William Albion Moody '82. In treasured memory indelibly linked, respectively, with "Spartacus to the Gladiators" and the speed horse "Triangle," veterans with more than forty years on the Bowdoin Faculty, they are affectionately known to unnumbered generations of Bowdoin boys as "Mitch" and "Buck."

IMPORTANT

Shortage of aluminum prevents making the many addressograph plate changes occasioned by the frequently changing mail addresses of Bowdoin men in service. Families know the latest effective address and know best when mail should be forwarded.

The ALUMNUS, therefore, is being mailed to home addresses in most cases. Families are asked to continue their assistance by forwarding.

To FORWARD:

1. Use the original envelope
2. Place the new address on it
3. Add 3 cents postage

A Wartime Campus

of Bowdoin's Participation*

IT is 17:30 on a crisp Friday afternoon in September. From "Mem" Hall, from Adams, and from the Library, khaki-clad squads of Pre-Meteorologists come swinging across the campus paths, converging upon Hyde Hall. Hep . . . hep. Hep, two, three, four, hep . . . It's been a busy day: reveille at 06:20, a quick breakfast at the Union; then classes, classes, classes; noon mess—and the mail rush, and half an hour's respite; then more classes . . . Hep . . . hep . . .

*Alouette, gentille Alouette, Alouette, je te plumerai . . .
You're in the Army now,
You're not behind a plow . . .*

17:32—and Retreat coming up in three minutes! Jeeez! Snap it up! Hep . . . Hep. Squa-a-ad, halt! Fall out!

Near Winthrop a few maples show yellow and scarlet. Overhead, a mile up, a Flying Fortress drones south. Far to the east a section of Corsairs wheel in step-down formation towards their base. Between Appleton and the Chapel the Detachment Band is assembling.

Near the Polar Bear a bugler sounds the first Adjutant's Call. Assorted civilians begin to swarm around the parapet of the Art Building terrace. Sundry small fry romp around. Baby carriages converge upon the scene. In front of the Library a group of newly-arrived Army Spec-al Training Program engineers stop to watch. Several Navy Officers linger near the Thorndike oak.

To the tune of Phi Chi the squadrons, led by their student lieutenants, follow the band onto the campus. Then the honor squadron leads on the color guard. As the colors sweep by ["Daddy, are those rifles loaded?"], the squadrons snap to attention and present arms. One dog and three mongrels yelp off towards the Chapel. From somewhere off Casco Bay a blue-grey Ventura whirs homeward. A professor of economics spies a former student and inquires about the Purple Heart ribbon he wears. The evening light turns green-gold, and some of the Library's western windows catch fire.

The band stops the rousing—but infidel—Maine Stein Song. An expectant hush drifts over the parade ground. Whrrrrrrr (with a whistle) go three more F4U's, in echelon, so low you can see the camouflage and British insignia. The shadows of the wine-glass elms dapple the waiting squadrons. Retreat is on! . . .

A trumpeter sounds the second Adjutant's Call. Right guides run to their positions, and, as the band crashes into Bowdoin Beata, the squadrons move in stagger to their pre-determined line of retreat.

dome of the Art Building, low over the campus, lumbers a Catalina, a resourceful old archaeopteryx, homeward bound.

Guides post!

Pa—rade rest!

Civilians keep filtering onto the terrace. A solemn brown setter looks wistfully up-campus for that squirrel of Wednesday before. S-ssssssh! goes the order of the day to seven baby-carriages.

Sound off! And the band struts down and back before the several hundred officers-to-be:

Climbing high into the sun . . .*

A small boy clambers up the left-hand limestone lion. The President greets an unforgotten fond parent. Near the Library a gob and his gal prefer finally to watch. The brown setter is yapping now up-campus, near "Mass" Hall.

The bugle section sounds Retreat. With a lusty wind-up the bass drummer gives a sunset gun BOOOOM! ["Daddy, what was that?"] Then Squadrons, atten-shun! . . . Present—arms!

Slowly—ever so slowly—with the National Anthem ringing clear, Old Glory is hauled down by the honor guard, two at the halyards, three waiting to gather her in.

*. . . in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.*

Over the Delta three more Corsairs aslant whistle-and-roar low, tip to tip, their landing gear readied. From a second trio, in the south, one starts to peel off. On the terrace there is an expanse of bare bottom as Sister scrambles up behind Brother on the Loggia dei Lanzi lion. The setter is back, looking more like a disgruntled pointer. Behind her Red Cross knitting bag a faculty wife knits—and purls.

The adjutant takes his post with the student major. Order—Arms!—and the group captains echo. Officers, center—Harch! On they come: group commanders, adjutants, squadron staffs, and guidons. The blue-and-gold ribbon of the Air Corps is affixed to the guidon of the honor squadron of the month. Officers, post!—and Orders of the Day follow.

Sir, the Parade is formed.

Out of the west, in the deepening twilight, darts a lone gull-winged F4U, trailing a long white target sleeve. [“Look, Mummy! What’s that?”] The shadows are spreading, and the Chapel spires turn ashen. One infant citizen aims his wooden Tommy gun. A J.G. ambles wearily away.

All present and accounted for . . . All prsntnd countdfor—down the line.

Pass in review! The major’s command is followed with Columns of squadrons to the right, and the parade is on! [“Daddy, look! That big plane has only one engine.” “Sssssh! That’s an SNJ. They use that—” “But, Daddy, why doesn’t it—?”]

Here they come, parading the field. Eyes right! The guidon-bearers dip their pennants as the squadrons pass by. The band carries Our Director briskly, and the officers sift into their positions of honor as the wing marches off the parade ground, around the Library:

. . . In echelon, we carry on.

Hey!—Nothing can stop the Army Air Corps!!

A blue-grey PV caroms down from a cloud and wheels over as if in salute. The sunset gathers in its deepening lights, while the campus seems suddenly eerie and deserted.

Bowdoin’s campus role in World War II began its variegated pattern in the spring of 1941, when Lieutenant (now Lieutenant-Commander) Noel C. Little, USNR, was appointed to head up the Naval Training School. With the Science Building as operational center and a staff of commissioned specialists the School has flourished mightily, with successive waves of officer students, until its personnel today comprises a plentiful faculty and an overlapping group muster of unmentionable size, getting expert training in a most vital aspect of modern warfare. For over two years the khaki-clad Navy officers have been an unobtrusive but familiar and welcome sight on the campus.

There followed, in February 1943, the establishment at Bowdoin of the Army Air Forces Technical Training Detachment No. 68: privates, quartered in Winthrop and Maine, enrolled for Pre-Meteorological training (course C), under the direction of Professor Edward Hammond. The unit’s schedule is a rigorous full-year one, with a 49-hour academic work-week in mathematics, physics, geography, and a joint course in American History and English. The entire College mathematics, physics, and English departments are enlisted, with numerous “borrowings,” and additional instructors (including two on the distaff side). In May, more “Weather Men” arrived, and moved into Appleton. The present roster, somewhat reduced by screening tests, numbers several hundred, including a dozen Bowdoin trainees. Physical training, drill, and supervised sports round out the full-fledged Army routine of the “Metes,” who daily march in squads to and from all classes and storm the Union, in two sittings, for welcome mess.

Following months of construction, with dump-trucks cascading through the town, and preoccupied strangers at every turn, the vast Brunswick Naval Air Station was commissioned on April 15th. With Under Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, Senator Ralph

O. Brewster ’09, and Governor Sewall on hand, the community was treated to the rare spectacle of a handsomely and efficiently converted blueberry patch of (censored) square miles, now a teeming Navy Training Station—under a vigorous and inspiring C. O., Commander John C. Alderman, USN, former skipper of the USS McFarland, and veteran of much South Pacific action, a wearer of the Navy Cross. Needless to say, the B. N. A. S., two miles Bathward, has come to dominate many features of Brunswick life, and has jounced the town high up on the airways map of the present and future. Begun in 1932 as a modest E. R. A. local airport, the Station now takes its proud place as a link in the Navy’s strong Eastern Seaboard chain, with auxiliary air facilities at Rockland, Lewiston, Sanford, Casco Bay, and Bar Harbor. Its slogan “Brunswick Built for Business” has proved to be no mere verbal burgee.

With a dwindling undergraduate civilian enrollment, the College gladly opened more doors and welcomed, on August 15th, a unit of the Army Special Training Program. Occupying Hyde Hall and the D. U. House (which latter is also both headquarters and mess-hall), the unit began in mid-September its basic engineering course of nine months, embracing mathematics, physics, chemistry, geography, history, English, and physical training, under military direction of Captain Philip Danley, C. O. of the joint Army units.

Thus the College, with sundry dislocations and ungrudging readjustments, cheerfully "carries on." The faculty has more than a dozen in active service, and has added about 20 young instructors. About 150 undergraduates, including some 50 17-year-old freshmen, remain—many of them subject, of course, to call. Over 80 have gone, with a lingering look behind, into the Navy's V-12 program at near-by Bates.

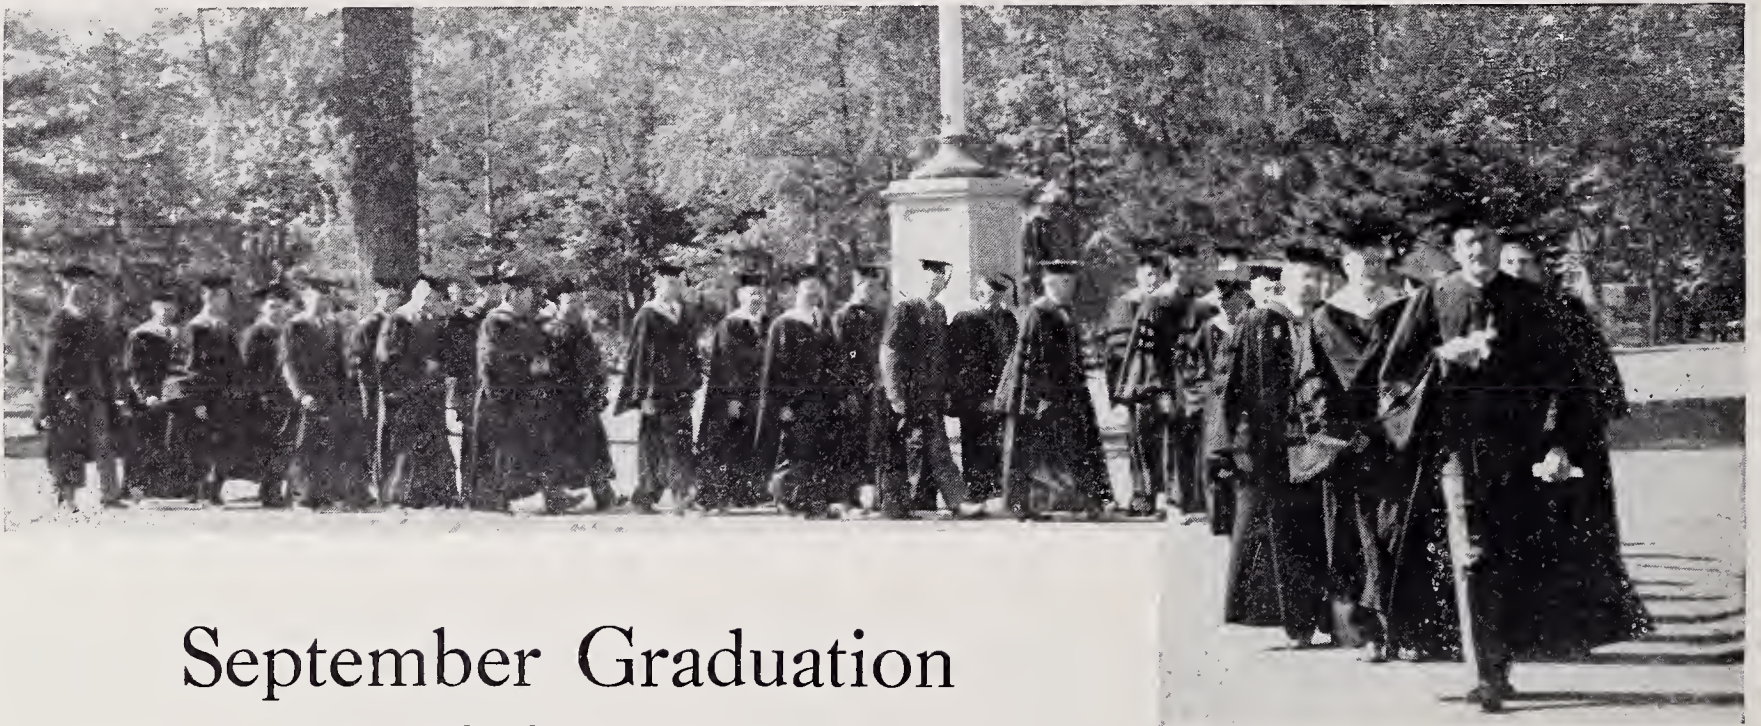

Meanwhile countless "items" crowd the calendar. The year has seen such innovations as an exhibition of military swimming, Army Band concerts on the Mall, faculty wives' sewing bees for the "Metes," a popular U.S.O. recreation room above the Town Hall auditorium, V-1 qualifying and Marine freshman-sophomore exams, Wednesday and Friday Retreat on the campus, "The Meteor" page in the Orient, an officers' club in the Psi U house, victory gardens galore, soldiers' dances in the Union, A-12 and

V-12 exams, officers' mess at the Zeta Psi house, War Loan drives, exams . . . directives . . . more directives . . .

As before, the old College and the staid little town are carrying on through cataclysmic days: Alma Mater ut in pace sic per bellum . . . overhead and underfoot the great game goes on—as it will and must, through to victory!

A technical sergeant of Marines gets out of the barber's chair, enroute from Guadalcanal to Aroostook . . . A "limey" stares at an oxcart . . . Longfellow's forest primeval still stands like the Druids of old . . . A young bombardier tells blushing of his first submarine in the Caribbean; sank same . . . Two jeepfuls of sailors scatter the pigeons on Maine Street . . . Last year's cotton mill bowling champ steps off the train, with a Silver Star ribbon . . . Up in Hawthorne's old room an expensive slide-rule "just won't work right, dammit!" . . . A bosn's mate scurries from a beer joint for the Coast Guard bus . . . Down Jordan Avenue, in the new housing development, a Gold Star hangs in a humble window . . . Up the hill the chimes swing from Anchors Aweigh into I've Been Workin' on the Railroad . . . Six Corsairs whine over the old home of Harriet Beecher Stowe (for rent) . . . A greying colonel says farewell to a colleague: off this time for Scotland, perhaps Italy . . . A squirrel bounces from a pine to a spruce, closely followed by its tail . . . A telegram arrives uptown, starred, from the War Department . . . A huge motor van, carrying what must be God's own grand piano, rumbles into Bath Street . . . Down-town, a pair of local Messalinas try to look expensive . . . A tired, grimy ship-fitter wrestles with an unruly peck of potatoes . . . A Pfc on leave . . . A girl . . . Another sniffing all-but-dog . . . The shadow of a Ventura . . . Steam from Mike's hot-dog oven . . . A child with a lollipop . . .

September Graduation

*As Related By One Of
The Accelerated Graduates*

SATURDAY morning, September 25th, just half an hour after the rest of the College had relaxed from the toil of final examinations, seventeen Seniors marched to the Chapel for another Bowdoin wartime graduation. Filing from the Library behind the Faculty, we hardly felt like a class, for of the 189 freshmen entering Bowdoin in the fall of 1940, only these few were left to experience the second graduation of the Class of 1944. Except for five members who still remain on the Bowdoin campus and those who received degrees under the accelerated program at the May Commencement, most of our members had left for the service. Our small size we could accept readily with minimum regret, for our own departure had been imminent enough during our three years at Bowdoin. An accelerated college course we accepted, too, but an accelerated commencement would have been at least quietly disappointing. For us it was an important occasion, as important and significant as any of the impressive peace-time ceremonies had been for classes graduating under normal conditions. And perhaps it was more by reason of the present wartime exigencies than in spite of them that the College maintained its traditional ceremony and procedure of the day.

The band and long procession of former years were lacking, and, as we assembled before the Library, an army touch-football game was under way in the center of the campus. The spirit of the day was much the same, however, as a small crowd of parents and a few curious soldiers, some perhaps a bit wistfully interested, circled the Chapel entrance while the Executive Committee, Faculty, and Seniors, all in caps and gowns, moved inside. Across the lower step of the chancel were seated Dean Paul Nixon; the Reverend Thompson E. Ashby, D.D. (Hon. '30), pastor of the First Parish Church of Brunswick; President Kenneth C. M. Sills; Mr. Clement Robinson '03, President of the Board of Overseers; and Dr. Edward Hammond, Director of Admissions. The graduating Seniors took their places in the right-hand section of the senior forms, close to the lectern steps, and the Board members and Faculty sat in the section facing them on either side in the choir pews. Families, college students, a few army men from the A.S.T.P. and Pre-Meteorology units, and local friends of the College amply filled the remaining rows. The exercises proceeded in their ancient form, interspersed with organ solos by Professor Tillotson, and in its informal dignity, the familiar ceremony for the conferring of Bowdoin degrees struck a reassuring note of staid unchange among many changing college customs.

At each award, the candidate received his diploma and the earnest handshake of the President and returned to his place a graduate. Immediately after the conferring of degrees, the President gave his address, using as the subject of his talk the theme "Courage." "Rise, Sons of Bowdoin" and the National Anthem (third verse) closed the program.

Following the exercises, the traditional lobster salad luncheon was served outdoors on the Art Building terrace. President and Mrs. Sills received informally. The banquet atmosphere of alumni dinners in the gymnasium may have been lacking, but clear crisp autumn weather and the presence of an unusually large number of faculty families contributed to an enjoyable occasion.

Twenty-six bachelor degrees were awarded, ten in Arts and sixteen in Science. Degrees to Hyman Louis Osher and Ross Edward Williams were summa cum laude; those to Joseph Frederick Carey, Elroy Osborne LaCasce, Jr., Alan Stoddard Perry, and Robert Victor Schnabel, cum laude; Williams received High Honors in mathematics and physics, as did LaCasce in physics. Honors were awarded to Carey in history, Osher in history, Perry in economics, and Schnabel in music.

On The Campus

Music

The Department of Music has a varied and continuing program of activity and, although no formal Glee Club is possible, students are maintaining instrumental and vocal work and study.

The Choral Society, made up of undergraduates, faculty and service unit members and townspeople, resumed its weekly meetings with the beginning of the fall trimester. A public concert was given on November 8, and a presentation of The Messiah is planned for the Christmas season.

Sacred and a cappella music is presented by a Vesper Choir of twenty voices which sings at Sunday chapel services. The popular musical chapel services each Friday are supplemented by instrumental solos by undergraduates and frequent student recital programs are given in the Union.

The Concert Series opened with a lecture-concert appearance of Yves Tinayre, noted French tenor. The Curtis String Quartet festival is scheduled for November 17, 19, and 21 and two other concerts of chamber music are planned for March and April. Professor Tillotson, who assists on all these concert programs, is also coaching and directing the Meteorological Unit Band which gives regular concerts for town and college.

Evenings of recorded music on the Simpson Sound System at the Union will begin soon.

Athletics

AFTER careful consideration of the number of candidates available and of the size and amount of experience of such candidates, it was decided on October 12 to give up any hopes of having a varsity football team.

Plans are being made at the present time for the usual intramural basketball competition. Since many of the fraternities do not have enough men in college to make up teams, the White Key has made the following grouping in order to have a five team league: (1) T.D. (2) Thorndike (3)

D.K.E., Psi U. and Sigma Nu (4) Kappa Sigma, Zeta and Beta (5) D.U., Chi Psi and A.T.O. It is to be hoped that the Air Corps, the A.S.T. unit and the Naval Training unit will also be interested in playing games with the teams in this league.

Plans are underway for an indoor track meet between the three college dining groups at the T.D., the A.D. and the Chi Psi houses. A Christmas track gambol, with members of civilian and military groups competing, is also contemplated.

The White Key is organizing leagues in bowling, ping pong and bridge. Now that the dimout rules are off there is a possibility that the hockey rink may be erected for intramural games in that sport. This would relieve somewhat the pressure on the indoor facilities.

The informal varsity baseball team played a brief but successful schedule last summer and at the present time a promising cross country squad is working out. Informal varsity teams in basketball, relay and swimming are being formed in the hope that competition may be provided.

Of course the regular physical education classes are being held regularly with all students required to attend five days a week.

Bowdoin on the Air

WITH the largest membership in its history, the undergraduate Bowdoin-on-the-Air organization, under the direction of L. P. Fickett '47, has entered its third year of broadcasts over WGAN of Portland. Since publication of the last ALUMNUS there have been two broadcasts of vocal selections by Lloyd Knight '45 and John Devine '44. An August program was turned over to the Army Air Forces Technical Training units stationed at the College. Before an audience of three hundred, a fifty-piece military band, directed by Professor Frederic Tillotson, broadcast from Memorial Hall one of the most successful programs of the year. On September 1 Alan S. Perry '43 presided over an undergraduate panel discussion of post-war education. Bowdoin, represented by C. A. Hiebert '47, met Bates on the next program in a non-decision debate on the subject of continuing, after the war, the accelerated program in education. Elsewhere in this issue the ALUMNUS presents an abstract of the October 20 broadcast in which Professor Stanley P. Chase discussed the Edwin Arlington Robinson manuscripts recently presented to the College.

On October 27 Stanley D. Weinstein '47 interviewed Prince Hubertus zu Loewenstein, Visiting Professor of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace. Prince Loewenstein described the circumstances leading to his departure from Germany in 1933, the placing of a price on his head by the Nazis, and his travels since 1937 in the United States. The broadcast closed with the following statement concerning post-war Germany:

Germany must return to the principles of the Weimar Constitution freely to elect a national assembly. Hitler has been a traitor to the Constitution which he had sworn to uphold—to respect political liberty. You all know what he has done. So he and all his helpers and henchmen can and will be tried under the law of the German Republic as traitors or just as common criminals because they haven't a legal leg to stand on. They are guilty under the Constitution and under the criminal code of the German Republic. That Constitution is still valid, has been violated; but it is still the only basic law of Germany, and every German who does not want to become a traitor like the Nazis must respect that Constitution and then set up a democratic government. Necessary amendments can be made, but if it is not revived, we ourselves violate the principles of democracy. That Constitution is the only thing which separates Germany and thereby Europe from complete anarchy, and a valid Constitution cannot be replaced by forced military occupation.

Professor Robert P. T. Coffin read several of his poems in the opening November broadcast. Plans include one program of vocal numbers by Lloyd Knight and three of instrumental music by John Friedman, David Demaray, Wallace Jaffe, Stan Fredericks, Jim Curran, and Thomas Chadwick. Through the kindness of Station WGAN, the 7.45 p.m. period on alternate Wednesdays has been made available for the continuation of these Bowdoin broadcasts.

Dramatics

SINCE the start of the War, the Club has played the majority of its productions as benefits, either for the U. S. O. or the Red Cross, and has given free performances to servicemen whenever possible, off the campus as well as on. Continuing that policy, a production of a new play, "And Miles Around," written by Jack Kinnard '41, was staged in Memorial Hall on November 12 and 13, one evening a benefit performance before an audience largely of members of local service units and one for the college community.

PROFESSOR TILLOTSON AND MRS. DAGGETT

"And Miles Around" is a play of exceptional depth and feeling for so young a playwright as Kinnard. It develops the theme that a person is better off to "look life in the face" than to live on memories of lost hopes. The universality of his theme is well developed by a cast of characters who might be found anywhere, but who are none the less very real people. Since the acting required considerable interpretive ability and the rehearsal period carried over the break between the summer and fall trimesters, the student members agreed that the play should be cast from the town and faculty.

It was, however, a Bowdoin group which was selected to produce the play. Professor Frederick Tillotson and Mrs. Athern P. Daggett played the leading roles; in smaller parts Emerson Zeitler '20 and his daughter, Libby, Mrs. Harold Webb, and Mrs. Robert Morss, both wives of Bowdoin men, Miss Sylvia Hammond, daughter of the Director of Admissions, and Private Harry Oster of the Army Meteorological Unit appeared. The setting by Robert Bliss '46 with properties by Dana Little '45 merited praise. Streeter Bass '38 served as stage manager. The production was a happy blending of alumni, faculty, students, and members of the college community. Incidentally, the Community Chest Drive, which benefited substantially, was under the direction of Samuel Ladd '29.

Kinnard, now engaged in Civilian Air Defense in Porto Rico, was unable to see the production, but he was kept informed of script changes and of the audience reaction. As with his classmate, Charles Mergendahl, his future work in the theatre will bear watching. Both have come a long way since writing their first plays for the one-act contests here.

The Masque and Gown Executive Committee, now headed by Donald Koughan '45 as President, voted to open the one-act contest this year to men in the armed services on campus and to hold the contest before any of the servicemen leave. It is now expected that the plays will be presented on December 18.

James Bowdoin Day

THE third James Bowdoin Day was observed on November 3 with the entire College marching in academic procession from the Library to Memorial Hall for the exercises of the day. President Sills presided and announced the award of James Bowdoin Scholarships for 1943-44 to the following undergraduates in recognition of a high average in their courses to date or of superior work in their major departments: Class of 1944, Frank William Alger, Jr.; Class of 1945, Kenrick Martin Baker, Jr., Alan Sargent Cole, Philip Horn Hoffman, 3rd, George Johnson Kern, Donald Nash Koughan, Harold Lifshitz, William Edmund MacIntyre, Donald Robert Maxson, Lewis Thurston Miliken, Nelson Bowman Oliphant, Alfred Morris Perry, Jr., Philip Henry Philbin, Wallace Copeland Philoon, Jr., David William Ross, Lennart Sandquist, Morrill Shapiro, Myron Stephen Waks, Norman Oscar Waks; Class of 1946, George Clayton Branche, Jr., Malcolm Chamberlain, Charles Moody Crain, Conrad Anthony DeFilippis, Paul Herford Eames, Jr., Rolfe Eldridge Glover, 3rd, Frank Hardy Gordon, David Robinson Hastings, 2nd, Joseph Henry LaCasce, Frank Dana Law, Thomas Kimball Meakin, Luman Norton Nevels, Jr., Hugh Pendexter, 3rd, Clayton Frederick Reed, Richard Edward Robinson, Tom Mills Sawyer, Harold Morris Small, Jr., Arthur Abbott Terrill, David Merton Towle, Jordan Howard Wine. Many of these thirty-nine men are already in the Armed Services; three of them were present in uniform. The following undergraduates, having maintained an "A" record throughout two consecutive trimesters, were presented with a book bearing the plate of the Honorable James Bowdoin: Class of 1944, John Ellsworth Hess, Hyman Louis Osher, Ross Edward Williams; Class of 1945, Kenrick Martin Baker, Jr., William Edmund MacIntyre, Norman Oscar Waks; Class of 1946 Charles Moody Crain, Clayton Frederick Reed. President Sills observed that the College, in maintaining the award of the James Bowdoin Scholarships in these war years, was again affirming her faith in the lasting values of high academic achievement. Donald Nash Koughan '45 gave the undergraduate response.

Dr. Frank Pierrepont Graves, formerly Commissioner of Education of the State of New York, gave the address, "An Aristocracy of Service." With frequent reference to Bowdoin as a typical example, Dr. Graves pointed out that the liberal arts college is a uniquely American institution with an established record for the development of leadership and that in a large measure the future of our democracy depends upon the steady supply of capable students, selected in a democratic manner, for training in our colleges.

For three weeks during October Prince Hubertus zu Loewenstein was in residence at the College as visiting professor under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. For this very brief period he was a valued part of the College. He lived at the Beta House, took his meals for one week at each of the three dining-rooms, and through classroom talks and public lectures, and in hundreds of personal conversations and fraternity house discussions came into contact with almost all the members of the various groups that make up the Bowdoin of today.

In recent years the College frequently has had the advantage of the presence of distinguished visitors who have come to the campus under the auspices of one or another of the great endowments. Prince Hubertus was notably successful in carrying on the tradition which they have established. His formative university years lay in the period when the Weimar Republic was struggling to establish itself. He was at Hamburg University at the same time as our own Professor Koelln. Although a member of the former ruling family of Bavaria, he early threw his lot in with the young Republic, became a member of the Reichsbanner, was a leader of the Republican youth movement, and after 1933, when Hitler came into power, went into exile. Today he is a citizen of Czechoslovakia through the personal interest of President Benes. He came to the United States first in 1935 and since 1937 has been engaged in his present work under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment.

While he was in Brunswick Prince Hubertus was generous with his time and effort. He talked frequently to the classes in the departments of government and history. He spent one afternoon with the advanced German seminar. He spoke at one of the regular chapel services and was interviewed on the Bowdoin on the Air program over WGAN. He gave two public lectures in the unexpectedly crowded lounge of the Moulton Union. In On Borrowed Peace he traced the rise of Fascism and the coming of war, and in The Second Front in Germany he discussed the situation inside the Nazi realm today. Among his most successful appearances were his addresses to the three army units studying at the College. One of them, scheduled for an hour, turned into a three-hour discussion period. Even with this crowded schedule he found time to respond to invitations to address various "off-campus" groups. This busy program was set in the context of countless informal discussions with faculty and students.

It was a crowded and successful stay. The faculty found him a skillful expositor who could give to old problems new clarity, the students found him a provocative and stimulating conversationalist, quick to upset established preconception and to suggest new approaches to puzzling problems, and the public found him a charming and engrossing lecturer. It was with real regret that the College saw him depart for a brief two days' respite before taking up his task again at the University of Vermont

When the Department of English at Columbia tendered a dinner to W. W. Lawrence (Bowdoin '98) upon his completion of twenty-five years of teaching in the University, President Sills remarked to the guest of honor that it takes forty years at Bowdoin to qualify for such a tribute. "Well," replied Lawrence, "twenty-five years seem like forty in New York!"

In the 141 years of Bowdoin's active history, ten men have rounded out forty years as members of the Faculty. It has been a pleasant custom to observe such anniversaries by a dinner in honor of the colleague reaching this mile-stone. Last May, Roscoe James Ham, George Taylor Files Professor of Modern Languages, completed his fortieth year at Bowdoin. Actually, Mr. Ham came to the Faculty in 1901, but his term of service was broken by his transfer in 1907 to a sister college, from which he did us the favor to return after only two years. What with rationing and an overcrowded Union, a dinner was too difficult to arrange, and the Faculty contented itself with tendering its senior active member a picnic luncheon, at Pickard Field House, on September 4th.

Jointly with Professor Ham, a recipient of honors was Paul Nixon, in recognition of his twenty-five years' tenure of the Deanship. Lest the very large turn-out of colleagues should not be deemed sufficiently conclusive evidence, the Faculty presented to each of the guests a scroll signed by all members and expressing esteem, admiration, and affection. The testimonial to Professor Ham had been turned into German by Fritz Koelln, that to Dean Nixon into Latin by Tom Means (with a few enlivening additions); and the two translations were read by their respective makers. An extremely interesting, reminiscent response by Mr. Ham and a characteristic ebullition of wit, sentiment, and mischief from the Dean filled a very memorable, heart-warming hour. An additional source of pleasure was the presence of Lieutenant-Colonel Van Cleve, Private Abrahamson '26, and Professor Edward B. Ham '22.

On Monday, October 25, the College was shocked and saddened by the death of Professor Arthur C. Gilligan, for eighteen years a member of the Department of Romance Languages. Representatives of the Faculty, members of the Governing Boards and a delegation from the Bowdoin Club of Boston attended the simple but impressive services held in Natick, Mass., on Thursday, October 28. At noon of that day the entire College assembled at the Chapel for a Memorial Service. In his memorial address, President Sills said in part: "We are gathered here today to do honor to the memory of a fine teacher and a good man . . . Devoting himself with singleness of heart and great ability to the quiet, important duties of instructing youth, his life was bound up completely in Bowdoin . . . He insisted with quiet, and at times with intense, firmness on high standards of accomplishment from his students. Whatever esteem this College may have in the academic world for the maintenance of scholarly work is due to him and to others like him . . . Beneath his New England reserve there was a deep, if unexpressed, sympathy for youth . . . He really lived for, and by, his students . . . That he should die still young, as maturity reckons age, at the full height of his intellectual powers, is one of those mysteries with which life is filled . . . His grateful College can bear witness to the effectiveness of his service and to the faithfulness and loyalty of his spirit."

A colleague's tribute to Professor Gilligan appears elsewhere in this issue.

On out-of-state driver's attempt, on September 23, to mix gasoline with alcohol was the cause of an accident which might easily have had more serious results. Proceeding on his bicycle near the Church on the Hill, Professor Thomas Means was struck and painfully injured. Although knocked unconscious and hospitalized with numerous cuts and bruises, Professor Means was able to resume his classes with the opening of the fall trimester. In the words of another famous Connecticut Yankee, he states that the reports of his demise "were grossly exaggerated."

LT. COL. VAN CLEVE AND PVT. ABRAHAMSON

On August 31, the yard of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation was filled with notables—governors, congressmen, senators, consuls, generals, admirals, and Bowdoin men. It was a big day for the NESBC, for it marked the award of the M pennant, signifying meritorious service in the war effort by the company and its employees. The day was meaningful for Bowdoin men, too, for one of the ships launched was the S. S. William DeWitt Hyde, named for the famed seventh president of the College and sponsored by Mrs. George Hyde, wife of President Hyde's son. Most numerous of the groups to greet President and Mrs. Sills and Mr. and Mrs. Hyde was the delegation from 1916, for that class had generously undertaken to supply the new ship with a framed portrait of President Hyde and a library of 150 carefully chosen volumes as well as a good collection of games. A specially designed bookplate, featuring the Chapel, was placed in each book. Among the volumes were several from President Hyde's personal library, the gift of his son, an autographed copy of "Hyde of Bowdoin," presented by Dr. Charles T. Burnett, and a rare copy of "Seawall Ships," contributed by John Robie. Following the launching, members of 1916 and their families were entertained at luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Sayward. The S. S. Hyde is now reported to have been loaned to the Greek government.

no football at Bowdoin this fall and intercollegiate competition for all teams is virtually non-existent but there is athletic activity and a few more or less informal teams will represent the College this fall and winter. The Orient, the Quill, the Masque and Gown, Bowdoin-On-The-Air, the Choir, the Student Council, the White Key and other traditional expressions of Bowdoin undergraduate life continue limited but virile programs. Entirely separate from military trainees in classroom and in their campus living, 150 students are truly preserving in active status the Bowdoin life which will expand and resume speed when the war's conclusion sends undergraduates, old and new, back to Brunswick.

Among the October freshmen are the following Bowdoin sons: Frederick B. Auten (Meredith B. Auten '12), David Cole (Philip P. Cole '12), Stanley F. Dole, Jr. (Stanley F. Dole '13), Fred I. E. Ferris (William F. Ferris '22), Lendall W. Hayes (Harold M. Hayes '14), Roland D. Mann (Roland W. Mann '92), Robert R. Schonland, Jr. (Robert R. Schonland '21), Philip S. Smith, Jr. (Philip S. Smith '15), Roger N. Walker (Thomas B. Walker '06).

About December 1 there will come from the press the 1943-44 edition of the Bowdoin College catalog—a new and better Bowdoin catalog—which is the work of an able committee. Its chairman, Professor Herbert Ross Brown of the English Department, has acted as editor-in-chief and has produced a notable volume.

In view of the fact that the College is completing its 150th year of corporate existence in June, 1944, the catalog has been designed to celebrate this event. It will present quite a departure from Bowdoin's catalogs of years past: the format and type have been changed, the somewhat forbidding black cover abandoned, and for the first time in an annual catalog of Bowdoin College, illustrations have been used, adding noticeably to the attractiveness of the volume.

The contents of the volume have been entirely rearranged, rewritten, and to some extent enlarged. President Sills has contributed a foreword calling to the attention of the reader Bowdoin's sesquicentennial; Professor Chase has written a brief history of the College; and from Professor Kirkland's pen comes a discussion of the liberal arts curriculum.

The course offerings of the various departments have been worked out with great care in order that students, present or prospective, may plan their courses for the three trimesters beginning on February 7, June 12, and October 9, 1944 respectively.

Congratulations to Professor Brown for a distinguished achievement which will be of great interest to Bowdoin men of the past, present, and future!

Bowdoin's 142nd academic year began with the opening of the fall trimester on October 7. The forty-five entering members of the Class of 1947, two transfers, four special students and returning June freshmen and upperclassmen made a civilian student enrollment of 159. As was the case during the summer session, uniformed groups at the College numbered about 700.

So again Bowdoin carries on its liberal arts course with a student group which, though heavily outnumbered by the military, is keeping alive and functioning the fraternity groups and most undergraduate extra-curricular activities. Although no fraternity enjoys the exclusive use of its chapter house and members of two groups are unable to use their houses at all, all charters are alive. There exist at Bowdoin eleven operating chapters of eleven national fraternities. There is

Arthur Chew Gilligan

AT Harvard Arthur Chew Gilligan had a brilliant scholarly career. As an undergraduate he was one of the distinguished small group annually elected from the Junior Class to Phi Beta Kappa; as a graduate student he won the cherished distinction of a Sheldon Fellowship. This award gave him a year of study in France whose language and literature had long since become his chief intellectual interest. It was from this Harvard experience that he largely drew his concepts of literature and life. In his senior year he came under the influence of Professor Irving Babbitt, the apostle of humanism. Undoubtedly Babbitt's devotion to the classical in literature and his insistence upon a doctrine of self-discipline and order appealed to something in the young Harvard senior. Babbitt strengthened Gilligan's natural inclination to conservative thought and to traditional values. Backed by Harvard and humanism, he inevitably regarded students not as boys but as men; through their own efforts they made their own destinies. It was not the duty of a teacher or an educational institution to coddle the weak or indifferent. Finally Harvard provided his way of life. The hours of study deep into the early morning, the late breakfasts with oceans of coffee, the green cloth bookbag—all were a piece of Harvard Square and the Yard carried intact to our northern campus.

He was a wide and perceptive reader of modern French literature. The unusual distinction of the library resources of the College in this field is a result of his interest and selection. But he naturally found his greatest satisfaction in the classical age of French letters. His edition of twelve Molière plays, edited in collaboration with F. K. Turgeon '23, while an evidence of his erudition in this field, also revealed his wider enthusiasm for the drama and theatre. Here, although a scholar, he went beyond books. The moving picture never permanently pleased him. Rather he was an omniverous theatre goer. In the days when the old Copley Theatre gave Shaw, Pinero, and Ibsen he was a weekly occupant of the gallery; he saw a Cohan musical comedy fifteen times; in Chicago he became an informed lover of the opera; and in Paris he went time and time again to the Comédie Française where he absorbed every detail of stagecraft and production. A few years ago when the Bowdoin faculty played Tartuffe and the high school mounted a Molière play or two, it was Arthur Gilligan who provided the authentic touches of stage business and interpretation. That amateurs did the plays aroused his delight; their performances won his generous appreciation.

Faculty meetings, which he gradually came to regard as an amusing drama of human frailty, he attended with regularity, but he rarely spoke. When he did his pithy interpositions were usually effective. Some have become legendary. To the work of the Recording Committee, the fundamental administrative committee of which he was long a member, he brought an inflexible insistence upon academic standards, a memory versed in past procedures, and an unusual ability to foresee the intricate implications of policy. That he not infrequently was a minority of one, did not disturb him. The classroom was his kingdom. One of his favorite opening gambits: "You may not like me, gentlemen, most people do not", no doubt startled hearers used to more appealing approaches. Nor were they long in discovering that stupidity tried his patience and indolence or irresponsibility stirred him to vigorous disapproval. But even the most undiscerning undergraduate gradually realized that here was a master who knew his subject to the last precise detail, had organized it systematically, and presented it with forceful clarity and magisterial authority. Only more advanced students were in a position to appreciate that his learning, never stagnant, was constantly refreshed by a wide reading of the latest research. To any young man who showed a spark of interest in the subject or a desire for his own improvement, Arthur Gilligan gave of his time and energy without calculation.

He had a passion for excellence. Once in commendation of a colleague, he remarked "everything he does, he does well." It was a statement also of his own aspirations. Matters which seemed to him unimportant, he dismissed. But whatever he chose to be—thoughtful guest, skillful bridge player, or able scholar and teacher, he did well. To the achievement of excellence he added a strong sense of duty. It was characteristic of him that during his last sickness he worried lest he was cutting classes, which he loved to boast he never missed; lest his colleagues have to carry his work; and lest in some obscure fashion he was failing the college into whose life he had devotedly built his own.

EDWARD C. KIRKLAND

in the woods, the islands in the bays. . . . One spring, hunting for arbutus, I saw a narrow road between tall trees. It must have been a woods road once for taking timber out. The obvious comparison was a cathedral aisle, so, of course, I thought of that. Quietly, I stood there for several minutes, and as I looked a young deer passed. . . . I gathered my arbutus, and walked on down the aisle to where it seemed to end, and came upon an open place, a clearing in the woods, where apple trees were in full bloom. Long ago an orchard had been planted there, for beside the blossoming trees many dead ones stood. It was a lovely sight, great bouquets of bloom in gnarled hands. . . . When you come upon such trees within the woods, they take on a beauty which seems not of this world. It is the lost, the hidden quality, that moves me most."

This is truly poetic recognition, and similar insight runs like light through the book, shining on men, places, people, and events. We recommend to you the chapter about Missy and the Goose, the story of a friendship with a very old neighbor woman who knew how to get along with the mother of many little wild geese. But do not expect sequence in this book. It begins anywhere, and at first you wonder just what year of her life near Bunganuc the author is writing about; but soon the picture gets clear, and one by one, all sides of country life throng into the story: the grange meeting, the muddy roads of spring, the Topsham fair, the nice nearness of Bowdoin, the multiplication of the perennials, the beauty of old houses, the Pond Island picnic with Bob Coffin, and the arrival of Miss Graham, whose chapter is appropriately named, "The Baby Changes Everything."

Also Mrs. Graham is a very funny woman, good for quite a lot of laughs. Her husband refers to her, she writes, as the Belle of Bunganuc, and I can well see why. My favorite episode in the book is her chat with a Brunswick vegetable clerk, Clydie by name, with whom she intimately planned a rather stinking menu for Mr. Graham's dinner because she was mad at him that day. This Clydie suggested as dinner dishes for her David his most decayed and rotten commodities—which cooperation impresses me. Why don't more stores offer this type of service to oppressed wives?

AGNES BURKE HALE

PHILIP E. BURNHAM '34, M.A., Instructor in English at Harvard (and Radcliffe), is one of the six English A staff members who have compiled Readings for Citizens at War. Under the editorial direction of Professor Theodore Morrison, this new anthology, published by Harper, has already found a wide public, especially among students in uniform. Sections of the book embrace: I. Observation of America; II. American Documents and Problems; III. Science; IV. Thinking; V. The Future. The selections range from Franklin and Jefferson to Benchley and E. B. White.—Not an advt.

Solid Geometry and Spherical Trigonometry, by HENRY L. C. LEIGHTON, M.A. '25, has recently been issued by the Van Nostrand Company. Leighton, following his graduate work at Harvard, became an instructor in mathematics at Tufts and since 1931 has been a member of the mathematics department at Phillips Exeter Academy.

Alumni Associations And Clubs

The Bowdoin Teachers' Club met jointly with the Penobscot County Bowdoin Club at the Penobscot Exchange Hotel in Bangor on Thursday evening, October 28. About fifty attended. Professor Herbert R. Brown and Professor Athern P. Daggett '25 represented the College. They spoke of the successful effort being made to maintain the liberal arts course, entirely separate from the training being given to military and naval students, and urged Alumni cooperation in interesting preparatory school students to attend college before being called to service. Present officers of both clubs were re-elected.

BOSTON

The largest group of members in recent years gathered at the University Club, Friday, November 19, for the fall meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Boston. About 125 responded to the call of Huntington Blatchford '29, Secretary and William P. Sawyer '36, Treasurer who were the committee of arrangements. James F. Claverie '10, President of the Club presented Dean Paul Nixon and paid tribute to his more than twenty-five years as Bowdoin's Dean. Stating that the experiment of the College with under draft age boys had proved itself valuable to the boys as well as to the College, the Dean described the Bowdoin of today and recited many instances of heroism and sacrifice on the part of Bowdoin men in the war. The enthusiastic applause which followed his classic outline of what Bowdoin meant to him "and to all other loyal Bowdoin men" was prolonged when Albert T. Gould '08, Trustee of the College, presented to the Dean a fine briar pipe which was "to remind him that the members of the Bowdoin Club of Boston knew that Bowdoin was just as much a part of him as he was of Bowdoin." Introduced also was Harry Trust '16, President of the Alumni Council, Dwight Seward '16, Chairman of the Directors of the Alumni Fund, Seward Marsh '12, Alumni Secretary and James A. Doubleday '41 who told of his fourteen months with the American Field Service in North Africa. E. Curtis Matthews '10 led cheering and singing. Plans were announced for an informal Ladies' Night to be held soon.

CLEVELAND

President Sills was the guest of the Bowdoin Club of Cleveland at a luncheon held on Monday, October 11. He described the Bowdoin of today and urged members to continue their valued and vital help in interesting under-draft age boys in Bowdoin. Present officers were re-elected, President John B. Hickox '34, Secretary, Donald McKay Smith '35. The Secretary, whose address is Oakhurst Circle, Brecksville, Ohio, would like to hear from any Bowdoin man who has recently come to the Cleveland area. Present at the meeting were Samuel W. Chase '14, Brainerd L. Adams '15, Edward B. Finn '19, Lee M. Butler '22, Lester D. Hayes '26, Paul Fitzgibbon '28, Leon Ziesel '30, Hallett P. Foster '33 and Donald M. Smith '35.

PORTLAND

Sixty members of the Bowdoin Club of Portland met for a chowder supper at the Portland Club on Wednesday, November 10 to honor their guest and chief speaker, Dean Nixon, upon his completion of twenty-five years as Bowdoin's Dean. On behalf of the club members, President Warren D. Eddy '14 presented a specially bound appropriately marked copy of Webster's Dictionary "to replace the worn and out-dated copy which has adorned your office for too many years." Accepting the gift with warm thanks, the Dean outlined campus life today, recited many instances of wartime unselfish sacrifice among Bowdoin Alumni, appealed for help in interesting under draft age students and closed with a stirring statement of what Bowdoin meant to him. Other speakers were Seward J. Marsh '12, Alumni Secretary, Lt. Col. Raymond Lang, Chaplain of the Portland Harbor Defenses and Coach Adam Walsh. Following an amusing account of his present duties in the Department of Physical Education, Coach Walsh showed pictures of last year's championship football team.

He stated that for the first time in many college generations, Bowdoin has no football team and added that, also for the first time, "Bowdoin's team would be unbeaten, untied and unscored-upon."

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Mr. Robert S. Hartman of the State Chamber of Commerce spoke on "War Time Washington." The club's officers were re-elected.

The next meeting will be at the Ontra Cafeteria on Monday evening, January 10, 1944. William R. Spinney '13, who is arranging the program, is very anxious that Bowdoin men in the vicinity, particularly men now in the service, contact him at 433 South Spring Street, Los Angeles—Telephone Madison 2311—and plan to attend.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS

The Association of Western Massachusetts held a luncheon meeting at the Hotel Sheraton, Springfield, on Thursday, September 2. The Alumni Secretary was the speaker. President Blunt was authorized to appoint a secretary to succeed H. P. Chapman, Jr. '30, who is now in Service, and a committee to arrange the December 10 meeting with President Sills. Among those present were James P. Blunt '31, John L. Crosby '10, John D. Churchill '16, Louis W. Doherty '19, J. Maxim Ryder '21, Warren E. Barker '22, Philip H. Bisson '23, Robert A. Studley '32, and John F. Jenkisson '33. Plans were made to discover Bowdoin men newly located in the vicinity and to accelerate the club's activity in interesting prospective students in Bowdoin. A dinner meeting is scheduled for December 10, when President Sills will be the speaker.

WORCESTER

Eighteen members of the Worcester Bowdoin Club were present at the dinner meeting on Wednesday, September 1. President Paul H. Wilson, Jr. '38 introduced Dr. Joseph O. Genereux M'84, who spoke interestingly of his student days sixty years ago, and Seward J. Marsh '12, Alumni Secretary, who described the College under war conditions. Officers elected for 1943-44 are: President, William D. Ireland '16; Vice President, Percy D. Mitchell '14; Secretary-Treasurer, Cloyd E. Small '20; Acting Secretary, Harold Ashey '12. The Club pledged its support to the College in a telegram to President Sills. Others present were: Linwood M. Erskine '07, Carl D. Skillin '12, Robert E. Bodurtha '15, Philip S. Smith '15, G. C. Genereux '21, Paul Sibley '25, Wayne Sibley '26, J. Harold Stubbs '26, Allen L. Fiske '28, Lawrence B. Hunt '29, Elmer B. Drew '30, and Henry O. Smith '45.

The College continues its war time policy of awarding scholarships three times during the year at the beginning of each trimester. This fall a total of more than $6,000 was announced.

Kling Scholarships were awarded to: Kenrick M. Baker, Jr. '45, Brockton, Mass.; Philip H. Philbin '45, Lowell, Mass.; Tom M. Sawyer '46, Fort Fairfield, Maine.

The Stanley Plummer Award was given to Frank H. Gordon '46, Dexter, Maine.

Where There's A Will There's A Way To Help Bowdoin College

The College has received notice of the following legacies:

$2,000 from Kate M. Lancaster in memory of her father, John Colby Manson of the Medical Class of 1853 and her brother, John William Manson of the Class of 1881, with no restrictions as to its use.

$5,000 from the estate of Susan H. Lane in memory of her brother, John Vessey Lane of the Class of 1887, "to aid in paying tuition for needy students."

From the Mail Bag

... For the time being college days are over, but for the time I was there, I think it did me a lot of good. As soon as you say "college," they look at you a little more closely; but when you say "Bowdoin," you're in. We have been having a lot of calisthenics here, but after drilling under Neil Mahoney, this exercise is child's play...

... We were spending a few days in Jerusalem and one evening we went to a movie as the blackout forced us indoors. The theatre gave two performances that evening and sold reserved seats for each. We attended the second show, and while waiting for the picture to begin, we were treated to some recorded music which was brought to us over the loud speaker system. Lo and behold, weren't we surprised when both "Bowdoin Beata" and "Rise Sons of Bowdoin" were played before the house which was packed. I looked around to see if I had any loyal friends in the audience, but there were none to be seen. It was painfully evident that I alone had the singular privilege of bathing in memories not too far removed...

—1941

... For two weeks we were quartered in the famous Cathedral of Learning, a campus "up in the air" (forty-two stories), rather than spread out over the ground—thanks, but I'll take Bowdoin... You might be interested to know the method of teaching the languages, although you're undoubtedly well-acquainted with it already. There is no emphasis upon grammar or script, but rather, the entire method is conversational. I think it could be compared to learning to play the piano by ear—sort of a parrot-like idea; but surprisingly enough, it really works.

—1945

... It certainly would be wonderful to be coming back this fall, and like all the fellows who are away from Bowdoin, I am anxiously waiting for the day when we finish our job and can take up where we left off. Yes, I'd really like to be making out my sophomore study schedule and to be fooling around in the cage with Jack Magee. But then, who wouldn't?

... I endure for a lot of little things, but there aren't any fancy phrases for them. That old tommy-rot about "saving the world"... is for the peasants... it is not for me... let someone else have the "war to end all wars"... all I want is to finish this one and come home to important things like ducking scholastic pro and finding a way to carry an extra course in Art... I don't want to "sweep the Seven Seas."

—1942

... I frankly used to think the talk we heard about Bowdoin as a liberal college being a stronghold of clear thinking and the like was a lot of self-inflating hot air. I find that it isn't. By association with lads from every type of collegiate background, I must say that Bowdoin gives a man more intellectual integrity than is generally encountered.

—1938

... I saw the letter you sent to my father concerning his promotion. He is still the best Bowdoin man I have ever known, and I shall be happy if I can bring as much honor to the College as he, for contribution cannot be measured in terms of fame alone. His has been a life full of service to a cause too often neglected in the present tenor of events.

—1943

... It is different from civilian life of course, but it's not really tough. It's just what the name "indoctrination" implies—a kind of a breaking into Navy life and routine, giving us some kind of an idea of what we may expect, and also making us actually feel like officers. It's amazing how much self-assurance I picked up in just a week—insofar as wearing a uniform goes. I had to report in uniform, so to save baggage I wore it from home. I felt as if everyone knew I'd just put it on. This weekend I went into New York, and practically forgot that I had it on. As a matter of fact, that's the exact reason why indoctrinal schools were established in the first place.

... The food is wholesome, but invariably takes on the aspect of Irish stew whether it be fish or fowl... I made the small bore rifle team, and only hope that I can do as well with the M1 (Garand). As you probably know, the Marine standard of qualification is very high with this weapon. We shoot for record in four days, and anyone who makes expert does not have to go on mess duty. With such a prize, you can well realize my hopes.

—1945

... We had quite a time singing Bowdoin songs while we were shoveling snow at Devens.

—1943

... Quite some time ago I started on a long flight that eventually took me much further and for a longer time than I had anticipated. The airplane was flying over a heavy overcast. Suddenly there was a hole in the clouds and directly below was the Bowdoin Campus with the familiar chapel spires. It was my last glimpse of America for quite a long time—and a very satisfying glimpse that is not likely to be soon forgotten.

—1921

... I spent my happiest days at Bowdoin, and I hate to see any boy, war or no war, miss the opportunity.

—1936

... Letters are very valuable in this country. One never knows the real worth of a word from home till they are thousands of miles removed.

Of course I am far too old for this type of war. I should be home behind a desk. However, I can't seem to make anyone think that way, and to be truthful, I am pleased that I can't. Jungles, mountains, and tropics are not too easy for an old man. There are days when it seems, you can't possibly make the objectives. However, you pull up your belt and your chin and dig in. Somehow you make it and then you feel pretty good.

The other day, I was inspecting one of my outposts. It involved walking a catwalk then climbing a banyan tree up to a "crow's nest." In talking to two of my intelligence men who were on the outpost, I found that one of them was a graduate of Carnegie Tech and the other a graduate of Mississippi State. We have some swell boys in this unit, who are interested in only one thing and that, the winning of this war.

No one likes war, yet it brings you splendid contacts and life-long friendships that you would never make in any other work. You learn the real worth of real men. The weaklings are quickly weeded out.

Tell Jack Magee that I broke the world's record for one hundred yards a few weeks ago. Although I had no stop watch, I think I made it in about 4 4/5 seconds. The course was from an open space along the coast to the nearest ditch. I didn't have a favorable wind, but I did have a lot of encouragement from the sky.

I am very happy to hear that Bowdoin, as always, is doing its part in the emergency work. More power to her and may she continue the great work.

... We are all very "air conscious." We have two real dangers, Jap bombs and falling cocoanuts. Of the two, the cocoanuts rate pretty high.

The night before Christmas I had a patrol some thirty miles from our base camp. Just at dusk we made camp in a beautiful valley, hemmed in by towering mountain peaks. After we made camp and put out our security, I called the boys together and told them we would have an hour of singing Christmas carols. After singing Christmas carols for a time, I started to teach the boys the chorus of "Bowdoin Beata." In twenty minutes "Bowdoin Beata" was echoing through the hills with magnificent volume, if not great beauty. As we were singing it, I could not help from wondering if "Bowdoin Beata" was ever sung as far away from the college. "Bowdoin Beata" has become very popular with the boys now; they sing it a great deal.

... I am operations officer at the Naval Air Station here. One day we received a crash alarm, so after we had flown to the scene and rescued the personnel, we returned to the station to organize a salvage party to determine the feasibility of bringing the plane out of the swamps.

After we had made our way out of the swamp, we were almost prostrated from thirst so we hurried to a little beer joint we had noticed on the side of the road. They had no beer because of the transportation bottlenecks, but they had some ice-cold "Doctor Pepper," a local carbonated drink. While we were being served, I saw a postcard-sized picture on the wall that looked very familiar to me. The more I looked the more certain I became. Even the trees and foliage looked familiar. Finally I said to the girl, "Do you know what that picture is?" "Certainly," she replied, "that's Massachusetts Hall at Bowdoin College in Maine."

... This job isn't my ideal; sometimes I would give my eye-teeth for my brother's background in physics. I am able to console myself with the thought that someone must repair the equipment and someone in the company must be a private. That latter honor goes to the late-comers, I guess. While waiting for a break, I am doing the best I can as a repairman and looking forward to a big Bowdoin Commencement in 1945.

... Sorry I can't report that I have a Navy Cross, but rather I must say I am among those "who also serve."

—1930

Maxwell Ascher Eaton

ANYONE who knew Max Eaton will not easily forget his spirit and character, but it is fitting that he should be remembered by some printed words, in the old way of memorial. His humor and gaiety and his gift for mimicry were the most open signals of his disposition. "My friends," he would begin, in President Roosevelt's manner, and immediately all were his friends. And it was not a case of friends just for the moment of brilliant parody: it can be said of Max, as of few of us, that everyone liked him, all of the time. He was a good man on a party, and he was a good man in between times. He worked hard at his studies, he worked hard at keeping himself in good physical condition, and he was sensibly interested in the processes of history and the problems of democracy. Thus Max succeeded in striking an enviable balance between wit and wisdom in recognizing the tenuous difference between individual foibles and human frailties in general.

Long before Bowdoin or the United States went to war, Max Eaton had joined the Navy. Without any selfish considerations of his qualifications, he went to enlist as an apprentice seaman, for any duty, but found that he was well fitted to be a pilot in naval aviation. After training, he was sent to a dive-bombing squadron and ended up on the Ranger, one of the two war-horse carriers that have survived all their engagements in this war. He assisted in the African invasion; I have seen an official Navy photograph of Max dive-bombing the enemy fleet at Casablanca. He has (posthumously) been given the Navy Cross, one of the highest military awards, in recognition of his work. Subsequently he participated in the Ranger's assignments all over the seas.

His squadron thought well of him, for he was a good pilot as well as a good boy to have around. I had occasion to fly with him twice, and a quirk of fate that kept us on the ground both times gave me added respect for his flying ability. Once he decided not to take off on account of weather, and once he was not satisfied with the performance of his engine for take-off conditions. Such a caution fills a back-seat driver with a very real gratitude.

And such a knowledgeable caution makes it difficult to imagine just what happened to Max on his fatal accident. During air operations on April 17, 1943, he had a forced landing in a very heavy sea. Planes and ships scoured the area and picked up his gunner-radioman, but they had to give up Max for lost. That's all there is to the officially released facts. But if one submits his imagination to the old nightmare of a forced landing into the deceptive trough of unfriendly waves, one can see what a good job Max must have done to allow his gunner to get out safely.

Recently, a similar accident happened to Nile Kinnick, the excellent athlete and student from Iowa. For hours we went over the area where he went down, but finally had to give up the search. That night I heard a pilot say, "Nile's not lost; we know where he is." And I don't think that Max Eaton was lost in one of those grey-green Atlantic swells. We know where he is. He is in our hearts.

On these pages are listed the names of all Bowdoin men who, on November 15, 1943, were known to be or to have been in the several armed services of World War II. Without doubt the list is incomplete. It has been compiled from letters of Bowdoin men and of their friends and relatives, from newspaper reports and from official naval and military communications, but we are confident that many Bowdoin men have so far failed to report their participation to the Alumni Office. The College Service Flag now proudly carries the number 1908—indicating that nearly thirty per cent of living Bowdoin men are in service.

Rank and branch of service are also shown as they appear on the Service records in the Alumni Office. The continued help of Alumni and their families is asked that these records may be complete and up to date.

In a constant endeavor to observe censorship rules, the ALUMNUS does not publish information which might indicate the whereabouts of military and naval units. Known service addresses of Bowdoin men are omitted. But, although home addresses have been found to be best for most Alumni Office mailings, many service addresses are in the Office records. We shall be glad to supply such available addresses as Alumni may want or to remail correspondence for them.

Necrology

1877 A report of the death of CHARLES LENDOL NICKERSON in Garden City, Minn., November 19, 1942 has just reached the College. He was born February 2, 1854 in Dorchester, Mass. In 1880 he was instructor of mathematics and natural science in the Classical and Scientific Academy in Hall-owell. Three years later, because of ill health, he resigned and moved to Garden City, Minn., where he served as superintendent and principal of the high school. In 1884 he left the teaching profession to become a farmer. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1877 CHARLES BAILEY SEABURY died November 7, in St. Petersburg, Fla. He was born in Gardiner, February 5, 1857. After graduation from Bowdoin he was in business with his father until 1879 when he became principal of Gardiner High School. After six years of teaching, he became a salesman, later working in investments. His home was in Boonton, N. J. He was a member of Psi Upsilon.

1881 CARROLL EVERETT HARDING, a native of Machias, died October 18, in Baltimore, Md., after a week's illness. He was born August 23, 1860. Coming to Bowdoin from Hallowell Academy, he was editor of the Orient, winner of prizes in Latin and Greek and a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity. In 1855 he was graduated from the General Episcopal Seminary in New York, receiving his Bachelor of Divinity degree from there three years later. Following service in several Maine parishes he became rector of the Chapel of Canton in Baltimore, Md. In 1893, after four years in Omaha, Neb., and Medina, Ohio, he returned to Baltimore and in 1898 became rector of the Church of Epiphany. He retired after more than forty years of active service and at the age of eighty he was made Rector Honorarius.

1881 After a long period of retirement due to physical disability, ALBION QUINCY ROGERS died August 10 at his home in Pembroke, the place of his birth on December 21, 1860. Following his graduation from Bowdoin, where he was a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity and active in athletics, he returned to his home town as principal of the high school. Later he entered the law office of his uncle and successfully passing the bar examinations, moved to Minneapolis, Minn., where he served as Clerk of Courts. He enlisted for service in the Spanish-American War, attaining the rank of captain in a Minnesota Artillery unit. At the close of the war an attack of rheumatic fever so affected his hearing and vision as to make further legal practice impractical. He returned to Pembroke where he was prominent in town activities until his death.

1888 COL. JOHN STUART BARROWS died in Fryeburg November 14, at the age of 78. Born in Fryeburg, he graduated from the Academy in 1884 and entered Bowdoin the same year. After leaving College, he entered newspaper work, being connected with the Congregationalist for several years before becoming associated with the Boston Journal. In 1910 he joined the staff of the Boston Transcript and continued in the editorial department of that paper until illness caused him to retire in 1935. At that time he returned to Fryeburg. He served as personal aide to two Massachusetts governors, Calvin Coolidge and Channing Cox. Very much interested in history, he wrote a history of Fryeburg and is author of A Son of Old Ironsides. For nearly forty years, from 1899 to 1938, he served as overseer of the College. He was also director of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company, treasurer of the Congregational and Missionary Society of Maine, for fifteen years treasurer of Washington Academy and an office holder in the MacMillan Arctic Association, the Economic Club and Rotary Club of Portland. FOREWORD

I do not recall what the conditions of life were when the College was taken over by the Army in World War I, as I was far away at that time, but certainly the present tri-party alliance with the Army and Navy impresses an old-time civilian with a sense of awe, uncertainty, and a you're-not-at-home feeling that is difficult to overcome.

In my freshman year, I learned to be on the lookout for water bags dropped from dormitory windows, but the sense of uncertainty of life and happiness then was nothing to that of today. The naval ensigns (students of radar) come and go with the celerity of their "greased lightning." One has a feeling of pity for the boys who are getting their basic army training here. The constant drone of the planes overhead induces an apprehensive idea of being launched into the "sweet by-and-by," p.d.q.

Senator Brewster and his four colleagues have returned from their round-the-world inspection of U.S. war fronts. I wish we could hear him recount his experiences and his impressions. His son, Capt. Charles '37, met him in Africa, and accompanied the senators on their North African trip. Don Marshall '27 of the Medical Corps and George Bass '37, Navy.

Senator Harold Burton of Ohio made a four-day speaking tour in Connecticut during the congressional recess in September in behalf of international co-operation as advocated in the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill Resolution of which he was a co-author.

There are little pieces of America spotted all over the globe today. Places where men from Chicago and Dallas and Waukegan and Padunk have turned jungle or desert or polar ice into busy airports for the Air Transport Command.

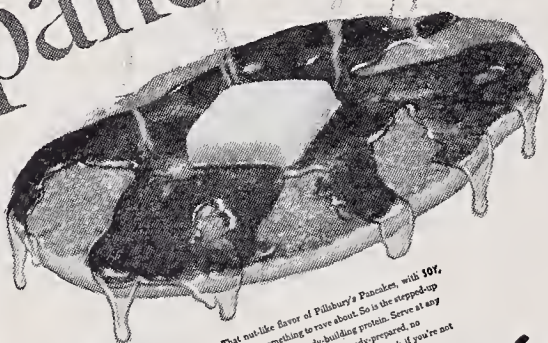

Here is the key to America's swift mastery of warfare's need to get critical men and materials from one critical place on the earth to another.

No one may tell—yet!—what a host of these airports there are, nor how quickly and ingeniously they were created.

But now is not too early for a special salute to the men who did the job—men of our commercial airlines, now in military service, who dropped their peacetime tasks to throw muscle and brain and matchless "know-how" into this call of war.

The spirit which went into their share of America's fight for free existence is a spirit any of us—as War-Bond-buyer, taxpayer, factory worker—may view and follow, with pride!

McCann-Erickson begins work June 30—
A new product for an old client

The advertisements above represent only three of the 15 new assignments which have come to us this year.

These advertisers chose McCann-Erickson for many reasons. But one seemed to stand out.

It was the way we "make ads."

We believe that creative ingenuity comes first. But we also believe that it is most effectively applied when writers and artists are armed with an exact knowledge of the factors that help produce high reader interest.

The McCann-Erickson Continuing Study of Reader Interest reveals these factors in each different product field.

Both writers and artists use them . . . and they work. Work so well, that we can generally predict the highest possible readership consistent with the advertiser's other aims.

This Study is based on a detailed analysis of 30,000 magazine advertisements covering nine years. If you think it would be worth a half hour to see how it might help your problem, just call or write our nearest office.

HOW TO CONSERVE EYESIGHT and LIGHT!

Eyesight and light are both vital to the war effort. Use them wisely by following these suggestions.

1. Clean lamp bulbs and bowls regularly with a damp cloth. Dry thoroughly before using.
2. Use shades with white linings that reflect light, not absorb it.
3. Keep all light properly shaded to avoid harmful glare.
4. Arrange furniture so one lamp serves two or more people if necessary.
5. Always turn off lights in unoccupied rooms.

After the Greeks had defeated the Persians at Salamis in 480 B.C., the Greek captains balloted to learn the consensus as to which man had done most to ensure the Greek victory. For first choice, each man voted for himself. For second choice, all Themistocles.

Naturally, each Bowdoin man is loyal to his own class; many have said, "If I couldn't belong to my own class, I'd like to be a member of 1916."

and

WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL-CAMP

The peace-time educational system developed at Wassookeag School-Camp and Wassookeag School from 1926 to 1928 has become a pattern for war.

The colleges are operating on an accelerated schedule; the draft is digging deeper into the ranks of youth; the stride of events is lengthening toward complete mobilization of man power. All this demands that we do more for boy power and do it quickly.

The boy who previously entered college at eighteen, the candidate of average or better ability, can and must enter college at seventeen. The boy who entered college at seventeen, the boy of outstanding ability, can and must enter at sixteen.

Candidates for college can save a year without sacrificing sound standards if they begin not with the senior year in school, but with the freshman or sophomore year. Now more than ever before we must look ahead surely and plan ahead thoroughly.

First*—FILL THE SUMMER VACUUM

Wassookeag's scholastic system was introduced at the School-Camp in 1926 as a summer study-program for boys thirteen to nineteen. This program was developed to meet the need for greater continuity in the educational process, the need for constructive use of the long vacation months. The purpose—to speed up preparation for college by stimulating higher attainment and by effecting a saving of time.

Second*—DEVELOP A YEAR-ROUND PROGRAM

In 1928 the speed-up program of the summer session at the School-Camp was extended to a year-round educational system by the founding of Wassookeag School. By actual count over a period of twelve years, the majority of Wassookeag students have begun the school year in July rather than September—an "accelerated program" on the secondary level.

Third*—BEGIN NOW

Wassookeag's function in education has been the planning and directing of timesaving programs for schoolboys. Over six hundred such programs, each different because each boy is different, have been followed through at the School and the School-Camp. Send for information regarding the extent of scholastic schedule and the types of speed-up programs that schoolboys have carried successfully, that can be built into a well-balanced school experience and a well-balanced summer vacation.

WINTER IS MY YEAR

Summer is a brief song in my land,
A wild bird poised a moment on the hand,
As she sings her highest, come the nights
That are the ghosts of days, the northern lights
Burn up above the fir trees, cold and clear;
My country has the Winter for its year
I know the snow is never far away,
Drops of snow hang where anemones sway,
I find snow where arbutus blossoms shine,
The only green that lasts is fir and pine
My rocks are the sad ones running cold
North to the Laurentians, the sheepfold
Of white stars by the millions in the Winters,
Small chickadees quick as a diamond's splinters.

Songs of the Summer are most lovely things,
But Winter is a skyful of white wings.
My mornings are the beauty of the ice,
My sunsets are the sunsets that come twice,
The day that follows days is a golden flower,
And men walk through its petals for an hour
With faces that are fire, seraphs meet
And say good-evening in the snow-walled street.
The trees which shine alive against the snow
Are the greenest and the loveliest that grow.
Pity the warm ones, do not pity me!
I have dark hemlocks frosted by the sea,
I have the fight to fight for slender life
And days that come sharp on me as a knife.

Bob Coffin's verses seem to belong in an issue of the ALUMNUS published in the middle of an old fashioned Maine winter. Pictures on the cover and elsewhere in the magazine may help Bowdoin men to understand why those resident on the campus say, in unison, "In 1944, winter is indeed our year."

The activities of the Alumni Council as outlined in President Trust's communication to the Alumni in this issue represent nothing new. They are but a continuation of the efforts of Bowdoin men to help their College. The Alumni Association is nearly as old as the College itself; some local alumni clubs and associations have been in existence for three-quarters of a century; the Alumni Fund was first organized in 1869.

Evidences of the constant Alumni endeavor to participate more understandingly in Bowdoin's problems may be noted in the seventy-year-old gentlemen's agreement under which half the vacancies on the Board of Overseers are filled by electing alumni chosen by alumni ballot; the creation of the Alumni Council; the rebirth, in 1919, of the Alumni Fund; the establishment of an Alumni Office by the College with an Alumni Secretary, one of whose duties is the publication of the ALUMNUS; the growth in number and strength of the local alumni organizations and the widening scope of their activities on behalf of the College. These and many more may be quoted in support of the statement that Bowdoin men have always sought ways and means to serve Bowdoin more effectively and to assume their proper share of their responsibilities as Bowdoin men.

It is to be hoped, rather expected, that Alumni generally will heed the plea of the Council President and offer their interested, even if critical, assistance to the Council and its committee on alumni reorganization. What more fitting observance of the Sesquicentennial than to accomplish a "streamlined," cohesive framework of alumni organization under which there can be marshalled and put at work, more easily and effectively, that support which Bowdoin will need in increasing measure in the coming years and which all Bowdoin men are eager to give.

The Sesquicentennial

COMMITTEES of the Boards, of the Faculty and of the Alumni have for years been hoping and planning for a fitting celebration of Bowdoin's Sesquicentennial in June. In addition to appropriate ceremonies, hopes had been expressed that the birthday of the College would witness notable additions to equipment and assets, perhaps a new classroom building or a group of science buildings on the Delta or a substantially increased endowment. Those were "before Pearl Harbor" hopes and plans. The American people are today joined with the peoples of the United Nations in an all-out war which resolves itself into a struggle to determine whether institutions like Bowdoin, our own national existence and civilization itself shall survive. It need hardly be noted that plans for an elaborate observance of a date, truly significant in American education and American history, have been set aside.

The Sesquicentennial will not, however, pass unnoticed. A Convocation Day is being arranged at the College on Saturday, June 24. Plans are being made by a special committee consisting of President Sills, Chairman; Messrs. William W. Lawrence and John F. Dana of the Trustees; Messrs. Leonard A. Pierce, John W. Frost, Harold H. Burton, Harrison Atwood, Adriel U. Bird, Rufus E. Stetson, Carl M. Robinson of the Overseers; and Professors Herbert R. Brown and Athern Daggett of the Faculty. The committee has recommended that the one hundred fiftieth birthday of the College should be observed as described in the following paragraphs.

On Saturday, June 24, 1944, the actual anniversary of the granting of Bowdoin's charter, there will be a special Convocation in the First Parish Church at eleven o'clock in the morning, with an address on the significance of the occasion, a poem and the conferring of honorary degrees. It is expected that delegates will be present from American institutions of higher learning whose charters go back to the 18th century, members of the Association of Colleges in New England, of the Maine colleges and of other educational institutions with which Bowdoin has had close relations. The Convocation will be followed by a luncheon (probably in the Gymnasium) for guests, delegates, Alumni and friends. This luncheon will take the place of the usual Commencement luncheon and there will be few speeches. It is expected, however, that customary reports and alumni awards will be made at this time. In the late afternoon or evening, the Masque and Gown will give a Shakespearian play. On Sunday morning, June 25, there will be a special service of thanksgiving and remembrance in the First Parish Church and in the afternoon, a concert.

The committee further recommends that an Institute be held early in the fall, along the lines of the previous Bowdoin Institutes, dealing with the future of liberal education in this country. College publications—the ALUMNUS, the Quill and the Orient—are requested to plan special numbers in connection with the Sesquicentennial.

As the graduation exercises on June 3, Commencement Day, will be in simple form, like those held in September and February, Alumni and friends of the College are urged to mark Saturday, June 24, as the day on which they will return to the campus. The committee recommends to the Boards, the Alumni Council, the Directors of the Alumni Fund, and any others involved, that their stated meetings be held at the time of the Convocation rather than at Commencement, and that when legal requirements made it necessary, pro forma meetings be held at the time of the Commencement and that they be adjourned to June 23 and 24.

The program as outlined above would appear rather completely to fill the hours of Saturday, June 24 and to make it seem advisable that some alumni and fraternity groups meet on Friday, June 23. As this is written, Brunswick and the campus are still crowded. Accommodations for eating and sleeping are at a premium and the public is still being urged not to travel unnecessarily. Nothing is definite yet but it is conceivable that changing fortunes of war and the possible consequent modification of army and navy training programs would, by June, have freed certain college quarters now occupied. It is not conceivable that any space which might so become available would house any large number so, once again, the College is reluctantly compelled to ask that stated class reunions be deferred.

The College will do everything possible to provide accommodations for those whose attendance at necessary meetings will require their presence on Friday, June 23. Keenly regretting that conditions continue to limit the hospitality which the College can extend, President Sills and members of the Sesquicentennial Committee hope that all Alumni and friends of Bowdoin able to participate in the events of Saturday, June 24, will do so.

Alumni Reorganization Proposed

*Council President Reports On

HARRY TRUST '16

AT the annual meeting of the Alumni Council last Commencement, the perennial topic of Bowdoin's relations with non-graduate members of the Alumni was discussed at some length. Council members, particularly those whose undergraduate or early graduate experiences were had during World War I, expressed their earnest desire that the many Bowdoin men, to whom World War II would doubtless deny the opportunity of securing degrees, should not be allowed to drift into that already too large group of Alumni whose active and interested support of the College has largely been lost for want of continuing College and Alumni Association contact relations reserved for degree holders. In a resolution to the General Alumni Association, the Council urged, as a first step, an immediate broadening of the provisions for membership in the Association.

By vote of members present at its annual meeting, the General Alumni Association expressed unanimous accord with Council sentiment and asked the Council to act. Accordingly, in July, I appointed a committee to examine the membership provisions of our Alumni Association, to compare them with the membership provisions at other colleges and to bring to the Council recommendations for changes. As chairman I selected Chester G. Abbott '13 of Portland, formerly a Director of the Alumni Fund but now a lay member of the Alumni. Other members were Thomas W. Williams '10 of New York City, past president of the New York Alumni Association; Don J. Edwards '16 of Boston and Alden H. Sawyer '27 of Portland from the Alumni Council; Ashmead White '12 of Bangor from the Fund Directors; Neal W. Allen '07 of Portland and Paul K. Niven '16 of Brunswick from the Board of Overseers and Albert T. Gould '08 of Boston, a Trustee of the College. I believe the Committee to be fairly representative of geographical areas, of Alumni bodies, and of age groups.

That special committee went to work vigorously. From their study of practices at many other colleges and a thorough examination into the history of alumni relations at Bowdoin, Chairman Abbott (with three other members of his committee present) brought a report to the Alumni Council at its meeting in Boston on November 19. Important as were the definite recommendations for membership changes, of far greater import and interest to the Council members was the informal report on the committee's labors and conclusions.

Briefly stated, the committee believes that the job to be done is one of far greater scope than merely changing Association membership provisions. In view of what other colleges have done in recent years and in view of persistently recurring demands for change from our Alumni, the committee asked that it be discharged and that a new committee be appointed with instructions from the Council to report recommendations for a complete revision of Alumni affairs. The committee was convinced that all colleges, especially those smaller, independent institutions like Bowdoin, must in the future rely more and more upon the organized and effective assistance of their alumni, not only in financial matters, vital as that kind of support is and will be, but also in such matters as interesting prospective students, cooperation in alumni placement and the development of favorable public relations generally. This necessary effective alumni interest and support could best be assured to Bowdoin if the Alumni were so organized as to permit them to undertake and conduct their activities with greater independence than is possible under the present set-up. The experience of other colleges where similar changes have been made in recent years justifies the expectation of expanded alumni interest and support.

The committee suggested as part of such an organization, a much larger Alumni Council whose members would be representative of all groups. Meeting at the College at least once a year this larger Council would be able to effect a clearer understanding and a far wider participation in efforts on behalf of the College from the Alumni generally. A Board of Directors or an executive committee of the Council would, under such a set-up, be the actual, active administrators of Alumni activities. Under the direction of that executive committee the Alumni themselves would maintain an Alumni Office and its personnel, publish the ALUMNUS, determine through consultation with the Governing Boards what needs of the College the Alumni might meet and conduct money raising efforts for such specific purposes. The Association should probably be an incorporated or a legally associated body with power and rights to own property. The committee hopes that in some way endowment funds would be provided for the Association as is the case at several other colleges where the current association expenses are met from endowment income and all results of money-raising efforts for the College are virtually net operations.

Sweeping as the suggested changes were and substantial as the resulting responsibility resting upon the Alumni appeared, the committee made it perfectly clear to the Council that, in the committee's deliberations, there had been no thought whatever of alumni participation in the administration or the government of the College. The sole objective was a more valuable, more effective and more readily obtainable Alumni assistance to the Administration and the Governing Boards. The "streamlining" of alumni organization seemed the way to secure that assistance.

The long discussion which this informal report evoked left little doubt that the committee's conclusions were endorsed heartily by the Council members; and at the subsequent meeting of the Fund Directors, the recital which Chairman Dwight Sayward invited me to make brought assurance that members of that body felt the same way. With the approval of the Council I asked Mr. Abbott and all who had served with him to continue on the new committee which was instructed to submit as soon as possible a definite and detailed plan of alumni reorganization. To the committee were added Scott Simpson '03 of Concord, N. H., President of the General Alumni Association; Harold Lee Berry '01 of Portland, a Trustee of the College long active in bringing about greater alumni interest, and Fletcher Means '28 of Portland, Chairman of the Council Committee on Placement.

In this connection I know that the many Bowdoin men who, on some committee or other, have long striven to secure a placement service at Bowdoin will rejoice with the present Council that the Administration has found it possible to undertake this most important service. As these words are read I believe the Executive Committee of the Governing Boards and the President will have acted to set in motion a Placement Bureau under a full time director.

The consensus of the Council as expressed at the Boston meeting on January 27, was that all Association members should be sent a printed copy of proposed changes in alumni reorganization together with a ballot upon which they might express approval or disapproval. Lack of Council or Association funds to pay for such printing and mailing may be overcome from individual sources. The Council will endeavor to make such a mailing when the Committee makes its final report, probably within a few weeks. In the meantime the Council and Mr. Abbott's committee will welcome any and all comments, unfavorable as well as favorable. Such comments may be sent to me at 288 Union Street, Bangor, Maine, or to Chester G. Abbott, First Portland National Bank, Portland, Maine.

It is my firm belief that Alumni generally are truly interested in what their Alumni Council is striving to accomplish and I hope that these necessarily condensed remarks may be found to be reasonably informative.

HARRY TRUST, '16

President of the Alumni Council

The 1943-1944 Alumni Fund

BELIEVING that all Bowdoin men will wish the College to start its second 150 years on an even keel, the directors of the Alumni Fund have set this year's goal at $40,000—the largest in the history of the Fund—to enable the College to carry on and to meet new problems brought by war; some of these problems are financial.

This year the Alumni Fund appropriation for general purposes—sums to be used during the emergency as the Governing Boards see fit—is greater than ever before.

The Fund can help meet another problem—one which first reached major proportions during the dark days of the depression, and which will grow enormously during the peace to come. That is the matter of vocational guidance and placement service for men returning from the armed forces and other Bowdoin men seeking employment during a period of economic disturbance. The Fund Directors have joined with the Alumni Council in urging the establishment of a Placement Bureau at the College with a full-time Placement Director. The Directors have made available sums to start this service and are confident the Governing Boards and the Administration will soon take appropriate action. This Bureau will continue and expand the work which Dean Nixon has carried on for so many years—voluntarily and single-handed.

During recent years Alumni Fund scholarships have enabled fifty men to enter College who otherwise would have not been able to start. The Fund Directors hope to continue to provide scholarships and are setting aside a reserve to be available for this purpose after the war, believing that the need for scholarship money may then be well in excess of current ability to meet the demand.

This year's Fund objectives differ somewhat from those of antebellum days, but always the Fund's major purpose has been to help Bowdoin and Bowdoin men. Since the Fund was re-established in 1919, the annual giving by Bowdoin men, exclusive of gifts to Endowment and Class Funds, has amounted to more than $300,000. This substantial sum has been vitally important in the financial affairs of the College.

In many years Fund gifts have prevented an operating deficit and have permitted Bowdoin to carry through its educational program without compromise. In other years, Fund gifts have made possible repairs and additions to the College plant, an occasional deserved salary increase or an addition to the teaching staff, the financing of an Institute in some field of education, additional help and equipment in the Alumni office, a new board track, an athletic field fence, or new bleachers. Since the outbreak of the war, the Fund has sent the new and enlarged Bowdoin ALUMNUS to all Bowdoin men in Service.

Fund Directors of the past several years have set as the minimum needs of the College, in additional expendable sums, the income from an additional million of endowment. While the additional million of endowment may not now be available, Bowdoin men can, by their joint annual gifts, make available the income on that million.

There are now about 6000 living Bowdoin men. Last year 2316 of them contributed to the Alumni Fund. It is not unreasonable to believe that half of the 6000 hold their College dearly enough to warrant their giving something.

If the average of this year's gifts equals the average of recent years, the contributions of 3000 men will more than reach the dollar objective. Already more than 500 Bowdoin men have made contributions to this year's Fund, with a total of more than one-quarter of our goal. Class Agents will soon be addressing their classmates; their aim is the widest possible participation by their members. Fund Directors ask a prompt and generous response from all Bowdoin men.

DWIGHT SAYWARD, '16

Chairman of the Fund Directors

February Graduations

ON Saturday, February 5, Bowdoin again held special graduation exercises for a small band of students who had acquired credits sufficient for a degree.

At 2.30 p.m., after the graduation luncheon in Walker Art Building, the seven candidates who could be present (six in cap and gown and one in army uniform) marched into the Chapel behind President Sills, members of the Governing Boards and the Faculty. Following the singing of the College Hymn, prayer by Dr. Thompson E. Ashby and an organ solo by Professor Tillotson, the twelve degrees were conferred according to the ancient Latin formula so familiar to Bowdoin men.

In addressing the graduates, President Sills said that, though Bowdoin was unfaltering in the discharge of the obligation to give its all to the war effort, their graduation was evidence that the College could also insure its continuity as a college of liberal arts, and he welcomed them into the ranks of Bowdoin bachelorhood. He reminded them that, although their formal education might now be completed, their real education, that to be gained only through their own efforts and experiences, was just beginning. The President took passing issue with a recent claim of President Hutchins that only at the University of Chicago and at its offshoot, St. John's College in Annapolis, was a true liberal education to be had. If the statement were true, he and all other Bowdoin men would like to know what Bowdoin had been doing for 150 years. President Sills believes that the graduates will find their degrees well worth having and bade them Godspeed in their graduate undertakings. Simple as the exercises necessarily were, they were impressive and moving.

Those present to receive their degrees were Kenrick M. Baker, Jr., John T. Caulfield, Thomas U. Hall (as of 1942), John W. MacNeil, Lewis T. Milliken and Donald L. Philbrick. Degrees in absentia were granted to Frank W. Alger (as of 1943), William A. McLellan, Milton C. Paige, Jr., John A. Tuttle (as of 1943), Allen Woodcock, Jr. Baker and Perry were graduated magna cum laude, Philbrick and Tuttle, cum laude. Baker also received Honors in English.

After the exercises, President and Mrs. Sills were at home to graduates, their families and friends and to the Alumni and members of the College.

A returning alumnus remarked on February 5, "It seems that every time I come back to Bowdoin a graduation is being held." Had he been present again on Saturday, February 12, he might have witnessed still another. On that day the first group of pre-meteorology students completed the course of study which they began in February 1943. Col. Merlin I. Carter, USA, commanding officer of the New York Civilian Schools Area delivered the only address at the graduating exercises which were held in Memorial Hall. President Sills presented the certificates of graduation. Among the fourteen who completed the course "with honors" were David R. Hastings 2nd, of Fryeburg; William C. Prouty of Portland; Melvyn Savage of Brighton, Mass. It is understood that the Army Air Forces is not to continue the courses in basic pre-meteorology after the students now enrolled have completed the course. The second group of "Metes" at Bowdoin, will graduate in May. Capt. Erwin E. Valmore, who activated the units here, has returned to assume command. Capt. William H. Barrington is serving as executive officer of the unit while waiting orders for transfer. With the arrival of another unit of engineers of the ASTP, probably in March, and the large group of officers studying in the Navy Training School, Bowdoin's uniformed students still numbers well over 500 men.

SOMEHOW—THE DEAN EMERGED

Music

THE Brunswick Choral Society presented The Messiah in Memorial Hall on December 21, with Lloyd Knight of the Class of '45 as one of the soloists. This organization is made up of navy radar and campus army unit students, as well as faculty and townspeople, and has taken the place of the Glee Club which has disbanded for the duration. The Choral Society plans a spring concert on March 27.

The second, third, and fourth concerts of the Brunswick Chamber Music Society were held November 17, 19, and 21 in Memorial Hall and were presented by the Curtis String Quartet, with Anton Torelli, solo bass of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra as one of the assisting artists. The series will close with two further chamber music concerts on April 16 and May 1, bringing to Brunswick for the first time the solo English horn player of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with a program of music for that instrument, violin, and piano.

The Sunday Chapel Choir is now in its stride, singing the best of 16th century contrapuntal music, and hopes to present a program in the spring.

Student recitals have been more successful this year than at any other time. The Moulton Union has been packed for most of the concerts and the variety and quality of student talent is the highest in years. The next student recital will be on February 20, and the last one on April 23 will be given by Lloyd Knight, baritone, and John Friedmann, the first 'cellist of parts to enroll at Bowdoin for seven years. As a result of John Friedmann's presence, Bowdoin had its first string combination in the history of the College (except for the mandolin clubs of some years ago) which performed not only at the student recitals and musical chapels but also on Bowdoin-on-the-Air.

The annual Burns program this year was presented on January 23 and enlisted the services of Marjorie Rice, a Radcliffe graduate, Lloyd Knight, and Mrs. Athern Daggett. The program was repeated at Harvard University on Tuesday evening, January 25, at Paine Hall.

A call has just been issued to the student body to reorganize the college band, and it is hoped that, with the incoming freshmen, a sufficient number of student musicians will enlist to insure a concert in the spring.

IN THE WAKE OF THE PLOW

THEY WON BOWDOIN'S FIRST INTERCOLLEGIATE BASKETBALL VICTORY

Athletics

THE relay team competed in the B.A.A. games at Boston on February 12. Made up entirely of young civilian students, the team did not, of course, seriously threaten any existing records. But the boys are interested in track, they have worked well, and when they compete they will run like track men.

The basketball team, also made up entirely of young civilian students, had a very good season. This team defeated most of the Navy teams in this area, lost to Bates and Maine, and then came from behind to defeat Maine in the last game. In winning this first Bowdoin basketball victory over an inter-collegiate opponent the boys did a splendid job. They came from behind twice to even the score, and then won the game in an overtime period. Throughout the season these boys have displayed a real interest in their sport, a fine courageous spirit, and the best of sportsmanship.

We expect to have a baseball team this spring as already a number of boys have expressed interest. The team will not be a good one, judged upon pre-war standards, but it will provide a healthy interest for those who watch the games as well as for those who play.

The swimming team has had several meets, and will have several more this month. There has been no intercollegiate competition in swimming because there have been no college teams in this area, but again the boys on this squad have worked hard and have had a good time.

The total cost of all of the athletic competition from last July first to next July first will be about $1,000.

A great many people have asked what Adam Walsh is doing these days, and if Johnny Magee is still around. Both of the above mentioned as well as Bob Miller and Neil Mahoney have had six classes a day in the physical education programs for our students, and the Air Corps and the Engineer Units. They are very much around—around the clock on many days.

Bowdoin On The Air

RECENTLY the Bowdoin broadcasts over WGAN have been featuring musical programs. On November 14 Lloyd Knight '45, accompanied by Professor Frederic Tillotson, sang a number of bass solos. A string trio composed of three freshmen, John Friedman, David Demaray, and Wallace Jaffe, presented a highly successful program of 16th Century music on December 8. Stan Frederick '46 followed with a program of trumpet solos. The broadcast of January 13 included cello solos by Friedman and violin solos by Jaffe. Preceding the Robert Burns Recital held in Moulton Union, the broadcast of January 27 was devoted to several Burns' songs by Lloyd Knight, with Professor Tillotson at the piano. Professor Stanley B. Smith introduced the songs with comments on their origin and history. On February 3 Professor Tillotson played a program of Spanish music, including "Igualada," by Raymon Zeura, and "El Albaticin," by Albeniz.

Several students who had resided abroad before coming to Bowdoin held a panel discussion, under the leadership of Stanley D. Weinstein '47, on the February 17 broadcast. On March 2 Lewis Fickett '47 debated a representative of Bates College on the desirability of a general withdrawal of women from industry after the war. A few evenings before Clement Hiebert '47 had met another Bates representative at Lewiston in a radio debate over WCOU.

The Bowdoin broadcasts are now being presented over WGAN on alternate Thursday evenings at 7.45 o'clock, beginning February 17.

Dramatics

At the eleventh annual one-act play contest, held on January 17th in the Moulton Union, prizes of $10 and $5 were awarded to John Owen of the Army Meteorological Unit and to John MacMorran '46 for the plays they had written. Owen also received the Masque and Gown "Oscar," a woodcarving of an actor reading from manuscript, for the duration of his stay on campus.

Four original plays were submitted to the judges of manuscript, Mr. Seward Marsh, Dr. Manning Smith, and Mr. Richard Chittim. They agreed that the plays should be read by actors, rather than produced on stage, especially as one required elaborate costuming. The other two plays were by Freshmen, Robert Bliss '47 and William Lamparter '47. Judges at the final reading were Mrs. Clyde Congdon, Professor Frederic Tillotson, and Professor Herbert Hartman. A large audience enjoyed the varied offerings, which included melodrama, costume tragedy, philosophical drama, and farce. Some thirty actors read in the various plays, among them Mrs. Streeter Bass, Mrs. Athern Daggett, and Professor Robert Coffin.

The Masque and Gown has chosen the farce comedy, "Good-bye Again," as its spring play. It will be presented in Memorial Hall on March 17 as a Red Cross benefit for the town and college audience, and on the next evening for the service men on campus. A new contingent of AST men are expected on March 13, and this entertainment should add to their welcome. The casting of this play will be limited, as far as possible, to the undergraduates in college.

The Commencement Play, on recommendation of the Committee on the Sesquicentennial, will be postponed until or repeated on June 24. Since it is impossible to tell at the present writing what students will be on campus for the summer trimester, a definite play for the occasion may not yet be announced.

The statewide competitive examinations in December resulted in State of Maine Scholarship Awards to Robert W. Burroughs of Deering High School in Portland, Carl H. Lebovitz of Portland High School, Robert A. Wood of Houlton High School and Rufus C. Short of Lincoln Academy in Newcastle. Burroughs and Lebovitz entered Bowdoin this trimester.

Bowdoin Scholarships, granted on a competitive basis to entering students from outside Maine, were awarded to Corydon B. Dunham, Jr., of Yonkers, N. Y., and Francis W. K. Smith of Somerville, Mass. Both of them entered Bowdoin this month.

Five other freshmen entered college in February, having been granted Alumni Fund Scholarships. They are James J. Bagshaw of Freeport, N. Y., Ralph A. Hughes of Brunswick, Robert B. Hunter of Washington, D. C., Byron E. Keene, of Rockland, and John G. Lyons, Jr., of Portland. With the entry of these five freshmen, Alumni Fund Scholarships have now made it possible for fifty-five students to begin their college careers.

Bowdoin began the Spring trimester on February 7 with a civilian registration of 155. New students included one special student from Bogota, Colombia and thirty-seven freshmen, the third entering group of the Class of 1947. Once again more freshmen entered from Maine than from all other states combined. The geographical distribution is: Maine 19, Massachusetts 8, New York 3, District of Columbia and New Jersey 2 each, and one each from Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Bermuda. Five Bowdoin sons registered. They are: Richard E. Eames (Paul H. Eames '21), M. Donald Jordan, Jr. (Maurice D. Jordan '22), Guy W. Leadbetter, Jr. (Guy W. Leadbetter '16), Francois J. Rochon (Frank L. Rochon '21), Frederick W. Willey, Jr. (Frederick W. Willey '17).

President Sills is very anxious to obtain copies of the Bugle of the classes of 1920 and 1926 to complete his file since he became President. Any alumnus who has a copy that he would be willing to dispose of might write to the President.

Class politics were rife. After a turbulent session, the senior class followed the example of the Amherst senior class and voted against having a Class Day. Subsequently the class met peaceably and accepted a slate of officers nominated by a committee from each of the opposing elements.

At the suggestion of Williams and Princeton, an intercollegiate literary convention was held at Hartford, Conn., attended by forty delegates from fourteen colleges. Colonel T. W. Higginson and Mark Twain spoke. An association was formed to conduct intercollegiate literary contests, both in writing and speaking; and a date was set for an exhibition at which at least one contestant from each college would deliver an original oration. The Orient hoped that the scheme, if successful, would cause intellectual contests to become more important than athletic competitions, but was a little skeptical of the whole idea. Eventually little came of it.

The Orient deplored the absence of light in the reading room and heat in the gymnasium and recitation rooms.

Charles H. ("Cosine") Smith became Professor of Mathematics; and the Department of Engineering was endowed with $50,000.

The entire Sophomore Class at Bates was suspended for hazing and the same action was threatened at Maine. The Orient says that "the good old times of ducking . . . and hazing parties have left Bowdoin forever. The spirit of Phi Chi has departed and the Freshman is free."

Nevertheless, two Sophomores, one of whom (Sterling Fessenden) was destined to become one of the most distinguished graduates of the college, were suspended because of interfering with the Freshman gym class. There was considerable indignation in college at the severity of this punishment for what the students generally considered a venial offense.

Politics still rife: after a stormy junior class meeting, a committee representing all societies was commissioned to submit lists of two or more candidates for each office. A fraternity combination entered into the election of both baseball and football captains, although the Orient concedes that good men were elected.

Delayed by a controversy over the eligibility of medics to play baseball, Bowdoin finally received the baseball pennant won in the previous spring session. The Orient advocated a training table.

Plans for the centennial celebration in June were under way.

Elijah Kellogg spoke at Memorial Hall. It was a memorable occasion.

Mysterious paragraph in the Orient—"the faculty . . . will not pursue the matter relative to the singing of the chapel choir Monday morning, December 11th."

The lower floor of Adams Hall was being remodeled because of the prospective removal of physics and chemistry to the Science Building.

C. F. S. Lincoln '91 graduated at the Hospital College of Medicine at Louisville, Ky.

"Hebb '96 has gone to Virginia where he will canvass during the winter." On this simple paragraph hinges a tale which can now be told. The medical school was short of cadavers. Hebb (who later as Dr. Angus Hebb became a leading physician in north-west Maine) was a shrewd Scotchman earning his way through college. Learning of the difficulty, Hebb said that if he were furnished with an adequate expense account, he could obtain the cadavers. Accordingly, he disappeared from college as per the above paragraph and presently the cadavers appeared, an adequate supply, all of African ancestry. By P.L. 1897, Chapter 35 and P.L. 1901, Chapter 276, the Legislature subsequently provided against a recurrence of the problem.

A song, Bowdoin Beata, was submitted by I. B. Choate of the Class of '62—not the Bowdoin Beata written by Pierce of '96 familiar to Bowdoin men today.

Demobilization was the order of the day, the SATC having been disbanded late in December. The Army and Navy gave a farewell hop. Returning war veterans were being absorbed into their classes. The fears of the Orient that demoralization would follow demobilization were not justified.

Professors were returning from war service, Davis, Whittier, Nixon and others. The return of Professor Files was delayed by his serious illness.

The surveying class on the banks of the Androscoggin interrupted proceedings while the instructor and a student plunged into the river to save a dog from drowning.

The engagement of Dean Nixon to Mathilde Spengler was announced.

Influenza was taking its toll.

Jack Magee declined a contract with the University of Maine.

The chapter houses were returned to the fraternities at the beginning of the spring term.

Caruso accepted the dedication of a song by Giovanni Romilli (Johnson '06).

There were 295 registered in college. In addition to the SATC, 1110 Bowdoin men had war records. Twenty-four lost their lives and thirteen others were wounded. Sixty-four graduates of the medical school took part in the war.

Alpha Tau Omega joined the list of fraternities at Bowdoin.

A social science institute was held with many distinguished speakers.

The student council cup was won by Chi Psi with Phi Delta Phi second. The Abraxas cup was won by Deering High.

The hockey team won the state championship. The fencing team won from Colby, but lost four other contests. The swimming team entered competitions for the first time.

Dr. Burnett was on sabbatical leave, writing the biography of President Hyde.

Alumni Associations And Clubs

NEW YORK

The seventy-fifth annual dinner meeting of the Bowdoin Alumni Association of New York and Vicinity was held at Louis Sherry's, 300 Park Avenue, on Friday, January 28. About 100 were present. The guests of honor were President Sills and U. S. Senator Owen Brewster '09. President Sills spoke at some length on the problems which will face the College when peace comes. Senator Brewster outlined his plane trips around the war zones, and stated his convictions as to the stand which this country must take. A tribute and a toast to the 2,000 Bowdoin men in service was made by Hoyt A. Moore '95. Roscoe H. Hupper '07 cited the members lost by death during the year. An interesting and valuable addition to Bowdoin's prized possessions was the gift by John W. Frost '04 of a volume of odes in the original Greek once owned by Professor Alpheus S. Packard and presented to him by Henry W. Longfellow.

President James G. Finn '05 read messages of regret from many, including those sent from Great Britain by Harvey D. Gibson '02 and Harry L. Palmer '04. In presenting nominations for new officers, Thomas W. Williams '10 paid glowing tribute to H. LeBrec Micoleau '29 who had so faithfully served the Association both as treasurer and as secretary. Ernest G. Fifield '11 was elected president for the new year. Richard C. VanVarick '32 will be the new secretary with Brec Micoleau as his assistant and Walter M. Hunt '29 was chosen treasurer. Committees were re-elected to continue active work of the Association in interesting prospective students and in placement.

NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

Largely as a result of the efforts of President Andrew M. Rollins '19, the Bowdoin men of Northern New Jersey were assembled at the Hotel Essex in Newark on December 9 for the first club meeting in two years. As nearly forty attended and twenty more promised future attendance, the club's activity may well be said to have been resumed with vigor. President Sills described campus life under wartime conditions, and the members discussed plans for assisting in interesting prospective students. Officers for 1944-45 are: President, Alvah B. Stetson '15; Vice President, Frank H. Ormerod '21; Secretary-treasurer, Howard S. Hall '31. The new secretary's address is 151 Irving Avenue, South Orange, N. J.

PHILADELPHIA

The thirtieth annual dinner of the Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia was held at the Harvard Club on Saturday evening, January 29, with about forty members attending. President Sills told of the Bowdoin of today and the likely problems of the future. He also outlined the plans for the celebration of the Sesquicentennial of the College on June 24, 1944. The following officers were elected: President, Frank L. Lavertu '99; Vice President, Hayward H. Coburn '28; Secretary-treasurer, John W. Leydon '07, 3350 Ainslie Street, Philadelphia.

ST. PETERSBURG

The Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg has had three serious losses since last spring. Bill Watson '02 and Col. Whitcomb M'91 have died, and Col. Jim Tarbox '14 has been transferred to an active command. There are, however, a few of the old guard left. Probably there are Bowdoin men at Tampa and neighboring air fields. Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln '91, 340 Roland Court, N.E., St. Petersburg, is anxious to keep the Club going. He would appreciate hearing from any Bowdoin man in the vicinity in order to arrange a meeting sometime between now and April.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The Bowdoin Alumni Association of Southern California met Monday evening, January 10, at the Ontra Cafeteria in Los Angeles. Under the direction of William R. Spinney '13, the Association is endeavoring to contact more Bowdoin men in the area. He is Assistant Trust Officer of the Title Insurance and Trust Company, 433 South Spring Street, Los Angeles, and would appreciate hearing from any who are now in the vicinity.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Bowdoin Association joined forces with members of the local Tufts Club for a dinner meeting on Tuesday evening, January 18. Plans are underway for a meeting in the early spring when President Sills may attend. Ernest A. Lister '38, 1925 Seminary Road, Alexandria, Va., is the new Secretary of the Association.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS

Thirty alumni greeted President Sills at the fall dinner meeting of the Association of Western Massachusetts, held in the Sheraton Hotel, Springfield, Friday, December 10. Frank L. Boyden, Hon. '36, Headmaster of Deerfield Academy, was among the Bowdoin group attending from Deerfield. At the conclusion of his talk on present conditions at Bowdoin, President Sills was presented a War Bond in recognition of his twenty-five years of stewardship. The honor roll of members of the association now in the armed services was read by President James P. Blunt '31.

New officers elected for 1944-45 were President, J. Maxim Ryder '21; Vice President, Kenneth H. Pond '26; Secretary, Lawrence R. Flint '27. The new secretary believes there are many Bowdoin men in or near Springfield whose names and addresses are not in the Association records. He asks that all communicate with him at 84 Elmwood Avenue, Longmeadow, Mass.

WORCESTER

Following up the pledge made to the College last fall, the Worcester Bowdoin Club has inaugurated an active campaign to interest underdraft age boys in Bowdoin. Harold Ashey '12, who is pinch-hitting for Cloyd Small '20 as secretary, has enlisted the services of all members in this work.

From the Mail Bag

... Each bit of news I receive of the progress of Bowdoin makes me all the more conscious of my debt to the college for an education, for a training as yet unparalleled, for a training that will stand against that given anywhere. It is also a training that is now standing me in good stead. I find that the thought of what Bowdoin rightly expects of its sons is one of the strongest incentives I have for living and acting as a soldier, true to himself, to his country, and to God.

... I left Bowdoin after two years. And yet, I didn't really leave Bowdoin, for I absorbed into my life much of its tradition, many of its principles, and many of President Hyde's words, "To be at home in all lands." My desire and respect for human dignity grew on the Bowdoin Campus and I shall ever be grateful for that ... In the service, thoughts of the past are important. They make necessary adjustments so much easier. The Bowdoin ALUMNUS, I assure you, is an active agent in that program. I am happy to be an alumnus and shall always be glad to hear about Bowdoin and of Bowdoin men ...

—1943

... In many respects, army life is a hell of a good thing. It breaks down barriers; it levels; it makes you see life as it really is—a fine, good, human, petty mess ...

—1944

... I've just been reading the Bowdoin ALUMNUS which came today, and I was saddened to hear of the passing of Professor Gilligan. I well recall the last class of the year in French, when we stood out in the corridor of Mem Hall and gave forth with "Chew, Chew, Bully for Chew, Bowdoin, Bowdoin, Rah." We were observing a tradition, true, but more than that, we were giving belated recognition to a man and a teacher, who, despite his oft-times biting sarcasm, we respected as a scholar and a gentleman who could and did give us the best possible instruction in the French language if we but contributed our part to classroom instruction ...

... Bowdoin has not forgotten her sons, nor have her sons forgotten Bowdoin. Many of us look back at our College days with special fondness, for they were our last days in the States out of the Service, and it was for many our last home before the war ... The Bowdoin many of us think of is doubtless a great deal different from what she is today—in all probability a different place from what she ever will be ... All of us hope to return to her campus sometime after this war is over when we settle back a bit toward normal living.

... I've spent a great deal of time in a convalescent hospital and been on the crash crew of too many wrecks to believe this is just a skirmish of ideals. It's all a long story, and my trying to condense it on paper is useless. Let's just say that on a quiet night when I'm in a fighter, preparing it for a flight, I can hear the chimes in the Bowdoin Chapel playing "Bowdoin Beata" in the fall twilight.

—1946

... The prospect of returning to civilian life has me wondering ... prefer personnel management or supervision of some sort. I may have to consult the Dean for help in securing some good business position ...

—1941

... In order not to lose interest in educational things, and to pass leisure time, I have collected some books on music ... have devised a crude dark room where I putter around with photography. You see, Prof. Tillotson and Dr. Gross did have an effect on me ...

—1941

... No Christmas house party this year—no carol or chapel service—but still, there is a Bowdoin. Maybe that's what all this mix-up is about. I'm sure that way down deep in every Bowdoin man's heart, he is working now so that his son and his son's son may go to the same Bowdoin we went to. Please, don't let anyone change it.

... It's hard to say it so that it sounds sincere, but it's a most inspiring thing to hear from the College now and then, and to know that there are folks who can still think graciously; and that there's still a bond between me and them.

—1940

The ones for whom we feel the greatest sympathy are the children. For their parents' part we cannot sympathize, since it was their generation that caused this terrible thing. I cannot generalize too broadly in that statement, I know, for there are exceptions. In the long run, though, the children are deserving of sympathy, for they are the ones who have not had a chance. All these tots have seen are armies on the march. Then came the war, finally the invasion of their homeland with destruction and terror being wrought from two sides—that of their fast retreating allies, and that of us, the invaders. All these years their education has been neglected, their churches abandoned perforce. And once you remove religion and education from a child's life, what will you use for foundation in his growth? There is no substitute, and by consequence they are growing up into a world corrupted by every known vice from theft to prostitution. The great thinkers of "post-war developments" will have to be a great deal more able than I credit them with being. More power to them, but "by the great horned spoon" they are starting with a tremendous handicap. Perhaps I am overly pessimistic.

—1943

... Wish Tom Van Cleve were here to guide my historical reading—I'm making heavy weather of Trevelyn, to tell the truth, probably because of heavy competition from reams of Navy paper work. Nine centuries is a lot to catch up on, and it has been twenty years since last I was required to know what the date 1006 stood for.

Bombing raids occur daily and now and then we are shelled by enemy destroyers and cruisers. I don't mind the bombing but oh, that shelling! ...

"Did you see Whittier Field when you were up? During a game on Saturday afternoon, with the sun shining, I think it is the most beautiful place in the world. Those were the perfect years I'll never forget."

John Banks '42 to his mother not long before he was killed in action.

The additions here recorded bring the total number of Bowdoin men known to be in the country's armed forces to 2001, a proud proportion of the somewhat more than 6000 Bowdoin men of all classes and ages. Nearly one-half of them hold commissioned rank. Such promotions or other changes in service as have been reported to the Alumni Office are also noted.

The Alumni Office acknowledges with thanks the many letters from Alumni, families and friends which make possible the keeping of a reasonably accurate record of Bowdoin's participation in this war, and asks the continuance of that much needed help.

Necrology

1883 JAMES DANIEL LENNAN, A.M., who died at his home in Mason City, Iowa, November 19, 1943, at the age of eighty, was born in Richmond, May 21, 1863, and made his home in Gardiner for many years. He transferred from Bates to Bowdoin at the beginning of his junior year. Most of his life was spent as a salesman. He was a member of the Masonic Order, Knights Templar, and Zeta Psi fraternity.

1890 Born in Fryeburg, October 21, 1865, GEORGE BRINTON CHANDLER, known as the "dean of Chamber of Commerce executives," died in Columbus, Ohio, November 24, 1943. For twenty-four years after his graduation from Bowdoin he worked in the educational field, first as a teacher and later as a representative of Ginn and Company and the American Book Company. It was while employed by the publishers that he settled in Rocky Hill, Conn. In 1909 he was elected to the Connecticut legislature, giving special attention to labor problems. From 1913 to 1924 he was a member of the Compensation Commission of Connecticut and in that capacity was co-author of the Workmen's Compensation Act. In 1919 he became executive secretary of the State Chamber of Commerce, marking the beginning of the career in which he was nationally known. Mr. Chandler took up his duties with the Ohio Chamber of Commerce in 1926, becoming executive vice-president of that organization thirteen years later. He was a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

1891 FRANK MARTIN TUKEY, M.D., practicing physician in Bridgeport, Conn., for forty-eight years, died at his home April 24, 1942. Because of ill health he had announced his retirement a year before. He was born at sea, the son of a sea captain. After graduation from Bowdoin, where he played football and was a member of Zeta Psi fraternity, he attended Harvard Medical School. During his medical career, which began in 1897 in Bridgeport, he was active in medical organizations, serving as president of the Medical Society of that city. He is survived by his wife.

1892 JOEL BEAN's death in Florida, November 2, 1942, has just been reported to the College. Mr. Bean was born in Presque Isle, December 4, 1867. After his graduation from Bowdoin, he studied law in Lewiston, later opening an office in Boston. At the start of the Florida land boom he bought a tract of land near Punta Gorda, mapped out a city and went into the real estate business, naming the place El Jobe-An. He was a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity.

1893 After a long illness, REGINALD RUSDEN GOODELL, a retired educator, died in a Portland hospital January 23, 1944. A member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, upon graduation from college he taught in Fryeburg Academy one year before earning his M.A. degree at Johns Hopkins University. Returning to Maine, he taught French at Bowdoin one year and at the University for two years. In 1901 he went to Massachusetts Institute of Technology as instructor of Romance Languages. Two years later he became professor of that department at Simmons College, serving continuously until 1935 when he sought retirement. In 1937 he joined the faculty at Westbrook Junior College, teaching there until 1941. Professor Goodell had travelled extensively in Europe, doing graduate study at Sorbonne in Paris and representing the Pan American Association on a South American tour.

1896 News of the death in Shanghai on February 1 of STERLING FESSENDEN has just been released by the State Department. The "Colonel" or "Fessy," as he was known to his friends and associates at Bowdoin and in Shanghai, was born in Fort Fairfield, September 29, 1875. After his graduation from Bowdoin, where he was a member of Psi Upsilon Fraternity, he went to New York as a clerk in the American Trading Co. and while there studied law at the New York Law School and was admitted to the bar. In 1902 his company sent him to its Shanghai office where he served until 1905 when he resigned to become a law partner of the late Hon. T. R. Jernigan, former American Consul General. The firm was one of the few to survive the purge following the inauguration of the U.S. Court in 1906, and for many years it had a large practice in the American and British Courts and also in the Shanghai Mixed Court (Chinese). In 1920, Mr. Fessenden was elected a member of the Shanghai Municipal Council, the governing body of the International Settlement, and was Chairman of that body for several years. Upon his retirement from the Council, he was appointed Secretary General, a sort of super-chairman who dealt directly with the various foreign nations in their interests with the International Settlement. He was often referred to as the Lord Mayor of Shanghai, though there was no such office or title. As Chairman of the Council, however, he held a post equivalent to that of city manager in the United States. It was a highly paid office and carried with it considerable power and responsibility. He resigned in 1938 because of failing health and failing sight. He had refused to be repatriated among the second party of Americans who returned on the Gripsholm, as he felt that he would not survive the long sea journey, and although he spent his declining years in Japanese-occupied territory, he was allowed to stay in his own residence. His only close relative, a brother, Rev. Thomas Fessenden of Clearwater, Fla., survives him. He was a tower of strength to successive Council chairmen—British and American—and his services to the community elicited numerous marks of appreciation from Chinese and foreigners alike. He was an interesting person with a charming personality and notably successful in his profession and career of public service. He was as international by disposition as by environment and was respected for his ability by the many nationals with whom he dealt.

1897 ALDRO A. FRENCH died in Attleboro, Mass., on December 14 after a brief illness. He was born in Norway, July 1, 1874, and after graduation from Bowdoin, where he was a member of Theta Delta Chi, he went to Attleboro as submaster in the high school. In 1900 he joined D. E. Makepeace in the organization of a jewelry metals firm and became its vice-president at the time of incorporation. He became treasurer in 1918 and president in 1930, retiring in 1940. Active in city affairs, he had served terms on the council, school committee, and Chamber of Commerce. At the time of his death, he was president of the Attleboro Savings and Loan Company and a director of the First National and the Attleboro Savings banks. He also was a past president of the Lions Club, a member of the Metacomet and the Highland Country Clubs, and active in Masonic work. Surviving him are his widow, a daughter, and a son, Edgar A. French '28.

1901 The REVEREND DAVID FRANK ATHERTON, teacher, writer and preacher, died suddenly in a Sanford hospital on February 4. A resident of Alfred for the last three years, he had just completed a Maine biographical work, Great People From a Great State. Born in Brunswick, March 4, 1876, he attended Bangor Theological Seminary, although an accident prevented his graduating. He later entered Bowdoin and upon graduation was ordained a Congregational minister, his first pastorate being in Georgetown, Mass. He served several New England parishes before going to New York state to engage in war work during World War I and in rehabilitation work as a teacher of former servicemen after the war. He wrote many articles for newspapers and was connected with the Buffalo Historical Society. A widow and a daughter survive.

1901 JAMES DEERING NUTTING, M.D., a Hallowell physician, died in a Portland hospital October 24, 1943. Born in Hallowell, February 11, 1875, he was at Bowdoin two years, the second of which he attended the Medical School. His M.D. degree was earned at Baltimore University, and he later studied at the University of Colorado. Returning to Maine, he established the practice in Hallowell which he had maintained over forty years. He served as Chairman of the Republican City Committee for some time. He is survived by his wife and two daughters.

1902 CHARLES HENRY HUNT, Portland physician for nearly forty years, died suddenly at his home on January 27. A lifelong resident of Portland, he was born there January 9, 1881, and graduated from Portland High School. At Bowdoin he became a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity, and upon graduation he entered the Medical School, receiving his degree three years later. He served his internship at the Maine General Hospital. For many years he was connected with the Medical School, as instructor, lecturer, and professor. Active in professional organizations, he was a member of the Portland Medical Club, County Medical Association, and the American Medical Association.

1906 The REVEREND HAROLD GEORGE BOOTH, pastor of the Congregational Church at Brooks, died there suddenly on February 1, 1944. He was born August 11, 1873, at Buffalo, N. Y., and attended Hartford Theological Seminary before coming to Bowdoin. He served pastorates in Iowa, South Dakota, and New York before returning to Maine where he was minister of churches in Portland, York, Fryeburg, and Cumberland Center. Surviving are two sons, George H., now stationed with an Army Specialized Training Unit at the University of

1911 After a long illness, JULIUS CALVIN ORAM, M.D., of South Portland died November 19 in a Boston Hospital. He was born in Bristol on October 17, 1885, prepared for college at Westbrook Seminary, and upon graduation from Bowdoin he entered its Medical School, from which he graduated in 1915. He served his internship in the Central Maine General Hospital in Lewiston before establishing a practice in South Portland. During World War I, he was a captain in the Medical Corps, returning to South Portland in 1918. He was a member of the staffs of the Maine General Hospital and the Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary, had served two terms on the South Portland School Committee and at one time was city physician. He was a member of Zeta Psi. His son, William V. Oram, is a member of the class of 1947.

1926 Very recently word reached the College of the death of LEO LESLIE FITZ which occurred February 15, 1930. He was born in Levant, September 20, 1902, and graduated from East Corinth Academy before entering Bowdoin, which he attended only a few months in his freshman year.

1927 The death of HERBERT GOODWIN JONES occurred July 11, 1943. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., January 25, 1903, and attended Bowdoin for three years after his graduation from Newton High School. Since leaving Bowdoin he had been associated with New England Mutual Life Insurance Company in Boston. He was a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity.

1930 OLCOTT FREDERICK KING, JR., of West Hartford, Conn., died early in November as the result of a thirty-foot fall in an open elevator shaft on a construction project. He was born November 30, 1906, in South Windsor, Conn., and attended Bowdoin three years, joining the Sigma Nu fraternity. Since leaving college he had been a reporter for the sports department of the Boston Herald, been program director of a radio station, taken a course in transportation at Harvard and, before accepting a position as building inspector for the construction company by whom he was employed at the time of his death, had worked in the publicity department of the State Highway Safety Commission. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

1942 LT. JOHN RICHARD BANKS, former football star, was killed in action in Sicily on October 8, 1943. Transferring to Bowdoin from Virginia Military Institute in his sophomore year, a member of Zeta Psi fraternity and its president during his senior year, he was named all-state guard in 1941. Lt. Banks, an Eagle Scout, was born May 27, 1920, in Newark, N. J. He enlisted in June, 1942, was commissioned January 20, 1943, at Fort Benning, Ga., and went overseas the following March. He had seen action in Tunisia and was one of the first group of officers to enter Messina.

1945 PVT. JOHN FRANCIS LALLY, JR., USMC is reported killed in action, presumably in the Pacific, according to word received by his parents on Christmas Day. He was born in Holyoke, Mass., April 26, 1922, and graduated from high school there in 1939, starring in football. In 1941 he graduated from Monson Academy as president of the senior class and captain of the football team. During his year at Bowdoin he became a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity and earned his letters in football and basketball. He enlisted in the Marines November 4, 1942.

1946 The death of SGT. HENRY WILLIAM LEETE occurred at Fort Benning, Ga., on December 26, the result of an automobile accident. He had returned only a few days before from a ten-day furlough spent with his father, who had arrived on the Gripsholm after nearly two years in Japanese custody. Sgt. Leete was born in Peking, China, March 21, 1924. The family came to this country in 1937, making their home in Hartford, Conn., where Henry graduated from high school in 1942. Entering Bowdoin that fall, he left college for the Service with the paratroops in December of his first year. He was a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity. The death of his mother occurred while he was attending college, and his brother, a lieutenant in the Air Force, is missing in the African War theater.

MEDICAL SCHOOL

1891 After an illness of three months, COLONEL CLEMENT COLFAX WHITCOMB USA, retired, died in St. Petersburg, Fla., on November 9, and was buried in Arlington National Cemetery. He had resided in St. Petersburg since his retirement from active service in 1932. Colonel Whitcomb entered the Army in 1900 as a surgeon, and his first service was in the Philippines with the 36th Infantry. Later he was with the army of pacification in Cuba. Following this line of duty, he took special work in eye, nose, and throat treatment at Harvard Medical School. After serving at various army posts at home, he went to the Philippines again in 1915, but was ordered home to accompany the American Expeditionary Forces to France as medical supply officer with headquarters in Tours and offices in Paris and London. Colonel Whitcomb was awarded the Legion of Honor by France and the medal of honor of the Polish Government for notable services. From 1918 to 1931 he served as supply and finance officer in Washington, D. C., under the Surgeon General. He was a member of the commission to determine the costs of the Army of Occupation and later was detailed to aid in compiling the medical history of the World War. He was a graduate of the Army Industrial College; a fellow of both the American College of Surgeons and the American Medical Association; and a member of the American Legion and of the Army and Navy Club of Washington. Colonel Whitcomb was born in Dixmont, September 16, 1868. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Blanche Shaw Whitcomb and a son, Colonel John C. Whitcomb.

He practiced medicine at Port Mills, Thetford, and Copperfield, Vt., and in Manchester, N. H., where he was city physician, resident physician and surgeon at the Elliot Hospital and physician in charge of St. Joseph's boys' home. He practiced in South Windham a short time, and in 1898 settled in Westbrook. He served several years as city physician, was past president of the Cumberland County Medical Association and active in fraternal organizations. Surviving are his wife and four children, two of his three sons being Bowdoin men—Charles B. Woodman '28 and George M. Woodman '31.

1907 A belated report brings word that BRADSTREET HENRY MASON, M.D., former superintendent of the Waterbury Hospital, died at his home in West Hartford, Conn., January 1, 1942. He was born in Monroe, April 8, 1881, and graduated from the local high school before entering Bowdoin Medical School. His internship in the Maine General Hospital was followed by service as assistant physician at the Worcester State Asylum. He maintained a general practice in Portland for several months before becoming assistant, and later superintendent, of the Worcester State Hospital. For several years he did psychopathic work in Ann Arbor, Mich., and instructed in psychiatry at the University of Michigan. Upon his return to New England, he spent four years in the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, going to the Waterbury Hospital as superintendent in 1927. Because of ill health he retired in 1941. He is survived by his wife and three sons, one of whom, Charles H. Mason, graduated from Bowdoin in 1940.

1908 News of the death of SAMUEL ELLISON SAWYER, M.D., which occurred in Lewiston, December 21, 1942, has just reached the College. Born in Bath, June 10, 1876, his early years were spent in Brunswick and Auburn. He was a graduate of Sabbathus High School and Bates College, attending Tufts Medical School for a year before coming to Bowdoin Medical School. After his internship in the Central Maine General Hospital, his first practice was in Lewiston. A few years later he gave up his general practice to devote his whole time to the giving of anesthesia, in which he became very proficient, soon being recognized as one of the best anesthetists in the State. For two years he had charge of the anesthesia department at St. Mary's Hospital in Lewiston and for many years was supervisor and chief of that department in the Central Maine General Hospital. FOREWORD

When away from home in winter in this palm and pine, lotus-eating land (though I have never eaten candied lotus seeds since I left China), I am supposed to lay aside the cares of my job and relax into that happy state of inertia which Francis Bacon might have described as the twin brother of laziness—and then comes a bunch of notes from the home office and a letter from my chief: "The deadline on Class Notes is approaching." So here goes!

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Class News Editor writes, "I am not at all sorry to be out of Maine at this time. Am keeping well and enjoying my softball games, otherwise some time is consumed in intensive household activities and riding herd on my two-year-old grandson. The weather here is now above reproach."

1889 Secretary, WILLIAM M. EMERY
138 Main St., Fairhaven, Mass.

Dr. Richard F. Chase was elected director of the Cumberland County Public Health Association at its annual meeting.

The C. N. M. had a delightful call from Lory Pentiss of Modesto, Calif., on his way to Florida City to see a sister seriously ill. His fifty-five years out have been kind to him. He has a son, a brigadier general in the Air Force (see 1918 Class News), and a grandson, also in Service. Lory hopes to make Brunswick in June.

1890 Secretary, WILMOT B. MITCHELL
6 College St., Brunswick

1894 Secretary, FRANCIS W. DANA
8 Bramhall St., Portland

George Merrill writes that he is enjoying his new parish at Buckland, Mass., and that he plans to visit Brunswick for his 50th and Bowdoin's 150th in June.

Robert L. Sheaff writes from Waldoboro that he, the oldest member of his class, is glad to be alive and very glad to be a graduate of Bowdoin.

1895 Secretary, WILLIAM M. INGRAHAM
79 High Street, Portland

Frank H. Mead still serves as dentist at the Bangor State Hospital each forenoon.

1897 Secretary, JAMES E. RHODES, II
700 Main St., Hartford, Conn.

George E. Carmichael writes that he and Mrs. Carmichael are at Hotel Carpenter, Manchester, N. H., for the rest of the winter.

Dr. John H. Morse of Augusta has three sons in active Service; two of them, Edward '33 and Donald '41, are Bowdoin men.

Chase Pulsifer in the Reclamation Service at Yuma, Ariz., has five Service sons—two in the Army, two in the Navy, and one in the Marines.

The Secretary, with a flare for genealogy, writes, "My great-great-grandfather, Jonathan Woodman, was representative from Buxton in the House of Representatives of the General Court of Massachusetts at the session of 1793-1794 at which both Williams and Bowdoin were chartered, and I assume that he voted for the incorporation of both colleges. He was a relative of Cyrus Woodman 1836, a benefactor of the college. My son, Richard A. Rhodes, II '44 is now an instructor in physics at Bowdoin. He is a great-great-grandson of John Woodman. Has any member of the Bowdoin faculty roots reaching further back than this? Through the Woodman's he is also a descendant of William Longfellow, the ancestor of Henry W. Longfellow 1825."

1898 Secretary, THOMAS L. PIERCE
R.F.D. 2, Rehoboth, Mass.

Thomas L. Marble was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of New Hampshire last year. Maine and New Hampshire Supreme Courts are both presided over by members of the Class of '98.

The Bowdoin, owned by the government, has recently returned from a cruise in northern waters, completing her work of patrol, piloting, and surveying. She is now being decommissioned and may shortly be returned to Comdr. Donald B. MacMillan for further Arctic work after the war.

Ralph L. Wiggin was re-elected president of the Board of the Knox County General Hospital.

1899 Secretary, LUCIEN P. LIBBY
22 Bramhall St., Portland

Vice Admiral Arthur P. Fairchild, who is in charge of the installation of equipment on all Liberty ships for the U. S. Maritime Commission, was present at the christening of the John Fairfield, named for his great-grandfather, three times Governor of Maine and former U. S. Senator. On the same day, another ship was launched named for the late Sumner I. Kimball '55, who for many years was the head of the U. S. Life Saving Service.

Maj. Carl V. Woodbury, senior member of Norwich University's faculty, has been named executive officer of the military college, until a successor to the retiring president is selected.

1901 Secretary, WALTER L. SANBORN
Box 390, Lansdale, Pa.

George Wheeler's friends will be saddened to learn that his elder son, Warren, a graduate of Pomona College and a lieutenant in the Marines, is reported killed in South Pacific action. His second son, Alvin, who was a student at Princeton, is also in service.

1906 Secretary, RALPH G. WEBBER
19 Stone St., Augusta

George W. Hatch of Greenfield, Mass., reports the arrival of a grandson on October 22. Son of Lt. and Mrs. C. Russell Allen of Pensacola, Fla., he has been named George William Allen.

1907 Secretary, FELIX A. BURTON
64 Collins Rd., Waban, Mass.

Hon. William S. Linnell had a narrow escape from serious injury in December when his car was in collision with a truck in deep snow on a steep hill in Gardiner. He evidently is reserved for better things—the Republican party perhaps.

1909—Secretary, ERNEST H. POTTLE
34 Appleton Place
Glen Ridge, N. J.

Senator Ralph O. Brewster made the headlines recently with his statement that he wished to be known henceforth as Owen Brewster. He commented, "Some of the home folks will doubtless always call me Ralph."

In his Washington Merry-Go-Round of February 1, Drew Pearson made comment of interest to Bowdoin men generally and to 1909 men particularly. So far, the man they have scrutinized with greatest care is Senator Harold Burton of Ohio, for three terms mayor of Cleveland. An independent Republican, he led the fight of the B₂H₂ Senate group (of which he was a member) for a non-partisan Senate resolution endorsing the Moscow agreement and a strong American policy for a co-operative peace. You may hear a lot more of Burton in the future." A few days later, Drew Pearson devoted his entire column to Senator Burton.

From a letter of H. Tobey Mooers to Elliot Freeman:

" . . . During 1941, I was sent on a special mission to the government of Madagascar (Colonial French possession). For certain reasons, I had to proceed via the Philippines where a vessel under the French flag would pick me up. Delays in leaving the Philippines ran me smack into the war. The vessel on which I came to the Islands was torpedoed off Honolulu, while trying to get back, and the Japs (from the air) got the vessel on which I was to travel to Madagascar. The Japs got me, too, and that made a clean sweep, all ways!

"By chance, twenty-four other Foreign Service Officers (some with wives and children) were also caught at Manila, where they were awaiting boat connections for Far Eastern assignments. By October, 1941, all passenger services in the Pacific had materially slowed down. Manila underwent siege and constant bombardment from December 8, 1941, until the close of the month and was taken possession of by the Japs on the evening of January 2, 1942. They just streamed into the city and flowed down the long avenue, the forerunners riding dinky little motorcycles. On the 5th, we were, as a group shut up in a house on the edge of town, near Nichols airfield, and there, under constant guard, we lived as best we could until September 26, 1943, when at last the provisions of the second exchange brought us home.

"There were but 151 Americans returned on that exchange from the Philippines. About 5,000 (more, probably) are still there and making the best of their luck. Materially, we were not too badly off. Although we had no milk, flour, or bread after a few months, we had local vegetables, some meat, eggs, and occasionally, corn bread. (Don't talk to me about rice.)

"The Americans at Santo Tomas are a game lot and have impressed the Japs with their ability to run and govern themselves. They are short—very short, I believe—on medical and pharmaceutical supplies and all of the things which we here take so much for granted—(soap, toothpaste, razor blades, shaving soap, towels, etc., etc.) and without which our lives here, even in freedom, would become quickly very complicated.

"For us, and undoubtedly for all internees, the worst part is more often the apprehension and deadly monotony of living in close confinement day after day, week after week, month after month—with no word from loved ones. I got one message only in twenty-one months—sent by my wife through the Swiss Legation at Tokyo—'All well. Love.' The Japs must have slipped up on that one, for almost no communications were permitted to reach us, with the exception of some "can-red" Christmas greetings sent sometime in November or December, 1942, which were delivered in camp during June, 1943. By and large, as far as our group was concerned, the treatment accorded us was fair.

" . . . It sure is grand to be free again! Last September, a carton of American cigarettes (if you could find one to buy) sold for $25.00 cash. So did a one-pound tin of powdered milk. Eggs were $1.50 the dozen, and were they small! American toothbrushes (when available) were $2.50 each, or more. All these are higher now."

NOTE: Tobey has been in the U. S. Foreign Service for years. His last post before be-

Later his son Clive joined the forces at March Field, Calif., and he is now in the South Pacific, a sergeant in New Guinea. Tobey returned December 19, 1943.

HOW TO CONSERVE EYESIGHT and LIGHT!

Eyesight and light are both vital to the war effort. Use them wisely by following these suggestions.

1. Clean lamp bulbs and bowls regularly with a damp cloth. Dry thoroughly before using.
2. Use shades with white linings that reflect light, not absorb it.
3. Keep all light properly shaded to avoid harmful glare.
4. Arrange furniture so one lamp serves two or more people if necessary.
5. Always turn off lights in unoccupied rooms.

and

WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL-CAMP

The peace-time educational system developed at Wassookeag School-Camp and Wassookeag School from 1926 to 1928 has become a pattern for war.

The colleges are operating on an accelerated schedule; the draft is digging deeper into the ranks of youth; the stride of events is lengthening toward complete mobilization of man power. All this demands that we do more for boy power and do it quickly.

The boy who previously entered college at eighteen, the candidate of average or better ability, can and must enter college at seventeen. The boy who entered college at seventeen, the boy of outstanding ability, can and must enter at sixteen.

Candidates for college can save a year without sacrificing sound standards if they begin not with the senior year in school, but with the freshman or sophomore year. Now more than ever before we must look ahead surely and plan ahead thoroughly.

First*—FILL THE SUMMER VACUUM

Wassookeag's scholastic system was introduced at the School-Camp in 1926 as a summer study-program for boys thirteen to nineteen. This program was developed to meet the need for greater continuity in the educational process, the need for constructive use of the long vacation months. The purpose—to speed up preparation for college by stimulating higher attainment and by effecting a saving of time.

Second*—DEVELOP A YEAR-ROUND PROGRAM

In 1928 the speed-up program of the summer session at the School-Camp was extended to a year-round educational system by the founding of Wassookeag School. By actual count over a period of twelve years, the majority of Wassookeag students have begun the school year in July rather than September—an "accelerated program" on the secondary level.

Third*—BEGIN NOW

Wassookeag's function in education has been the planning and directing of timesaving programs for schoolboys. Over six hundred such programs, each different because each boy is different, have been followed through at the School and the School-Camp. Send for information regarding the extent of scholastic schedule and the types of speed-up programs that schoolboys have carried successfully, that can be built into a well-balanced school experience and a well-balanced summer vacation.

The BOWDOIN ALUMNUS, published November, February, May and August by Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine. Subscription $1.50 year. Single copies, 40 cents. Entered as Second Class Matter, November 21, 1927, at the Post Office at Brunswick, Maine, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

ON June 24 Bowdoin will complete 150 years of corporate existence. That fact, significant in the annals of American education, will be as appropriately observed as wartime conditions permit, not only by the throng of Bowdoin men who can make their way to the old campus but also by dignitaries of state and nation, delegates from many other American colleges and by distinguished guests from far and near.

Combined with the Sesquicentennial celebration will be the exercises of Bowdoin's 139th Commencement. Not the sort of Commencement with which Bowdoin men are familiar but a handful of candidates who have been able to complete their course will receive baccalaureate degrees and at least one class, the fifty-year class, will hold a modest reunion. Most scheduled reunions are being deferred awaiting the Victory Reunion when peace is won but it seems altogether fitting that 1894, which was graduated at the time of the Centennial of the College, should make its fiftieth reunion a part of the observance of Bowdoin's 150th birthday.

Not the least noteworthy feature of the Sesquicentennial will be the announcement of the Alumni Fund results. Dedicated to Bowdoin's first 150 years, the Alumni Fund of 1943-44 will present to the College eloquent and tangible evidence of the undying affection and loyalty which Bowdoin men have for their Alma Mater. Literally from all quarters of the globe have come those evidences. At this writing more than 2200 former students have responded to the Fund's appeal. Fund Directors believe that the number will increase materially in the few remaining days of the Fund year and that the objective to enroll 3000, one-half of the living Bowdoin men, will be reached.

Whether graduate or not, whether rich or poor in worldly goods, whether his stay at Brunswick numbered four years or four months, no Bowdoin man will deny that Bowdoin has a place in his heart, that Bowdoin gave him something real and lasting. He will insist that the opportunity to get that precious something must not be denied to worthy youths of coming generations.

Bowdoin men know the present needs of the College and are determined to meet them. They know that the next few years will bring problems and they pledge their help in solving them. They are resolved that "there shall always be a Bowdoin" and they know that the most effective channel for their support of the College is the Alumni Fund. As his contribution goes toward Massachusetts Hall each Bowdoin son proposes the toast, "Here's to Bowdoin, 150 years young."

We are indebted to friends at the Naval Air Station for the cover picture. As no previously taken air view does, this dramatic shot of Bowdoin's campus provides both a beautiful photograph and a recording of the College in 1944 which is remarkable for its detail. Although Whittier and Pickard Fields are not visible, Maine Street and the Mall, the Androscoggin River and bridge, Topsham Fair Grounds and eight of the eleven fraternity houses can be seen.

This and several other air pictures presented to the College form a valued and appreciated addition to the College records.

Thanks to the efforts of Professor Herbert R. Brown the fine old painting of Bowdoin about 1821 has been reproduced and hand colored. It is expected that copies ready for framing will be available to Alumni at Commencement time.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Brunswick, Maine
June 2, 1944

To the Alumni:

In these days so critical for the college it is enheartening indeed to record that our alumni and friends have rallied to our support with remarkable energy and effectiveness. First of all, I wish to express the deep appreciation of Bowdoin in its corporate capacity for the admirable work of the Directors of the Alumni Fund, and in particular of its chairman, Mr. Dwight Sayward of the class of 1916; of the Class Agents, those persistent and untiring workers; and last but by no means least, of the Alumni Secretary, Mr. Seward Marsh of the class of 1912 who has been so very helpful and efficient in the campaign. The Alumni Fund is one of the most important assets of the college, of more and more value as the years go by. If in the next few days we all unite we can make the record for our sesquicentennial year a glorious one. Although the financial stringency which is already upon us may necessitate the postponement of some of the cherished plans of the Directors, we look forward in the future to such co-operation that the appeals to the alumni will have even more weight than in the past, and that the Fund will have more and more cumulative effect.

It has been most encouraging also to hear from Bowdoin men in the service, scattered to the utmost parts of the earth, that the ALUMNUS is eagerly looked forward to and even more eagerly read. It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that the sun never sets anywhere in the world without shining on some Bowdoin man thinking and reading about his college. The ALUMNUS is one of our best unifying agencies.

Moreover, I cannot remember a year when the alumni dinners have been more largely attended or in themselves more interesting. In Cleveland, Newark, Springfield, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Portland, Washington and Augusta, to mention only those associations whose annual meetings this year I have been able to attend, the loyalty to the college was remarkably keen, the desire to support and improve it clearer than ever. And the same reports have come in from other alumni gatherings. And so while the college here in Brunswick is smaller than for nearly one hundred years, with a student enrollment about 22% of normal, the larger Bowdoin composed of her sons all over the world with nearly a third of them in the armed forces is strong, united, confident, realizing that in the words of a young graduate: "Bowdoin is still holding its head high even though that head is for the time being wearing a garrison cap."

There have been of course many problems to solve, many difficulties to meet. When it is remembered that at the end of January there were over 825 men on the campus, and at the end of May fewer than 325, it can be seen what war conditions bring about. I remarked humorously the other day that in the past twenty-five months the President of the College had to make more decisions than in the twenty-five previous years of his administration. These decisions were generously shared and the burdens entailed cheerfully borne by all the other officers, members of the faculty, and employees of the College. But we should always keep in mind that such troubles are very minor compared with the real sacrifices being made by the men on the fighting fronts and by their families. Once every fortnight during the year past a service of remembrance has been held in the chapel at which prayers have been said for all Bowdoin men in the armed forces, with particular mention of those who have given their lives for their country.

With mingled sorrow and pride, sorrow that we cannot be as joyous as in peace, and pride for the record of the college in war, we shall welcome back on June 24th all those sons of the college who may be able under restricted travel conditions to be present on the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the birthday of the college. Bowdoin will likewise be thinking of those who cannot come but who in spirit will be with us on the historic day. As a former member of the faculty, now a Lieutenant with the Army in Italy, wrote me not long, since it is not inappropriate that the college whose history is almost coterminous with that of our country, should celebrate its Sesquicentennial with her sons fighting in all quarters of the globe for those ideals of liberty and the freedom of the mind which both our republic and our college exemplify.

Kenneth C. M. Sills.

President.

Sesquicentennial Preview

A TRAIL which began in 1794 when the present campus was a sandy plain covered with blueberries and pines will reach a memorable turning point on Saturday, June twenty-fourth. On that date, exactly one hundred and fifty years after Governor Samuel Adams of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts signed the Charter creating a college in the District of Maine, Bowdoin will celebrate the event with a sesquicentennial program. The anniversary exercises will be notable ones, befitting a college established during the administration of President George Washington and possessed of a proud history nearly coextensive with that of the Republic to which it has made so distinguished a contribution.

Although the shadows of a World War which has enlisted the services of more than two thousand Bowdoin men will fall athwart the campus this June, the College hopes to welcome home alumni many of whom will be in the uniforms of their country. An even larger company of graduates and friends will hear the addresses at the Sesquicentennial Dinner broadcast over WGAN and WBZ on Saturday afternoon. Many other loyal sons deployed on a far flung battle line in all parts of the globe will turn their hearts and minds to Brunswick as their Alma Mater observes its birthday by affirming its faith in the survival of free institutions.

Ernest Martin Hopkins, LL.D., president of Dartmouth College, will give the anniversary address in the First Parish Church on Saturday morning at 10.30 o'clock. Robert Peter Tristram Coffin '15 will read his sesquicentennial poem. President Sills will greet the delegates of sister institutions and confer a number of baccalaureate degrees, in addition to the honorary degrees to be conferred upon representative leaders in various fields of endeavor. The formal exercises in The First Parish Church will be followed by the Sesquicentennial Dinner in the Sargent Gymnasium at 1 o'clock at which time there will be several brief addresses by distinguished guests of the College. Later in the afternoon, President and Mrs. Sills will receive the alumni, friends, and guests at 85 Federal Street from four to six o'clock. At nine o'clock in the evening, on the campus, the Masque and Gown Society will present Shakespeare's pastoral comedy, As You Like It. On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, The Very Reverend Chester Burge Emerson '04 will give the sermon at a Service of Thanksgiving and Remembrance. An afternoon concert in Memorial Hall by the Boston String Quartet under the direction of Professor Frederic Erle Thornlay Tillotson will conclude the series of events.

Many of the events will fall into the familiar pattern of commencement activities: the Governing Boards will return for their regular meetings, the academic procession will move as of yore to the music of Chandler's Band, a group of black-robed Seniors (whose gowns may cover the Army khaki and the Navy blue) will receive their degrees in course, the customary awards and reports will be made to the alumni at the dinner in the gymnasium, and unnumbered (and unrationed) lobsters will make their annual sacrifice to Bowdoin hospitality.

Commencement it will be, but commencement with a difference. One hundred and fiftieth birthdays are too rare—and too significant—to pass unnoticed. This June the Bowdoin family will be happily augmented by the presence of delegates from our sister colleges in Maine, representatives from the Association of Colleges of New England, and delegates from American institutions of learning whose charters go back to the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Bowdoin will also have as her guests representatives of the secondary schools of New England and the Middle Atlantic States from which the College has drawn many of her graduates. The honorary degree list, a longer one than usual, will enable the college to share her birthday honors with a generous number of distinguished persons. In keeping with Bowdoin tradition, the names of the candidates for honorary degrees will be withheld until their citations are read by President Sills.

Returning alumni and guests will be reminded on many sides of the long history of the College. Historical exhibits in Hubbard Hall will present a documentary and pictorial narrative of Bowdoin's one hundred and fifty years from the granting of the Charter to the special sesquicentennial number of the Orient to be issued on June 24. The New York Public Library is also planning a similar exhibition in honor of the College. An anniversary number of the Quill will contain a re-printing of distinguished contributions of the past. Not all the glances will be to the past; anniversaries are also forward-looking affairs. Plans for the Sesquicentennial Institute on Education in the Post War World will be announced at the Alumni Dinner, as well as a report on the progress made by the recently established Placement Service. Bowdoin's one hundred fiftieth anniversary bids fair to look forward with confidence as well as to proceed with pride. The officers of the College hope that all alumni who can do so will regard this brief preview as an invitation to come to Brunswick on June 24.

are reported. Candidates for positions will be handled by the usual personnel procedure, and a complete history of each person will be forwarded to the committee chairman requesting such information.

Whenever possible, it is advisable to send in specific requirements for the opening in order that the Bureau may locate the best qualified candidate for the opportunity. Although the questionnaire is being sent only to those in the service, others may register with the Bureau if they are interested in placement information or are able in any way to assist the work of the Bureau.

The Bureau will continue to function on a permanent basis after the war. In this way, the College offers assistance to students in obtaining information about the nature, and rewards of various positions in industry and the professions and to learn of opportunities for permanent employment in these occupations. While the selection of a position as well as the choice of a career must, of course, be left to the individual, the office has information available which enables it to assist the applicant in making an intelligent choice. Through previous connections and through contacts made, the Bureau will have current information on business opportunities in this ever-changing world. These opportunities all demand men possessing certain qualifications, and the Bureau must be governed accordingly in suggesting properly qualified candidates. The voluntary vocational committees, of course, will continue to operate in the future, for the success of the Bureau depends in large measure upon their cooperation.

As the new Bureau begins its work, tribute should be paid to Dean Paul Nixon of the College for his untiring efforts in carrying on the work of contact and placement, in addition to his many other duties for over a quarter of a century. Many Bowdoin men owe him a debt of gratitude for his friendly counsel and advice regarding their business and professional careers.

Already many letters have come to the Director indicating general interest in this new college service to Alumni. Particularly helpful at this time would be offers to assist in placing discharged service men. The Placement Office is at 302 Massachusetts Hall; the telephone is Brunswick 1055.

The Placement Bureau

SAMUEL A. LADD, JR. '29

PRESIDENT SILLS stated at a recent Boston Bowdoin Alumni dinner, "Even in the midst of the present confusion and uncertainty, the College now plans for the future, immediate and remote." One of the long-felt needs of the College has been filled in this Sesquicentennial Year by the establishment of the Placement Bureau. Samuel A. Ladd, Jr., class of 1929, has been appointed Director of the Bureau with an office in Massachusetts Hall. The creation of the Bureau by the College at this time was made possible only by the loyal support of Bowdoin alumni everywhere.

Recognizing the acute problem of placement in the period immediately following the end of the war, the Bureau plans to conduct a survey of all the Bowdoin men in the armed services in order to learn more fully of their post war plans.

The Bureau's War Service Survey will take the form of a questionnaire to the more than two thousand Bowdoin men in service. All men will be asked to fill out the blank, giving as much information as possible, although many will not wish to register with the Bureau for post-war assistance. The information thus obtained will aid the Alumni Office in maintaining up-to-date information for the records. The returns from the questionnaire will be carefully analyzed and placed on file, awaiting the return of men from active service. Records of surveys conducted by other institutions show that many plan to continue their education. Others will not be in need of help, as they plan to return to their former business or occupation. Some will welcome aid from the College in making contacts in business, industry, or the professions when they return.

"The future belongs to those who prepare for it." Surely, Bowdoin men not in the service of our country will be willing to help prepare and secure the future for those who fight for us. The work of the Bureau is a cooperative affair in which all alumni share. The Bureau welcomes suggestions and advice at all times, and needs your full cooperation in order that the work be most effective.

The immediate necessity is that of developing a procedure to handle the return of Bowdoin men in the best possible manner without delay. To that end, voluntary vocational committees will be formed in every locality where any number of Bowdoin men reside. Each group will have a chairman who will surround himself with a committee of Bowdoin men sincerely interested in the problem and able to take adequate time from their employment to counsel and advise the candidates for positions. The strength of the plan depends on the selection of the committee men. Their selection for appointment must be made carefully. These committees should explore their communities for post war sources of employment and report to the Bureau any new or expanding business situations in their area. They should also find it helpful to work with other post war committees, national and local—such as the U. S. Employment Service, Committees for Economic Development, and the various veterans' rehabilitation organizations. The Bureau will act as a clearing house for all such information regarding openings as they

Two Chief Justices

to Two Eminent Classmates*

THE ALUMNUS for May of last year carried a statement (inspired by a well know Bowdoin Class) calling attention to notable members of the Class of 1816, one of whom was Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Maine. This brings to mind the somewhat noteworthy coincidence that the present Chief Justices of the Maine Supreme Judicial Court and the New Hampshire Supreme when his classmate, Governor Percival P. Baxter, appointed him justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine. His elevation to the position of Chief Justice of that Court followed in fitting recognition of his highly capable and efficient performance of his judicial duties.

Judge Marble, after acting as principal of Gorham, New Hampshire, High School (1899-1901), studied at Harvard Law School from which he graduated in 1904, and practiced in Berlin, New Hampshire, for some twelve years. Like his classmate, his progress to the van of his profession was rapid, and his appointment to the Superior Court of New Hampshire in 1917 came as no surprise to his brother attorneys. His performance of the duties of that office was so satisfactory to the public and the Bar that his elevation to the Supreme Court in 1925, and later to the dignity of Chief Justice, followed in natural sequence.

Such, in brief, is the very similar professional history of these two Chiefs. Each modestly insists that his appointment as Chief Justice came because of seniority and does not indicate merit. From this dictum the members of the Bar register vehement dissent.

What effect did his college experience have upon the subsequent career of each of these two loyal Bowdoin men?

Sturgis, born March 3, 1877, in New Gloucester, Maine, received his preparatory education at Edward Little High School in Auburn, Maine, and entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1894. A slender youth, who soon acquired the sobriquet of "Kid", full of vigor (or the devil, as one of his professors said), friendly, mentally alert, but with no great fondness for study or ambition for scholastic honors, although ranking above the average, he enjoyed college life to the full. He had, withal, a streak of persistence, a spirit of investigation, which have served him well in his judicial career.

A vein of sentiment was exposed to the few who knew of the following incident: A professor who, by reason of a more than ordinarily nervous temperament, had been at times harried to exasperated comments upon Sturgis' nonchalant disregard for the subject before the class, decorated windows in the dormitory hall outside his classroom with boxes of flowering plants. Upon returning to classes, interrupted by several days of illness, and expecting only wilted specimens in the boxes, the surprised professor found flourishing plants. He never knew that during his absence the Court are Bowdoin alumni and classmates.

Hon. Guy Hayden Sturgis (LL.D., Bowdoin 1926) was appointed to his present high office in the Maine Court on August 8, 1940. Hon. Thomas Littlefield Marble (LL.D., Bowdoin 1926) was elevated to a like position in the New Hampshire Supreme Court on June 26, 1943. Both appointments were most cordially welcomed and heartily approved by the Bar of the two States.

Judge Sturgis attended the Columbia Law School, and began the practice of law in Portland in 1901. His diligence and recognized ability soon brought him to the fore in his profession. He was called to serve the State of Maine as Attorney General from 1917 to 1921. His record in that office made him a logical prospect for appointment to a judicial position which occurred on August 14, 1923, flowers had been carefully nurtured by that thorn-in-the-flesh, Sturgis.

HON. GUY H. STURGIS, LL.D. '98

One of Sturgis' salient traits, evident throughout his life, is courage. The writer recalls a vivid example of this, when memory presents the vision of sophomore Sturgis, a mere stripling, chasing across the campus a freshman giant, who but for his panic could have turned and flattened his sophomore tormentor with one hand.

Sturgis was a member of the Politics Club, which may have been the cause of his active and prominent participation in political affairs, until his appointment as Attorney General. He had an Ivy Day part, and delivered the Closing Address on Class Day. He is a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

Marble, born December 24, 1876, in Auburn, Maine, also received his preparatory school education at Edward Little High School, and matriculated at Bowdoin in the fall of 1894. Quiet, unassuming, fond of study, an able speaker, with literary leanings, he engaged in extra-curricular activities suited to his inclinations. He was a member of the Orient, Quill and Bugle Boards, won the second prize for Sophomore Prize Declamation and the first prize for the '68 Prize Speaking. He was Poet on Ivy Day. His scholastic talents brought him the Noyes Political Economy Prize and election to Phi Beta Kappa. He is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity.

So much for the college life of the two Chiefs, who received the Bachelor of Arts degree on June 23, 1898. To what extent their college training conduced to their success at the Bar and on the Bench is left to the reader for answer. A vote of their classmates at graduation would have forecast a highly successful business career for Guy Sturgis and an eventual professorship in some leading university for Tom Marble.

Certain factors, common to each, have contributed to their eminent judicial careers and to the respect in which they are held by all. These are an even disposition, judicial temperament, conscientious study of matters presented for decision, thoroughness, accuracy, attention to detail and keenness in striking to the core of controverted matters. It goes without saying that each has a sincere love for the law, is well versed in legal principles, has an analytic mind, is an indefatigable worker, has the ability to turn out work promptly, and is scrupulously courteous to members of the Bar. In the opinion of the legal profession, they are "sound", which is perhaps the highest praise a lawyer can bestow upon a judge.

Bowdoin men extend to these two distinguished alumni of the College hearty congratulations upon their well merited honors and wish them further years to carry on the fruitful service they are rendering to their respective States.

Among recent acquisitions by the College is a unique autograph sheet, the gift of Thomas W. Williams '10, in which Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe states "the moral" of Uncle Tom's Cabin.

On The Campus

Athletics

A YEAR ago a great many people thought it would not be worth while to attempt to have intercollegiate athletic teams, because there would be comparatively few students and because most of those would be of no more than high school age. We found, however, that the boys were very definitely interested, and teams have been maintained in basketball, swimming, track, baseball and tennis. We have had two baseball teams, in fact, one last summer and one this spring.

All of our teams have done well. We have accepted competition with any and all teams who wanted to play us, whether their teams were made up largely from Navy units or civilian students. The boys have had a lot of fun and have learned valuable lessons from their competition.

Our swimming team included as regular members three boys who have physical handicaps, but it showed no handicap in courage when it placed fourth in the New Englands, and scored four points to place tenth, in a tie with Princeton, in the National Collegiate meet. The boys paid their own way to New Haven to compete in this latter meet. Fortunately we later received a dividend from the Association to reimburse the boys.

In spring track we were able to use a few of the men from the Army Air Corps and from the Radar unit stationed here. With their help we easily defeated Bates in a dual meet and placed fifth in the New Englands, with a score of sixteen.

The tennis team has defeated Maine twice, and the J.V. team defeated Lewiston High in both of its contests.

The baseball team has defeated Maine twice, won one game and lost a game to Colby, and lost twice to Bates, a team made up largely from their Naval unit. Three boys from Bowdoin's State Championship team of last year are playing for Bates this spring. All of our teams, with the exception of track, have been made up of civilian students.

Adam Walsh, on leave of absence from Bowdoin, will go to Notre Dame on July first to help with their football team. He will be at Bowdoin a part of each year and will return to coach our team as soon as we take up football again. We were glad to make this arrangement and believe it should work out for the benefit of all concerned.

Phi Beta Kappa

WAR-TIME elections to the Bowdoin chapter of Phi Beta Kappa up to and including the delegation from the Class of 1944, have been almost normal as regards number. The first marked shrinkage will be noticed, probably, in the Class of 1945, from which, of course, the quota is not yet filled. Men chosen from the last three classes have been the following:—

From 1943, R. S. Burton, C. R. Crimmin, D. L. Cross, A. L. Gammon, J. W. Hoopes, Jr., J. F. Jaques, D. C. Larrabee, J. B. Matthews, Jr., P. M. Rinaldo, L. H. Stone, J. A. Tuttle;

From 1944, R. W. Brown, G. A. Burpee, D. Carmichael, R. E. Colton, S. B. Cressey, B. H. Golden, S. E. Hayes, J. E. Hess, H. L. Osher, A. S. Perry, D. A. Sears, R. E. Williams;

From 1945, K. M. Baker, Jr., A. M. Perry, Jr., W. C. Philoon, Jr., D. W. Ross.

Following initiations, two evening meetings, both open to the community, have been held in the current year. On October 18, the President of the College and of the Chapter, Dr. Sills, addressed members and guests on "Experiences of a Public Member of the War Labor Board," and on February 21 Professor Stanley Barney Smith spoke on "The Jolly Beggars."

The triennial meeting of the Council, or national legislative body of the fraternity, which would normally have been held in September, 1943, was postponed on account of the war. No decision regarding the time and place of the next meeting has yet been announced.

A number of special initiations have been conducted by alumni acting for the Chapter. Three of these private ceremonies have been held under rather unusual circumstances. On June 17, 1942, Robert S. Burton '43, then an aviation cadet, was initiated in the United States Senate Office Building in Washington by his father, Hon. Harold H. Burton '09, in the presence of Hon. Owen Brewster '09 and Fletcher Knebel of the Miami University Chapter. On May 10, 1943, Pvt. Donald L. Cross '43 was initiated at Vinthill Farms, Warrenton, Virginia, by Sgt. Jeffrey J. Carre '40. On March 17, 1944, at Harvard University, in the office in Widener Library of Robert H. Haynes '19, Ens. John A. Tuttle '43 was initiated by President Sills, in the presence of Mr. Haynes and the Secretary of the Chapter.

Bowdoin On The Air

SINCE the last ALUMNUS there have been broadcasts of an intercollegiate debate, talks, and music. On March 2 Lewis Fickett '47 and a Bates College representative debated the post-war role of women in industry. On the following program, Rolfe Glover '45 interviewed the Honorable William F. Sands, author and former diplomat, concerning the latter's experiences as advisor to the Emperor of Korea. The next three broadcasts included vocal selections by Stanley Altman '47 and Lloyd Knight '45, and a program of music by a string trio composed of John Friedmann '47, David Demaray '47 and Robert Hunter '47.

On May 11 Professors Herbert R. Brown, Robert P. T. Coffin, Frederic Tillotson, and Lloyd Knight '45 gave a Harriet Beecher Stowe program. Professor Coffin read his ballad The Little Woman Started the Big War.

Professor Brown followed with a talk in which he discussed Mrs. Stowe's place in American literature. He closed his talk with the following passage:

Mrs. Stowe was wise enough to know that there is another slavery, no less galling than that of the blacks. She knew—as we are learning today—that a world which holds happiness for some, but chained misery for others, cannot long endure. She sensed in her prophetic wisdom that every generation must stand ready to give their lives that men may be free. In this age-old struggle, our own Civil War was but one battle in man's eternal quest for dignity and freedom.

This then is the secret of Harriet Beecher Stowe's power. It is this secret—long after the moral excitement of the 1850's has died—which gives to Uncle Tom's Cabin in its moments of profound and authentic passion the power to stir the hearts of men.

Lloyd Knight '45, accompanied on the organ by Professor Tillotson, concluded the program with The Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Dean Paul Nixon spoke to the radio listeners on May 25, and Professor Athern P. Daggett on June 8. For the June 22 broadcast, Professor George H. Quinby has prepared a program in which eight members of the Masque and Gown will present some interesting facts in the history of the organization and a number of readings and songs from As You Like It, the sesquicentennial play. The broadcasts continue to be given on alternate Thursday evenings at 7.45 over radio station WGAN, Portland.

Dramatics

THE Masque and Gown presented the farce comedy, Goodbye Again, as its spring offering and a Red Cross benefit on March 17 and 18. Despite the alarm thrown into the community by a fire bug operating on the night of St. Patrick's Day, the play received encouraging support from the audiences, which were composed in nearly equal parts of townspeople, college, and service men. An interesting development, which is likely to expand in the future, was the use of a returned student, an invalided Marine, in the cast. Incidentally, his performance received high praise.

As You Like It is now in rehearsal for the Sesquicentennial. Unlike the last performances in 1915 and 1916, it will be played in the evening rather than in the afternoon, under the campus trees rather than on the Art Building Terrace, and with girls rather than students in the female parts. But like the earlier presentations, it will benefit from the skillful stage version arranged by the late Mrs. Arthur Brown, who kindly turned her prompt scripts over to the Masque and Gown.

Many alumni of the pre-First-World-War days will remember the earlier production, the first ever to play two years in succession, with a full-sized tree "planted" on the Art Building Terrace, Julian Gray and John Churchill in the leads, supported by the late Forbes Rickard, Bill Ireland, Sydney Brown, John Thomas, Bill Tackaberry, Eric Achorn, and Tobey Mooers, among others.

With Director of Dramatics Quin-by on leave from August to February, As You Like It may be the last major production on campus until next spring . . . The membership of the club has held up remarkably well considering the number of men in college, and the executive committee has hopes of encouraging men interested in dramatics to continue writing plays, some of which may be produced next fall.

Music

THE Department of Music has been able to carry on a rather full program despite the dwindling numbers of civilian students. With the aid of faculty members, townspeople and members of uniformed groups, a mixed chorus has presented an ambitious program and has underway plans for the annual performance of the Messiah at Christmas time and the Brahms Requiem in the spring of 1945. The chorus will sing at the Sesquicentennial exercises in June.

The twenty men of the a capella choir have carried on the unbroken tradition of recent years. Most of the work is devoted to music before 1700.

The presence of students with unusual vocal and instrumental talent has made possible several student recitals. Tea has followed these programs.

Friday musical chapel services have been a regular feature of the college year.

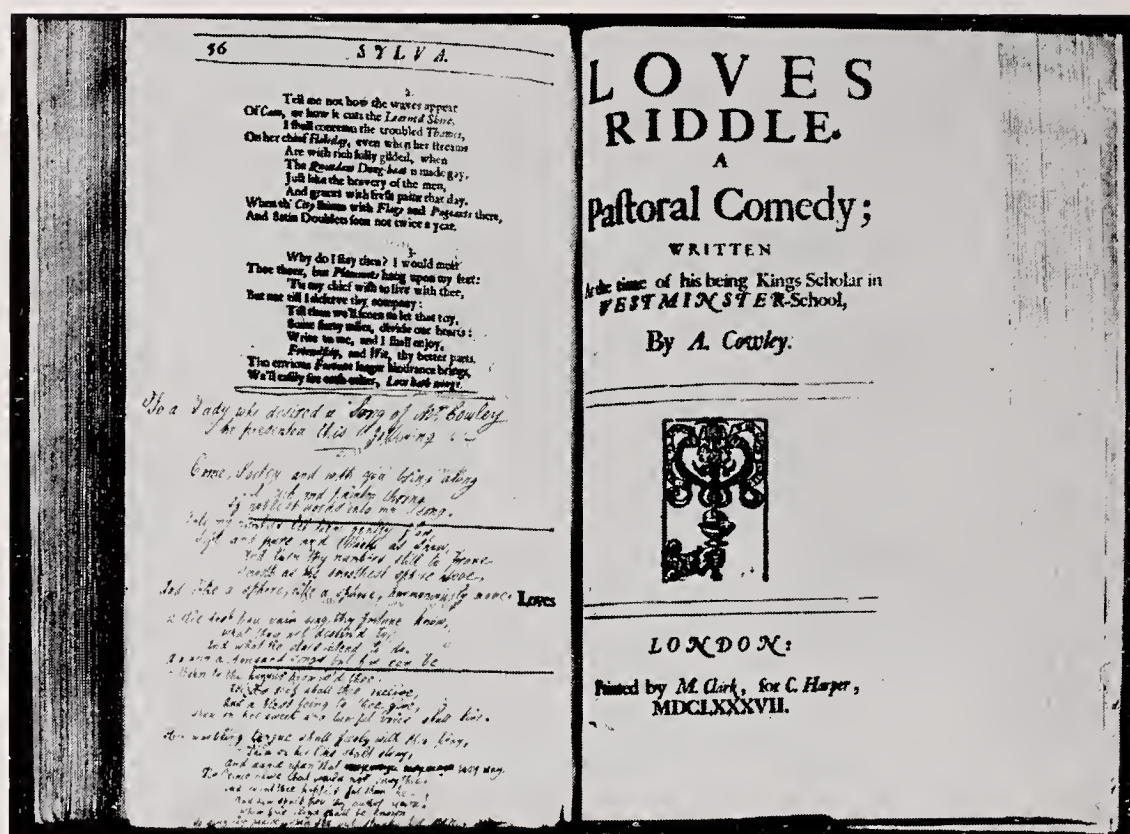

Although the attempts to reorganize the college band have not been successful, it is hoped a concert band may be assembled in the fall.

The college concert course, presenting renowned artists was well supported during the past year and a course of eight concerts is planned for the 1944-45 season.

Reunions continue to be deferred awaiting the grand Victory Reunion when peace is won. The fifty year class, however, plans a modest gathering of its members. Graduating as the College observed its Centennial, 1894 will celebrate its fiftieth as Bowdoin observes its Sesquicentennial. Headquarters will be established in the Lounge of the Pickard Field House. Francis W. Dana, Class Secretary, expects that nearly all surviving members will be present on June 24.

Frederick G. Roth, internationally known sculptor who created the Bowdoin Polar Bear, died at his Englewood, N. J. home on May 21 at the age of 72. In reporting his death, the New York Times of May 22 told of Mr. Roth's lifelong work as a sculptor and of his rise to fame on both sides of the Atlantic. Former President of the National Sculpture Society, a Fellow of the National Academy and of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and the one time chief sculptor of the New York City's Park Department, Mr. Roth has left to posterity many notable works of art for which he was awarded many prizes and medals. Among these are "the heroic bronze lion which dominates Columbia University's Baker Field, a gift of the class of 1899 on its twenty-fifth anniversary and the huge granite Polar Bear presented to Bowdoin College by the class of 1912, during whose freshman year Admiral Perry discovered the North Pole."

Books

THE QUILL

On June 24 a new, special issue of The Bowdoin Quill will be brought out. Another Bowdoin tradition will thus be continued despite the war. It is to be a special sesquicentennial number, and it seems that it will really be "something extra." The plan is to include some of the best stories and poems of former Quills, starting with the first issue in 1897 and bringing it up to the present. Those represented will include Kenneth Sills '01, C. Wilbert Snow '07, Robert P. T. Coffin '15, Hodding Carter '31, John Schaffner III '35, Arthur Stratton '35 and others. The whole volume will contain about eighty pages, printed on special paper, and enclosed by a beautiful new cover.

It is hoped that the magazine will be available for those interested during the sesquicentennial week-end. Many will, of course, not be able to be present. A limited number of copies are to be set aside for them. They may be obtained by writing to Kenneth Boyer, The Bowdoin College Library, Brunswick, Maine and enclosing a five cent stamp to cover postage.

CHARLES LAMB'S COPY OF COWLEY

"I wish the good old times would come again," [Bridget] said, "when we were not quite so rich. I do not mean that I want to be poor; but there was a middle state"—so she was pleased to ramble on,—“in which we were a great deal happier. . . . Do you remember the brown suit, which you made to hang upon you, till all your friends cried shame upon you, it grew so threadbare—and all because of that folio Beaumont and Fletcher, which you dragged home late at night from Barker's in Covent Garden? Do you remember how we eyed it for weeks before we could make up our minds to the purchase? . . . ”—"Old China," Essays of Elia.

One cannot dissociate Charles Lamb from his books, his shelves of "ragged veterans," for ever about his gentle name and fame will cling the scent of musty calf and faded morocco. By happy accident one of Elia's most treasured folios has been exhumed in the College Library: his copy of the works of Abraham Cowley, with several pages of additions and sundry marginal emendations in the handwriting of "St. Charles" himself.

The provenance of this unique volume is easily traced. Lamb's library, according to William Carew Hazlitt,¹ was entrusted to his publisher-friend Edward Moxon, of London, who disposed of sixty items through Messrs. Welford and Scribner, of New York. In the dispersal of these volumes at private sale in February 1848, Cyrus Woodman, of Boston, purchased four: the works of Bacon, Fulke Greville, Suckling, and Cowley. Of these, the Cowley (Item 10) fetched the highest figure: $10. (Others of Lamb's treasured folios at that sale came dearer: his Chaucer and Ben Jonson, $25; his Drayton, $32; his Donne, $40.)

out from Bowdoin to become a distinguished lawyer and land agent in Illinois and Wisconsin, in which latter state he was a member of the legislature. Subsequently he made Cambridge, Massachusetts, his residence, and was an Overseer of the College from 1873 until his death in 1889—giving scholarship funds which today total more than $70,000. Through his daughter, Miss Mary Woodman, Lamb's Cowley was presented, with certain other volumes, to the Bowdoin Library in June 1924. Rebound (by Gardinier, of Boston) in black morocco, with simple gilt tooling, the folio has lain modestly but uncomplainingly for two decades amongst some biblia a-biblia in Hubbard Hall.

Lamb's esteem for Cowley is an old story to all Elians, and his attraction to the worldly and witty Royalist is easily accounted for. "Blakesmoor in H—shire" has a wistful reference to his grandmother Field's "cheerful storeroom, in whose hot window-seat I used to sit and read Cowley." And he wrote to Coleridge on January 10, 1797: "In all our comparisons of taste, I do not know whether I have ever heard your opinion of a poet, very dear to me, the now out of fashion Cowley—favor me with your judgment of him, and tell me if his prose essays, in particular, as well as no inconsiderable part of his verse, be not delicious. I prefer the graceful rambling of his essays, even to the courtly elegance and ease of Addison."² Earlier, in May 1796, in a letter to Coleridge enclosing some verses Lamb confesses, "Cowley's exquisite Elegy on the death of his friend Harvey suggested [a] phrase."³ In "The South Sea House" essay, among the gallery of "odd fishes" was one John Tipp, whom Elia characterizes with a line, "His pen was not less erring than his heart," lifted from Cowley's "On the Death of Sir Anthony Vandyck."

²Lamb's Letters, ed. Lucas, I, 85.

¹The *Lamb*s, 1897, pp. 61-7.

In his census of volumes from Lamb's library, Mr. E. V. Lucas cites, in connection with the Cowley folio, J. M. Gutch as writing (in Notes and Queries, April 10, 1852), "With my school-fellow Charles Lamb, and his sister, Cowley's prose essays were always especial favorites, and were esteemed by them as some of the best specimens of the 'well of English undefiled.'"⁴

The volume in question is the eighth edition of Cowley's Works, London, 1693.⁵ Formerly the property of Henry Carr (unidentified), it has nowhere the signature of Lamb, but contains a sprinkling of emendations in his—and others'—handwriting, and two long additions of Cowley's poems: (1) "To a Lady who desired a Song of Mr. Cowley he presented this following—

Come, Poetry, and with you bring along
A rich and plaintive throng...."

(24 lines)

and (2) To the Duke of Buckingham upon his Marriage with the Lord Fairfax his daughter.—

(86 lines)

In addition, in a hand not Lamb's appear: "Inter Musas Cantabrigienses extant Carmina sequentia ab Auctore A. Cowley conscripta—

(1) De felici partu Reginae Mariae

(2) Ob paciferum Serenissimi Regis Caroli e Scotia reditum."

"It is a hard and nice Subject for a Man to write of himself . . ." So begins Cowley's essay "Of Myself," generally regarded as the first intimate essay in our tongue. There is a certain thrill, not alone to bibliophiles, in reading those famous words in Lamb's own copy of Cowley. Elia's greatest treasures remain, as they should, in England: the Beaumont and ⁴*Life of Lamb*, II, 315.

Fletcher folio is safe in the British Museum (or some bomb-proof vault in Wales for the Nazi nuisance nonce); and his Burton, Sir Thomas Brown, Spenser, and others of his books-a-bosom have never crossed the Atlantic. But it is not altogether unseemly for the college of Longfellow and Hawthorne to take pride in the possession of Charles Lamb's Cowley. "Association items" seldom involve such a double primacy as does this annotated folio; for of the English personal essayists Cowley was the first, and Lamb remains the best beloved. The shades of Bowdoin's men of letters would nod approvingly, remembering Elia's reflection, in "Thoughts on Books and Reading," that "The sweetest names, and which carry a perfume in the mention, are, Kit Marlowe, Drayton, Drummond of Hawthornden, and Cowley."

A presentation volume from LONGFELLOW to Professor ALPHEUS S. PACKARD, this association item, the gift of JOHN WILLIAM FROST '04, is a recent welcome addition to the Longfellow Collection. The book is Le Odi di Anacreonte e di Saffo, Recate in Versi Italiani da Giovanni Caselli, issued at Florence in 1819.

Professor Packard, Class of 1816 (A.M., '19; D.D., '60)—whose long and honorable Bowdoin career included a year of acting Presidency—was appointed Collins Professor of Natural and Revealed Religion in 1864. In 1869, the year of the poet's inscription, he became also Librarian. The Greek-Italian text of Anacreon and Sappho is evidently one which Longfellow had picked up during his sojourn in Florence earlier in 1869, before his return to Craigie House in the autumn.

Alumni Associations And Clubs

Fifty-one members assembled at the Augusta House, Thursday, May 18, for the annual meeting of the Kennebec Alumni Association. President Horace Ingraham '24 turned the meeting over to Burleigh Martin '10 who eloquently presented Bursar Glenn McIntire '25, Alumni Secretary Seward Marsh '12, Capt. Donald Morse '41 AAF and President Sills. In his account of wartime Bowdoin and the uncertainties of the next few years, President Sills expressed gratitude for the loyal support of the alumni and repeated that such support confirmed him in his belief that "Bowdoin's best years were clearly the years ahead." Five times decorated for service to the country, Don Morse held the rapt attention of the gathering with a recital of some experiences during his two and one-half years and one hundred ten flying missions in the Southwest Pacific area. Officers elected for 1944-45 were: President, Charles A. Knight '96; 1st Vice President, Samuel H. Slosberg '30; 2nd Vice President, Gardner K. Heath '09; Secretary and Treasurer, Bernard Lucas, '28. The Club pledged its efforts to interesting local boys in entering Bowdoin.

BOSTON

Senator Harold H. Burton '09 of Ohio was the chief speaker at the annual meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Boston held at the Statler Hotel on Thursday evening, April 13, 1944. About 300 members gathered to greet him, Governor Leverett Saltonstall H'40 and President Sills. Following a brief speech of greeting by the Massachusetts Governor, Senator Burton made a stirring plea for a united home front that there might be preserved for our fighting men a nation of freedom and opportunity. He called for a postwar plan which entails leadership and military strength ample to secure for ourselves and for the world military economic and political stability. President Sills described the wartime Bowdoin, outlined some of the problems which the College faced and stressed the importance of insuring the continuance of liberal education in America and throughout the world. He said there must be a fifth freedom, freedom of mind. President James F. Claverie '10 expressed gratification for the alumni response which had resulted in one of the largest and most enthusiastic Bowdoin gatherings in years and pledged the members to a continuing support of the College that her second 150 years should be as glorious as her first. Professor Tillotson accompanied Lloyd Knight '45 in a group of songs and led the group singing. The following officers of the Club were elected for the ensuing year: President, Don J. Edwards '16; Secretary, William P. Sawyer '36; Treasurer, Edward F. Chase '38.

CHICAGO

The Association of Chicago met at the Union League Club on Tuesday, May 9. In the absence of the president, Kenneth R. Tefft '09, the Secretary, Joseph H. Newell '12 presided. He read letters of greeting from President Sills and from Samuel A. Ladd, Jr., '28, the new Placement Director and introduced Seward Marsh, the Alumni Secretary, who reported on present day campus conditions. Members pledged their immediate services to securing some Chicago boys as entering freshmen. Others present were Prof. Edward A. Duddy '07, Robert Hagy '36, John L. Snider '31, Donald E. Jones '29, Edward B. Simpson '28, Clarence B. Flint '01, Howard E. Kroll '25, Daniel W. Boxwell '38, George V. Craighead '25 and Mr. Albert S. Long, father of Al Long '44.

DETROIT

The spring meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Detroit was held at the Hotel Barlum on Monday, May 8. Manager Max McKinnon '15 and Mrs. McKinnon placed the hotel's facilities at the disposal of twenty alumni and wives who met for dinner and a round table meeting in a mezzanine parlor. President Stanley F. Dole '13 read the greetings of President Sills and a letter from the Placement Director. The Alumni Secretary told of conditions at Bowdoin and made a plea for Michigan students in the entering class. Members present promised activity to that end and also agreed to handle Bowdoin's entire placement problems if necessary. Opinion was expressed that not only should more Michigan boys attend Bowdoin but also more Bowdoin graduates should take up Detroit careers. Others present were Mrs. Dole, Stanley F. Dole, Jr. '47, Hillard S. Hart '21, Mr. and Mrs. George O. Cutter '27, Randall W. Snow '36, Robert E. Chandler '41, Charles J. Harkins '37, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Hight '16, Thomas J. Dugan '39, Capt. J. R. Ridlon '03, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Nichols '12. Mr. and Mrs. Meredith B. Auten '12 and

LOS ANGELES

New officers of the Association of Southern California are: President, William R. Spinney '13; Vice President, Dr. Gordon R. Howard '21; Secretary, George C. Wheeler '01. These three together with Dr. Holland G. Hambleton M'15 and Clifford R. Foster '17 form the club's executive committee. Plans are being formulated to interest local boys in attending Bowdoin.

OREGON

Daniel M. McDade '09, Convener of the Bowdoin Club of Oregon reports that the intercollegiate alumni gatherings which he instituted some years ago were being continued. Amherst was the sponsor of a recent meeting at which McDade and Frank S. Gannett '07 were the Bowdoin representatives. The Bowdoin group is to organize a meeting of New England college alumni this summer.

PORTLAND

Eighty members of the Bowdoin Club of Portland met for the annual dinner at the Portland Country Club on Tuesday, May 2. President Sills gave his annual off the record accounting of Bowdoin's activities and problems. Alumni Secretary Marsh told of the need for new students, distributed copies of the new illustrated catalogue and urged members to use them to interest prospective freshmen. Professors Tillotson and Quinby led the singing from the recently issued college song sheets. A highlight of the evening's program was Chairman George Cressey's report of the nominating committee. President Warren Eddy '14 stated that the club was organized with effective committees to assist not only in the recruiting of new students but also in effective assistance to the Placement Director. Leonard A. Pierce '05 was elected President for 1944-5 and Donald A. Leadbetter '28, Secretary and Treasurer.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

About fifty members of the Association of Washington met in the Pan American Room of the Statler Hotel on Monday, April 24 for their annual meeting with President Sills who told of Bowdoin's contribution to the war effort and of the uncertainties which the College faced. Of particular interest among the several responses made was a recounting made by Comdr. Donald B. MacMillan '98 of the reasons why he came to Bowdoin. Sumner T. Pike '13 was elected President for 1944-45 and Ernest A. Lister '38 was re-elected Secretary. Retiring President Harold N. Marsh '09 thanked the members for their cooperation and asked all to help locate the many Bowdoin men who must be among the newcomers to the area and to notify the Secretary whose address is 1925 Seminary Road, Parkfairfax, Alexandria, Va.

Where There's A Will There's A Way To Help Bowdoin College

The College has received notice of the following legacies:

$10,000 from Emma Jane Eaton to fund Scholarships for students who are graduates of Calais High School or natives of Washington County and one twenty-fifth of the income of a trust fund for general purposes of the College.

From Reginald R. Goodell '93, a seal ring the stone of which is pronounced to be of the period of the Roman poet Horace, a 16th century picture by Shalken, and a punch ladle dated 1776.

The Orient of seventy years ago carried a reminiscent account of the Commencement of 1852. Two Bowdoin graduates were rival candidates for the Presidency of the U. S.—Pierce '24 and Hale '27. Adherents to each candidate placed banners in strategic locations, and crowds gathered in the hope of seeing both candidates at once. To the disappointment of the many Free Soilers, Hale did not show up, but Pierce was present, very urbane and gracious.

Hon. Ether Shepley, Chief Justice of Maine, presided at the Commencement banquet. Governor Hubbard and staff were present, and over 500 attended.

The exercises opened with the familiar college hymn "lined out" by President Woods. J. S. C. Abbott '25 spoke on the beauties of Brunswick. Several speakers prophesied a glorious future for the College.

This was the spring of the famous "drill rebellion." The petition to the Boards against compulsory drill, signed by almost every undergraduate, having been denied, insubordination developed, and General Sanger disciplined some of the offenders. Nearly every man in the three lower classes abandoned his duties and went home.

The college authorities stood firm, relying on the good sense of the parents, and were not disappointed. After a short period when all college activities were suspended because of the absence of students, the boys began to come back again, and before the end of the term, all but three or four had returned. Drill was resumed, but the rebellion had its effect and compulsory drill was abandoned during the next year.

The Orient editorialized against discriminations in the granting of honorary degrees, urged that the number of Commencement parts should be reduced, and opposed the suggestion that the college year should be divided into two semesters instead of three terms.

The Orient inquired, "Where is Dan Pratt?" The "Great American Traveler" who appeared on the campus at intervals in the course of his peregrinations throughout the colleges of the country mysteriously dropped from sight at this time and was apparently not heard of again.

Every window in South Maine was broken by a celebrating group of students, the cost of replacement being borne by the item "average of repairs" in the term bills.

Room rent for the coming year was increased to the figure of $30 per room minimum, and $75 per room maximum, for the year. Tuition at this time was $75 a year; board for the college year averaged $125.00.

The citizens of Brunswick contributed $5000 to the College.

Class elections were free from fraternity politics.

The Walker Art Building was opened to the public on February 19, the statues of Sophocles and Demosthenes arriving from Italy and the two stone lions being installed soon afterwards. The paintings in the rotunda by Abbott Thayer and Kenyon Cox were completed.

The college grounds and buildings were valued at $450,000. The endowment (exclusive of the Garcelon fund) was $400,000, and there were 219 students.

The Centennial brought an attendance of visitors larger than that on any previous occasion, or indeed for many years to come.

The celebration began on Wednesday evening in the First Parish Church with an address by Rev. Egbert C. Smith '48 on Bowdoin's religious history.

Thursday morning Chief Justice Fuller '53 of the United States Supreme Court delivered an anniversary oration, and Arlo Bates '76, an anniversary poem.

Commencement dinner was held Tuesday noon in a tent where Hubbard Hall is now located, with 1200 in attendance. Hon. James McKeen

'64, president of the alumni association, presided, and spoke entertainingly of the College during its 100 years of existence.

The oldest graduate of the College, Rev. T. T. Stone of the class of 1820, spoke briefly and was followed by President Hyde on the subject of "Our Alma Mater."

Governor Cleaves spoke for the state. Former Senator Bradbury of the class of '25 reminisced; Chief Justice Peters made the speech which is still quoted fifty years later; Judge Simonds '60 spoke on "The Law"; and Professor Harris of Yale spoke in behalf of the Class of '33, all the six surviving members being present.

Rev. Elijah Kellogg '40, General Joshua L. Chamberlain '52, President Whitman of Colby, and Professor Smyth of Yale spoke on various subjects. President Barbour of the Congregational Church of Montreal spoke for the clergy, and Dr. Dudley Sargent '76 of Harvard University on "Bowdoin in Athletics." The weather was perfect, and the occasion was one which has never been forgotten by those who were present.

Lt. Robert P. T. Coffin '15 visited the College enroute to study at Oxford.

The baseball team under Ben Houser's coaching made a wonderful record, but missed the state championship. The track team won the Maine meet handily, came in seventh at the New England meet and won nine points in the ICAAA meet.

An Institute of Social Science was held with James T. Shotwell, Clarence C. Little, Roscoe Pound, Stewart Chase and Miss Sarah Wambaugh as the principal speakers.

"Buck" Moody retired from active service. The faculty tendered him a banquet at which "Spike" McCormick felicitated the guest of honor.

The Kappa Sigma house was being remodeled.

Phi Chi

Librarian's Files Disclose Original Script and Letter from the Late E. P. Mitchell '71, Author of the Surviving Verses

Editor of the Alumnus:

Sometime in the latter years of President Hyde's administration, Franklin Conant Payson, of the Class of 1876, gave me for the Library the original paper signed by members of that class that started the famous Drill Rebellion in Bowdoin College. He suggested that I should get from Edward Page Mitchell another famous manuscript in Bowdoin history—the original of the only Phi Chi song that is now remembered and sung by Bowdoin students.

After some two or three years of hesitation Mr. Mitchell brought the manuscript to the Library, together with a three-page letter explaining many things about Phi Chi that later generations never knew. This letter is presented herewith as well as the words of the song written by Mr. Mitchell.

The entire eight stanzas were printed, with slight variations, in Songs of Bowdoin under the direction of Arlo Bates in 1875 and reprinted in the 1905 Bugle.

GERALD G. WILDER

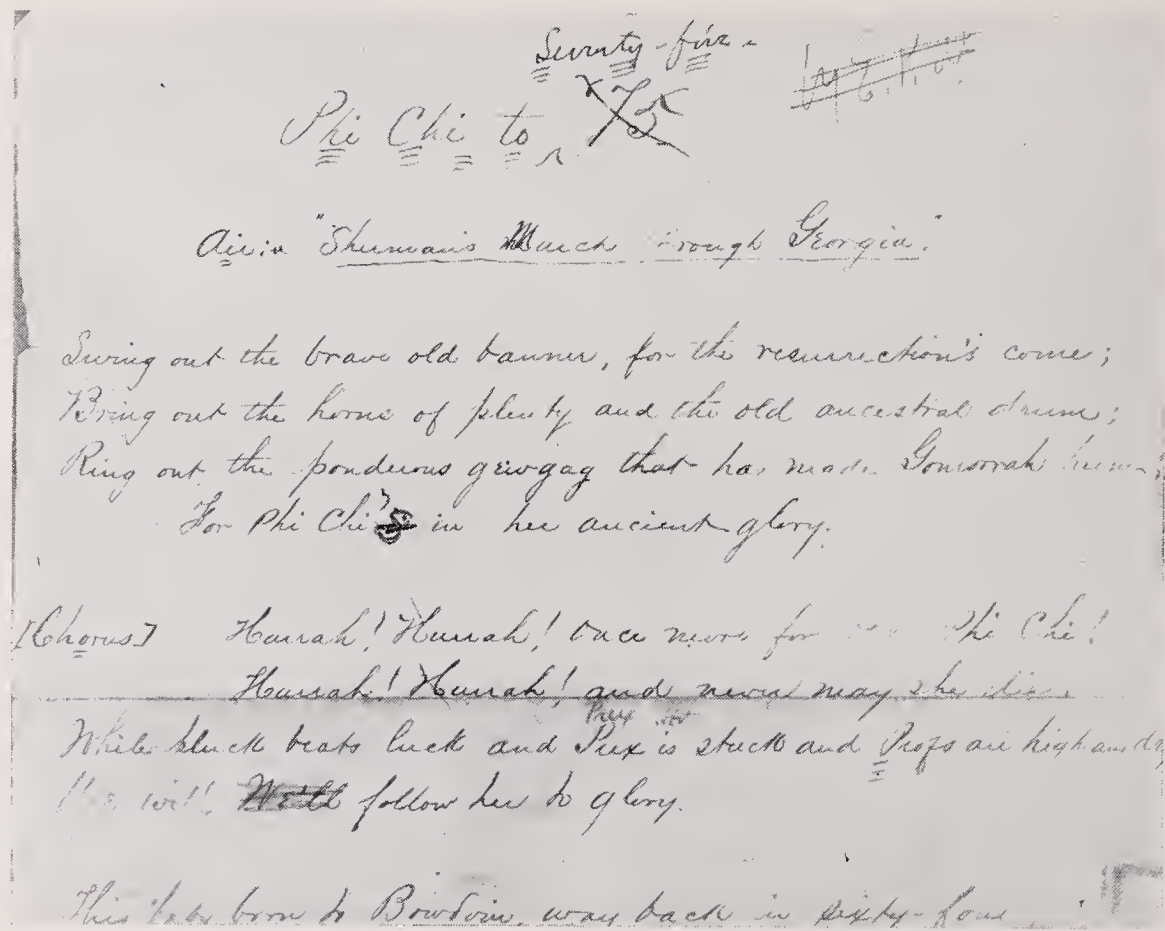

Glen Ridge, N. J.
July 7, 1919.

Dear Mr. Wilder:

According to your request for the Library, but with some personal doubt of the dignity of the proceeding, I am sending you this disreputable manuscript. You will observe that the text varies a little from the printed version, and that there are several stanzas not now sung.

The thing must have been written in June or early July of 1872, when the class of Seventy-five were about to become sophomores. Apparently the secession passed over Seventy-four, for the credit (or discredit) of keeping Phi-Chi alive is distinctly awarded to the boys of Seventy-three, who would then have been juniors. My recollection about this is a little vague. The memory, however, of Seventy-three's energetic Phi-Chiism is vivid.

I also remember that the lines were composed and committed to the paper here enclosed in the room of Tutor Charley Moore, of Seventy, in the south end either of Maine or of Appleton, I am not quite sure which. I had been a year out of college, and to this extent outraged the hospitality of the Administration. It was an emergency production of the early evening of the night when Seventy-five was to be initiated and a song was lacking. The initiation, which lasted from before midnight until dawn, occurred that year in an old ship loft at tidewater at or near Maquoit Bay. The place was reached by going south on Main Street. The party was conveyed in hay wagons carrying initiators and initiatees and the usual paraphernalia. This time there had been borrowed for the occasion from the Medical Building a finely articulated and very expensive skeleton recently bought in Paris. I recall the indignant protest of my dear old friend, Dr. George W. Hale of Sixty-nine, then a medical student, against the rape of this particular set of bones. All through the night he chaperoned the skeleton and faithfully safeguarded it from maltreatment or accident.

These Phi-Chi initiations were held in places chosen either for their secluded situation or for the audacity of the choice; several times, for instance, in an old abandoned saw mill on the Androscoggin River to the north of Cook's Corner; sometimes in the Pumpkin Hall of the Topsham Fair Grounds, and once at least (in the year the banner passed from Seventy to Seventy-one) in the City Hall in Bath.

The ponderous "gew-gaw" mentioned in one of the verses should be "gew-gag", or perhaps more properly "hew-gag". It was affectionately known by one or the other name but never as "gew-gaw". One of the most valued of Phi-Chi properties, it was a resonant circular saw used as a gong, and when struck vigorously with an able hammar, it could almost be heard in Boston.

The real poet laureate of Phi-Chi, as I have more than once taken occasion to plead, was George M. Bodge of Sixty-eight. His spirited and original songs antedating this one were much worthier of preservation. Why the Seventy-five song survived the others has always been a mystery to its author. He can account for the circumstance only by the inspiring and very singable quality of the air to which its words happened to be written.

Yours sincerely,

(signed) E. P. MITCHELL

PHI CHI TO SEVENTY-FIVE

AIR: "Sherman's March through Georgia"

*Swing out the brave old banner, for the resurrection's come;
Bring out the horns of plenty and the old ancestral drum;
Ring out the ponderous gewgag that has made Gomorrah hum;
For Phi Chi's in her ancient glory.*

[CHORUS]

*Hurrah! Hurrah! once more for old Phi Chi!
Hurrah! Hurrah! and never may she die.
While pluck beats luck and Prex is stuck and Profs are high and dry
We will follow her to glory.*

*This baby born to Bowdoin, way back in sixty-four,
Has thundered for admission on many a freshman's door
And, thanks to God and Seventy Three, will thunder ever more,
For Phi Chi's in her ancient glory.*

*We give her to you willingly, ye boys of Seventy-Five
Be yours the task with horn and mask to keep her fame alive,
And as your uncles here have striven, so may you ever strive For Phi Chi and her ancient glory.*

*If the spirit prove too strong, you know, the "spirit of Seventy Six," Dilute it down with water, for water and spirit mix—
And never mind the sugar if the little sinner kicks,
For Phi Chi's in her ancient glory.*

*You have heard her roll of honor and have read her famous score,
How Chapman was her tutor in the jolly days of yore,
And how in times more recent she has had one "Tutor Moore,"
When Phi Chi was in her ancient glory.*

*This moral you may find therein, you moral-seeking Soph,
Just suffer more while Sophomore and shake the shackles off
And you're sure to be a tutor and perhaps to be a Prof.
When Phi Chi's in her future glory.*

And screw the freshman in it till his infant form be hid,
For he shall learn that he must do precisely as he's bid,
And Phi Chi's in her ancient glory.*

*There are pails and there are windows and there's water in the well
As the freshman will discover if the freshman cuts a swell,
O, water for his diet till existence is a hell!
And Phi Chi's in her ancient glory.*

Stanley Casson

ON April 24 Joan Casson cabled that her husband had been "killed in an air crash" and to "tell our friends at Bowdoin." Those friends are many.

The Cassons, with their little daughter Jennifer and an English nurse came here in the fall of 1933. Stanley Casson was to be our Tallman professor for the year. An Oxford man, a Fellow of New College and Reader in Classical Archaeology in the University, he had served in Flanders, Salonika, Constantinople and Turkestan throughout the first World War, had published half a dozen books, been Director of the British Academy Excavations at Constantinople, travelled and excavated in Macedonia and Thrace. He came to Bowdoin at the age of forty-four, an archaeologist of distinction—and as teacher, lecturer and person, the finest possible sort of emissary from England.

Of the many books written by him since his return to Oxford, only a few are on archaeological subjects. "Steady Drummer", "Progress and Catastrophe", "The Discovery of Man", "Greece Against the Axis", "Greece and Britain"—the titles are revealing: he was not a man who could dwell very much in the past when every present decency was violated. His "Greece against the Axis" was written from ample military experiences of his own in this, his second war, for he was a member of the British Military Mission to the Greek Army after the Italian offensive opened, and later an intelligence officer on the headquarters staff of the British and Imperial Expeditionary Force in Greece.

Stanley Casson had a real affection for this College, as the College had for him. In his letters he speaks of the "unfailing wit and alertness of the undergraduates, their natural good manners and friendliness"; "the variety of interests, of conversations and of personalities which makes the Bowdoin Faculty for me a group of friends whom I hope I shall not easily lose . . . I shall always look back on my first visit to America as one of the happiest years I have spent."

Lieutenant Colonel Stanley Casson. It is a name that, to those of us who knew him, stands for all that is most admirable in the British mind and character.

PAUL NIXON

From the Mail Bag

... Received my ALUMNUS this morning and it acted like a tonic to me. Spent all noon lunch hour glancing through the list of names and as I hit each one I remembered some little picture of this chap or that, little things that I thought I had forgotten before now ... The magazine did another good thing. It answered my question as to what about Professor Van Cleve. I think that there is one great man to whom I do owe a letter for all that he has done for and meant to me. I do feel like a damn fool for never having given him every ounce of intelligence that I had in me. But then, I knew a lot more at twenty-one than I do at twenty-four.

... Suffice it to remark that Bowdoin retains a stronger tie on me than any other thing with which I have had association.

— 1942

... A number of times when I've moved to a new station and have been cramped for packing space, I've always reserved room for my copies of the ALUMNUS. They sure make excellent re-reading ... Well, the war starts again pretty early in the morning so I'd better close and get a little sleep. That is, I will if the artillery will quiet down for ten minutes or so.

— 1945

... I hope my contribution will arrive in time to be included in the Sesquicentennial Alumni Fund. At any rate, it certainly brings my good wishes for its success ... New Guinea is quite a way from Brunswick, but I assure you that there is a spot here which is forever Bowdoin.

— 1935

... How I regret, and I know all other Bowdoin men far away will regret, not being able to be back on campus for the Sesquicentennial. But perhaps it is fitting, too, that a school which has grown up with our Republic should mark its anniversary with so many scattered all over the world fighting and working for the preservation of the ideals which the Republic and the College exemplify. Certainly our hearts and our thoughts will turn back to the campus on June 24, and we shall work the harder at our tasks for the inspiration which the thought of Bowdoin brings.

— 1931

... At last I have just a moment to let you know that I'm still kicking. We have had a hell of a scrap, but again we came out on top. It doesn't pay to lose in this game.

... You will be interested in the operation of the selection process that goes on with these recruits as they finish "boot" training and go on for advanced schooling in the Navy specialties. Those with some college, even though it's only a "brief exposure," find themselves standing out in front in preference. These boys coming into the service now have not had time to give any indication as to what they have aptitude for, and most of them have no civilian experience of value, so the fact that they went to college (and the more semesters the better) counts for a great deal in getting into these special opportunities for education and advancement in the Navy ... By all means, urge boys to get all the college they can before coming into the Navy.

... I cherish many fond memories and scars, one of which is the quaint, "Please come to see me in my office on-----." In those days, being put on probation seemed like the end of earth and Heaven.

— 1943

... Reading the Bowdoin College catalogue brought back memories of Brunswick, the people there, the grand library at Bowdoin, the twin spires of the chapel—memories of happy days, all too short, of Maine with its lakes and woods. It added fuel and fanned the fire of my ambitions, my hopes for an education when the war ends. What better place to complete it than at Bowdoin?

— A British seaman briefly on duty at the Naval Air Station.

... Your card carried my thoughts back to the campus—particularly to the Chapel. I can't remember now any of the words spoken there, but the music, the hymns, the atmosphere, the spirit permeating the Chapel, seems to tell me why I am in China tonight. The colored window of the Roman soldier symbolizes the present activities of many of us all over the world, except that I hope history will prove our mission is different from that of the Roman expeditionary forces.

... After all this is over, I'm for a big reunion of Bowdoin men, and may it be a merry one, for I feel those of us who might be missing would want it that way.

— 1943

... Those snow-clad pictures in the Bowdoin ALUMNUS sure looked good to my snow-starved eyes.

— 1945

... I have a most interesting assignment here in China. I am an observer, going out into various places to visit Chinese units, to live and eat with them and, when desired, to instruct or to offer advice. It is a tremendously interesting country and I expect to become well acquainted with it and its people. The Chinese army is much like ours during the Valley Forge period but there is a determination to overcome obstacles and China's future should be a promising one.

— 1935—

... While home on my last leave, I found an old letter from you asking my opinions of short time contacts with the College. Naturally, you know my answer. Any contact with the College, however brief, is of infinite value to any boy. It's all gain and no loss.

— 1931

... The proposed Placement Bureau sounds like a wonderful idea—I'll be one of the first to solicit its opportunities when we get back. Do you have any openings for a young man, fresh, eager, enthusiastic, who thinks he would like to work on a small town newspaper?

— 1943

... I'm sure we will always appreciate having attended Bowdoin. The College went quite beyond its obligations, I feel, in making life comfortable and enjoyable for us. The faculty went outside the syllabus, undoubtedly, in order to make the courses more interesting and profitable. We never felt that Bowdoin was perfunctorily discharging its obligations to the Army. After comparing notes with the boys from other colleges, I feel that we were quite fortunate in having been sent to Bowdoin.

— a Basic Pre-mete.

Bowdoin Men In The Service

Supplemental List

The 130 names reported to the Alumni Office since February made a total of 2131 Bowdoin men known to be in the armed services. The Bowdoin dead now number thirty.

The editor will very much appreciate information concerning alumni in service at this time as plans call for printing the complete list in the August issue.

"He loved Bowdoin more than words could tell."

FOREWORD

Fortunate is the man who can escape publicity. This picture was taken just after a game between a picked team of the Kids and Kubs of the Three-Quarter Century Softball teams and the Junior High School girls. The old boys were naturally defeated by youth and speed. Why the photo man asked me to pose rather than any other of my teammates I do not know. I am neither a cradle-snatcher nor a sheik.

The editorial staff members seem to think it will amuse my contemporaries and friends. Why?

Bowdoin Theta Delts are a hardy lot when it comes to basking in low temperatures. The decoration was awarded for effective work in organizing and maintaining a clinic for indigent Arabs and French in a war-torn North African city, the name of which has been effectively deleted by the censor. Adneau Massoneau, Controleur Civile on the occasion of the presentation, "Ill people regained health and epidemics were prevented." Presentation of the decora-

(2) Spend 3 c. more to send a note to the Class Secretary so that the same issue of the ALUMNUS which tells us what we missed can carry a round-up of Class News fitting for this year. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Captain of a U.S.P.C. in action against enemy force during the assault on the island of Sicily. Accurately locating the strategic beaches assigned for landing operations, Lt. Clark, although forced to maintain fire silence in order to support a surprise attack, tenaciously held his hazardous anchorage 3000 yards off shore and continued to provide vital signals to direct the landing craft, despite constant exposure to enemy searchlights and imminent danger of enemy fire. A public message on Food Conservation

Just a minute, lady!
That's 88 meals you're throwing away!

WHAT American woman would knowingly waste a bit of food at a time like this? Not one! We all know that!

But there's no getting around it—wasting food has been a habit with most of us Americans.

And the worst of it is, that when we waste this food, it isn't all we waste. We waste man and woman power, too. As the country's largest sources of fruits and vegetables, Del Monte knows only too well what that means.

We know firsthand the months it took the farmers to grow just Del Monte foods. We know how hard it was this summer to get all the help needed to pack these foods—and how patriotically housewives who never before had worked in a cannery helped out, alongside our regular staff. We know the many trains and truck miles it took to get these foods to your grocer—and the hundreds of thousands of busy days put in by grocers just to make them available.

Probably you are doing everything you know to prevent waste. But if you want to be sure you are doing it, try every loophole—check your own shopping and eating habits against the questions below. It is one simple way to do an even better job of winning America's battle on the food front.

HERE'S WHAT YOUR GOVERNMENT SAYS:
Enough food is wasted annually in the home to feed the larger part of our armed forces at home and abroad!
The War Food Administration shows this can be done if all the food that is wasted is conserved. That's all you need to do. It's simple. It's easy. It's a matter of habit.

Check yourself against these 9 points to be sure all your food "Fights for Freedom"

1. Do you plan your buying ahead?
Haphazard shopping is one—particularly for perishables. Think ahead. Buying in small lots every day keeps your food fresh and saves you money.
2. Do you buy only what you need?
You know how hard your family naturally has to work to get food. So don't buy more than you need. For best results, buy the food you need in small quantities. Buy only what you need.
3. Do you buy brands you know?
A war production against waste and food loss means, with each brand and each variety, that it is a brand you can rely on. It will save you money and it will save the Del Monte women your grocer has.
4. Do you store foods correctly?
Proper and proper storage means better preservation and longer life. So make sure you know the right place and the right temperature for storage of all your food.
5. Do you save household scraps?
Plan to use every scrap of food. Use "Del Monte" brand scraps for soups, stews, and casseroles. Use vegetable scraps for soups, stews, and casseroles. Use fruit scraps for pies, jams, and jellies.
6. Do you prepare foods carefully?
Do a good job of food preparation. Wash and peel fruits and vegetables. Use the whole fruit. Use the whole vegetable. Use the whole egg. Use the whole milk. Use the whole can. Use the whole box. Use the whole bag. Use the whole barrel. Use the whole bushel. Use the whole ton. Use the whole car. Use the whole train. Use the whole ship. Use the whole plane. Use the whole world.
7. Do you "lick the platter clean"?
This is one time for your eyes to be bigger than your appetite. Don't try to get up and bring up your food when you're not hungry. Don't leave a scrap of food on the platter.
8. Do you use up all leftovers?
A lot of Del Monte Foods, for instance, are made in such a way that they can be used in many different ways. So use up all your leftovers. Use them in soups, stews, and casseroles. Use them in pies, jams, and jellies. Use them in all the ways you can think of.
9. Do you turn in your waste bins?
When you think the bin you have won't hold any more, turn it in to your grocer. He will take it away and give you a new one. So turn in your waste bins. It's a simple way to keep your food fresh and save you money.

A public appeal for Blood Donors

"Thanks a lot...whoever you are!..."

It feels good to be alive when you should have been dead...I know...
The reason I'm alive is just...a pint of somebody's blood.
I don't know who gave it...Maybe you did.
Whoever it was...thanks...Thanks for my life!"

The most glorious help a civilian can give to a fighting man is also one of the easiest to give.
It is a pint of blood...blood you'll never miss.
Today a Blood Donor Service—serving all branches of the armed forces—is carrying on the greatest lifesaving business in the whole history of mankind.

Through it, any healthy adult—with no harm to himself or herself, and with almost no inconvenience—can directly and certainly save the lives of three, four, five, even six American fighting men each year. Men who will be dead unless someone gives a pint of blood.

Somewhere, months later, a man will come back to his home, where he never would have come again except for you.

If you live within reach of Blood Donor Service facilities, call now for your appointment.

This is War Work, Too...

Industry's support to the military does not stop at turning out the goods of war.
Industry's voice is also helping.
Our job . . . and we consider it the most important job we have ever had . . . is to prepare public war messages like these for many of America's great industries.
It is a matter of pride with us that, in the Wartime Advertising Awards, 16 McCann-Erickson advertisements were selected among the 100 best war advertisements of 1943.
We are also finding that this war advertising is winning the same high readership as our "product advertising."
And largely for the same reason: good creative thinking, plus a sure knowledge of the factors that make for high reader interest.
These factors are revealed in the McCann-Erickson Continuing Study of Reader Interest. Should you like to see how this study might help improve your own advertising, just write or call any of our offices.

"Harold was on submarine patrol duty in the Bay of Biscay. They radioed that they sighted a submarine and that they were making the run. A few minutes later the base received an SOS. THE

Bowdoin Bowl

Will Be Delayed

A brief cablegram from the English manufacturers states that it may be several months before the finished product can be delivered.

We are disappointed, of course, that the Bowl will not be on display at the Sesquicentennial. We can but be patient and sympathize with the difficulties which beset European business firms.

With the assurance that the engravings are in process we dare hope that delivery may be made sooner than now appears.

In the meantime prepaid orders at fifteen dollars will be accepted.

Please state whether blue or sepia gray is preferred.

and

WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL-CAMP

The peace-time educational system developed at Wassookeag School-Camp and Wassookeag School from 1926 to 1928 has become a pattern for war.

The colleges are operating on an accelerated schedule; the draft is digging deeper into the ranks of youth; the stride of events is lengthening toward complete mobilization of man power. All this demands that we do more for boy power and do it quickly.

The boy who previously entered college at eighteen, the candidate of average or better ability, can and must enter college at seventeen. The boy who entered college at seventeen, the boy of outstanding ability, can and must enter at sixteen.

Candidates for college can save a year without sacrificing sound standards if they begin not with the senior year in school, but with the freshman or sophomore year. Now more than ever before we must look ahead surely and plan ahead thoroughly.

First—FILL THE SUMMER VACUUM

Wassookeag's scholastic system was introduced at the School-Camp in 1926 as a summer study-program for boys thirteen to nineteen. This program was developed to meet the need for greater continuity in the educational process, the need for constructive use of the long vacation months. The purpose—to speed up preparation for college by stimulating higher attainment and by effecting a saving of time.

Second—DEVELOP A YEAR-ROUND PROGRAM

In 1928 the speed-up program of the summer session at the School-Camp was extended to a year-round educational system by the founding of Wassookeag School. By actual count over a period of twelve years, the majority of Wassookeag students have begun the school year in July rather than September—an "accelerated program" on the secondary level.

Third—BEGIN NOW

Wassookeag's function in education has been the planning and directing of timesaving programs for schoolboys. Over six hundred such programs, each different because each boy is different, have been followed through at the School and the School-Camp. Send for information regarding the extent of scholastic schedule and the types of speed-up programs that schoolboys have carried successfully, that can be built into a well-balanced school experience and a well-balanced summer vacation.

TO BOWDOIN'S SECOND 150 YEARS

Events herein chronicled are evidence that the Sesquicentennial was fittingly observed. A birthday truly significant in the history of the country and in the progress of American education was given noteworthy recognition. Dedicated to commemorating Bowdoin's first 150 years, the Alumni Fund rose to new heights of alumni expression of loyalty and devotion. Across the country, Bowdoin men who could not be present in Brunswick held birthday gatherings. National and international dignitaries paused to offer congratulations. The press generally paid its tribute. Despite the all-out demands upon time and energies as we assume our share in the struggle for existence which liberty-loving peoples are making, time has been taken to recognize the contributions made by a sturdy small college whose life has been practically coextensive with that of the Republic.

But all Bowdoin men know that laurels were never meant to be rested upon. None knows it better than the new president of the Alumni Council, Alden H. Sawyer, whose warming message to the Alumni Office brings a challenge, an earnest invitation to Bowdoin men to become active and energetic participants in Bowdoin affairs.

"Proud as we are of our Alma Mater, pleasing as is the acclaim accorded Bowdoin from far and near, we cannot permit praise to lull us into complacency," he writes. "The establishment of the Placement Bureau, the amazing Alumni Fund results which Chairman Sayward, his associate Directors, and Class Agents reported, the awakened alumni interest aroused by the Alumni Council under the stimulating leadership of Harry Trust, the promise of expanded alumni participation contained in the reorganization recommended by Chester Abbott's Council committee, the helpful studies of alumni relations made by the President's special committee, the encouraging reports of alumni meetings everywhere — all these indications of alumni support are reasons to be glad, but they must be regarded as stimulants to further action. We hail a glorious past. We pledge ourselves to an even more glorious Bowdoin future. Problems, difficult problems, there will be — many of them. Financial problems, enrollment problems, reconversion, placement, readjustment for the returning service men — all will be there confronting an already overworked Administration. And the help of every Bowdoin man will be needed."

Stating that the new Council in co-operation with Fund Directors and Alumni groups will devote its energies to finding ways to meet the College's perennial needs — Dollars and Boys —, President Sawyer calls upon all Bowdoin alumni, of degree or non-degree status, to join in the effort that shall insure for the College a distinguished second 150 years.

We can but be confident of the response. With it will come a vigorous, effective Bowdoin, a continuing career of honorable service which will bear out President Sills's frequent remark — "Bowdoin's best days are clearly those days ahead."

The cover picture shows the head of the colorful academic parade at the Sesquicentennial. It is one of Harry Shulman's Commencement shots, all made either indoors or under threatening skies. Among the distinguished recipients of honorary degrees marching with President Sills are President Hopkins, the Earl of Halifax, Chief Justice Stone, Governor Sewall, and Doctor Yang.

Attention is directed to the advertisement, appearing in this issue, offering for sale the remaining hand-colored reproductions of the campus in 1821. Made by the Southworth-Anthoensen Press, under Professor Herbert Brown's critical guidance, these prints have been adjudged worthy of a place among the better reproductions depicting early American scenes. As a limited number has been made, it is altogether possible that they may ere long become collectors' items.

Although the engravings for the Bowdoin Bowl have been completed and approved, there is at present little of an encouraging nature that can be added to the disappointing news of delay published in the May ALUMNUS. Difficulties of manufacture continue, but we cling to the hope that delivery may somehow be effected before the end of this calendar year. We ask the understanding patience of the more than 200 who have ordered and paid for this especially designed Sesquicentennial piece of Wedgwoodware.

Sesquicentennial Commencement

Professor Stanley P. Chase '05 describes the formal exercises of June 24 and 25

The Scene

I do not know whether the American press is becoming historically minded, but, as Robert Coffin said in his sesquicentennial poem about something else, "this thing happened here three weeks ago": a newspaper woman accosted your present chronicler (in his capacity of Catalogue historian) to inquire what the weather was like on June 24, 1794! Of course the information could not be supplied; but, to satisfy the curiosity of the press of 2094 A.D., let it here be set down that June 24, 1944, dawned overcast and showery. The rain ceased, however, well before the hour (10 A.M.) of the academic procession, and was followed by a soft, pervasive dampness, so that the Earl of Halifax could assure his audience at the dinner that the weather made him feel "immediately and entirely at home."

Superficially the scene on the campus just before the start of the procession was much as in ordinary years. There were the fluid groups of graduates, wives, parents, and friends along the central avenue and around the Chapel; the occasional faculty personage with gaudy hood and gown "that rounded as a bell out of the press"; the usual village small-fry, the usual (and some unusual) dogs; the playing of the chimes; and, of course, stationed down toward the '75 Gates, the admirable, the sempiternal Chandler's Band. Novel features were the drill of the Naval Radar School officers, in white dress uniforms despite threatened showers, and the three flags (the Stars and Stripes, the British white ensign, and the College flag) with their color guards composed of United States and British marines from the Air Station. The special guests assembled and robed themselves in Hubbard Hall, and the procession got under way almost on time.

Alumni of the College

In the selection of institutions to be represented, the College had felt obliged to restrict its invitations to include only the members of the Association of Colleges in New England, other liberal arts colleges for men founded before the end of the eighteenth century, the collegiate institutions of the State of Maine, and certain other institutions closely allied with Bowdoin. Even so, thirty-seven institutions of learning were represented. Several had sent Bowdoin graduates from their faculties,—e.g., Princeton, represented by E. Baldwin Smith '11; Trinity, by Lawrence W. Towle '24; Wesleyan, by Wilbert Snow '07; the United States Military Academy, by Col. Bartlett '17; and Yale, by John C. Schroeder

(hon. '33). Fred Putnam '04, as Trustee, was the delegate from Ricker Classical Institute and Junior College. Thirteen institutions were represented by their Presidents: Dartmouth, North Carolina, Williams, Middlebury, Amherst, Tufts, M.I.T., and all the Maine colleges and junior colleges except Ricker. Many other delegates, such as Dean George H. Chase of Harvard, Vice-Provost John M. Fogg, Jr., of Pennsylvania, and Dean Harry J. Carman of Columbia, were well known figures in the academic world. It was a distinguished company, of talents as various as the resplendent and variegated hoods that adorned it.* The long procession passed into the historic church through the double lines of the Naval Radar School officers drawn up at the entrance.

The Convocation

In the church Professor Frederic Tillotson was at the organ. After the procession had found seats—special guests being already in the pews—the doors were opened to the public, with the result that the church was almost completely filled. A moving invocation was pronounced by the Reverend Harry Trust, D.D., of the Class of 1916, President of the Bangor Theological Seminary and retiring President of the Alumni Council. The President then read the congratulatory letter received from President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Immediately following this, as the roll of institutions was read by the Dean, the delegates severally came up on the platform and shook hands with the President—a number of them presenting scripts, which are now on exhibition in Hubbard Hall. (The dignified appearance of Dr. Stanley King gave no hint of the rollicking informality of Amherst's felicitations conveyed in the scroll which he so sedately deposited. The handsomely printed communication begins: "Mrs. Joseph Bowdoin / Brunswick, Maine / Dear

*A number of the Bowdoin College Bulletin, shortly to appear, contains the complete roster of delegates, the text of the oration, the poem, the sermon of thanksgiving and remembrance, and the congratulatory scripts, and a stenographic account of the proceedings at the dinner.

Old Lady:...." Bowdoin graduates of the years between 1913 and 1925 may have their suspicions as to the authorship.) This ceremony completed and the delegates again in their places, the organ broke into some strains especially composed for this occasion, Professor Tillotson's setting for the Twilight Song of Edwin Arlington Robinson (Litt.D., 1925); and the rich, fresh voice of Lloyd Knight '45 came from the choir loft in words that seemed to have a special relevance to this anniversary:

"Through the shine, through the rain
We have shared the day's load;
To the old march again
We have tramped the long road..."

It is a poem about which the author had said that he meant it to express "the dim consciousness we have of things going forward." In the exhibition cases in Hubbard Hall the delegates and other guests may have seen both the manuscript of the poem, a recent gift to the College of the Richards family of Gardiner, and Fred Tillotson's manuscript of his musical setting, which had quite remarkably caught the mood of the lyric.

Address of Commemoration

The Address of Commemoration was delivered by Ernest Martin Hopkins, LL.D., President of Dartmouth College. He began with a graceful tribute to our College, speaking of the close ties which had bound Bowdoin in its earliest years to Dartmouth, and adapting to the occasion some words spoken nearly a century ago by Nathan Lord (Bowdoin 1809), for thirty-five years President of Dartmouth.

The congratulatory strain, however, soon gave way to a serious and at times even stern consideration of the function of the liberal arts college in modern society. Recognizing that the diverse origins of the American population made natural a wide variety in our types of educational institutions, Dr. Hopkins found the "independent, undergraduate college of liberal arts"—the historic college of this country and the progenitor of all the rest—distinguished by "its solitudes for the advancement of cultural standards in our civilization and its absorption in how to establish a reign of gracious living among men."

This high ideal, though never wholly obscured, has been but imperfectly attained in our existing colleges. Dr. Hopkins dwelt upon the very incomplete success of the colleges, in the years before Pearl Harbor, in driving home to their students or their constituencies the deadly seriousness of the danger with which civilization was threatened, in defending effectively the spiritual convictions in which the colleges had been nurtured, and in championing "such evident truths as that no people is entitled to more freedom than it is willing to protect and defend; or that security is not a sufficient ideal as a challenge to spiritual or moral fervor". In their relative failure, to be sure, the colleges merely reflected the spirit of the people as a whole. Tellingly the speaker recalled that in August, 1941, by only a single vote was the bill defeated in the House of Representatives which would have rendered our army impotent; and he recounted the series of "extraneous events, almost beyond belief," by which we have been saved from utter tragedy and destruction.

Yet despite the grave weaknesses of these recent years, which the war has disclosed, Dr. Hopkins found the American college sufficiently rooted in the Anglo-American tradition of liberty and sufficiently poised and self-critical, to justify high hopes for its rôle in the troubled post-war world. With a reference to Elijah upon the mount, the Dartmouth President concluded eloquently:

"So for Bowdoin and for the faith for which she stands today the summons of service can be only in a still, small voice. Even amid the tumult and the shouting we still hear the quiet call to ideals of goodness, beauty, and truth. To these our ancient loyalties were pledged. To these our commitments have held through the years. And today the liberal college renews its pledge, consecrates itself anew under God to the upbuilding of a Christian world, and prays for guidance that it may be spared attributes or deeds that would leave its professions

'...but as the ghost of friendship dead,

A shadow in the glass of faith gone by'".

HIS EXCELLENCY AND THE EARL OF HALIFAX

Sesquicentennial Poem

It should be a cause of restrained pride that a poet for these exercises, already distinguished by a Pulitzer award, could be chosen from Bowdoin graduates and the College Faculty: a worthy successor to him who in 1875 spoke from the same place the grave and beautiful lines of "Morituri Salutamus."

Robert P. Tristram Coffin '15, Litt.D. '30, Pierce Professor of English, Oxford-schooled but speaking with the authentic intonations of Yankeeland, held the closest attention of the audience as he delivered what may prove to be one of his most substantial and memorable compositions in verse.

The varied movements of the poem, signalized by a wide diversity of measures—quatrains, long and short couplets, irregularly rhymed strophes, and blank verse—united to produce one strong effect: an impassioned affirmation of belief in the values which Bowdoin has lived by in the past and with which, undaunted, she faces the future. The poem opens with a magnificent description ("this thing happened here three weeks ago") of an eagle's circling the campus under the roar of the Navy's planes. The next part gives, with impressive sweep of historical vision, the transmission from Greece to the Italy of the Renaissance, thence to all Europe and to the new continent, of the impulse to create "a brotherhood of equal lovers of light." There follows a section about "this little house of ours in pines," in which the poet recalls, each for its moment, scenes and figures that suggest the part Bowdoin has had in the realization of the American dream. Toward the end is a lovely and characteristic passage descriptive of this coastal region. Throughout are sharply etched images, pungent phrasings, and many lines which I think Mr. Coffin alone among New England poets could have written—for instance:

"No one could think a common man was common Seeing tall lobstermen go down through the dew
To brave little boats bobbing in a harbor
And a lighthouse blinking on the infinite blue."

But the stanzas which must here be quoted entire, because they so perfectly put into words a thought at the back of everyone's mind, are these:

"O mother who remains forever young,
O mother whose first lullaby was sung
Beside our nation's cradle and who will Sing to the new young men when we are still!
Accept ephemeral tribute that we lay
On your enduring and high knees this day.

"O mother like New England! whose sons know
The brightest flowers blossom by the snow
And trees that best can stand the weather's shock
Are the trees whose roots are in the rock,
Not here with us we ask your love to be But where your youngest fight beyond the sea.

"O you who see, as mothers never can,
The end of every boy you make a man,
O you who teach the tender are the stern,
Through all the careless dark years coming, burn
Around the world where your new sons will run,
O mother with the young face of the sun!"

THE COLOR GUARD

Baccalaureate Degrees

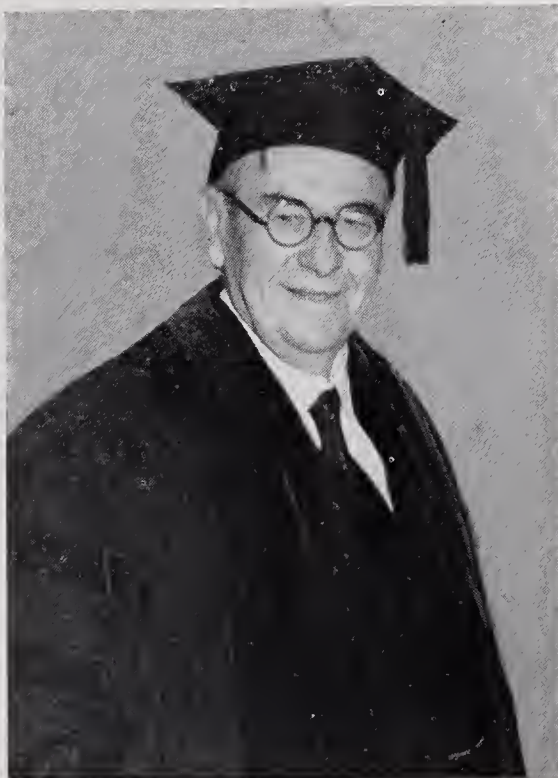

The formal program of the "Exercises of the Sesquicentennial Commemoration of the College Charter" was a four-page folder, distinguished in appearance and graced with an unusual reproduction of the painting of The College in 1821. Along with this in every seat had been placed another folder, the traditional dignified Commencement program, with the Latin formula, the names of candidates, the list of distinctions, etc. The award of baccalaureate degrees, which followed immediately the conclusion of Mr. Coffin's poem, was in the nature of an interlude in the strictly commemorative part of the exercises.

Eight seniors were present in person to grasp the President's hand and receive their sheepskins—one more, Mr. Sills pointed out, than were graduated at Bowdoin's first Commencement in 1806. In all, twenty-five baccalaureate degrees were awarded, fifteen of them "as of" some other year from 1938 to 1945. Major Harold M. Hayes '14 came forward to receive the diploma awarded to his son, 2nd Lieut. Stuart E. Hayes '44. There were, besides, seventy-two Certificates of Honor awarded (one posthumously) to men who had left college before graduation to enter the service.

Honorary Degrees

The exceptionally large number (nineteen) of honorary degrees was appropriate in this sesquicentennial year. Faculty members, present or past, among the recipients of the L.H.D. were Professors Ham and

Burnett, and Dr. Yung-Ching Yang, President of Soochow University, Tallman Professor in 1942-1943. The alumni honored included: as Masters of Art, Earle S. Thompson '14, Lucien P. Libby '99, and William Widgery Thomas '94; as Master of Science,

THE HONORABLE CHIEF JUSTICE

Brig.-Gen. Wallace C. Philoon '05; as Doctor of Science, Dr. Cornelius P. Rhoads '20; and as Doctor of Laws, Judge Arthur Chapman '94. Newly received into the Bowdoin family were: as Master of Science, John C. Alderman, Commander U. S. Navy, Commanding Officer of the Brunswick Naval Air Station; as Doctor of Humane Letters, Edward W. Eames, Headmaster of Governor Dummer Academy; as Doctor of Letters, Professor Mark Van Doren, of Columbia University; as Doctor of Divinity, the Reverend Henry Sloane Coffin, President of Union Theological Seminary; and as Doctors of Laws, James P. Baxter, 3rd, President of Williams College, Ernest M. Hopkins, President of Dartmouth College, Hon. Sumner Sewall, Governor of Maine, Hon. Francis B. Sayre, of the Department of State, lately High Commissioner to the Philippines, the Right Honorable the Earl of Halifax, Ambassador of Great Britain, and Harlan Fiske Stone, Chief Justice of the United States.

As regards professions, the distribution is as follows: college presidents 3; college teachers 2; school teachers 2; government service 3; the judiciary 2; medicine 1; the ministry 1; literature 1; administration of public utilities 1; banking and finance 1; the Army 1; the Navy 1.

Unfortunately, considerations of space forbid reproducing here President Sills's citations, which were as always felicitous. Particularly happy, in view of the fact that both Great Britain and China were represented among the recipients of degrees, was one of the President's phrases about Professor Ham: "a linguist who is giving new courses in the language of our gallant ally, Russia." Applause, uniformly cordial, and for the three members of the Faculty markedly ready and hearty, was accorded all the recipients, but at the President's request the audience withheld its rising tribute till the conclusion of the ceremony.

The exercises in the church were concluded with the pronouncing of the benediction by Dr. Trust and the singing of one stanza of the National Anthem.

Service of Thanksgiving and Remembrance

On Sunday morning, June 25, a Service of Thanksgiving and Remembrance was held in the First Parish Church. Most of the delegates and special guests had departed, but a large congregation of college people, townspeople, and alumni was present. The platform used on the preceding day having been removed, the Faculty, in academic dress, marched in procession to seats in the front pews. The service was deeply impressive. The organ prelude (from Bach) and postlude (from Caesar Franck) were played by Robert S. Stetson '18, organist of the Church; the hymns were Isaac Watts's "O God, our Help in Ages Past" and President Hyde's "Creation's Lord"; also sung by the Brunswick Choral Society under the direction of Professor Tillotson, was the College Hymn in the choral setting composed by Nicolau Bere-zowsky in honor of this Bowdoin anniversary.

The Invocation was pronounced by the Minister of the First Parish Church, the Reverend Thompson E. Ashby, D.D.; the lessons (from Wisdom of Solomon, VII, and Hebrews, XI) were read by President Sills; and the prayer was offered by the Reverend John C. Schroeder, D.D., Master of Calhoun College, Yale University.

The Sermon

The preacher was the Very Reverend Chester Burge Emerson, D.D., of the Class of 1904, Dean of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, Ohio.

So much of the effect of Dean Emerson's thoughtful and stirring discourse was due to his vivid illustrations and expressive phrasing that any condensation does it injustice. "The spies whom the Israelites sent out to look over the Promised Land . . . could have done the job thoroughly in a hour or two had they had an airplane." . . . "One man tossed aside the record of a sordid murder trial; Browning read out of it The Ring and The Book. One man saw an eagle flying low against the sun; Robert Coffin reached up and pulled a poem from beneath his wings." . . . "We may be very wise and very clever and yet very wicked. Moral character is the only thing that can insure us against the destructiveness of the things our hands have made." . . . "For in ancient days a man could only cheat his neighbor as he swapped his produce, or kill his neighbor with a club. Today, one man can cheat millions as he sits at a desk somewhere" . . . "In the end, a man is known by the good he does, not by the goods he takes." The preacher's marked gift of aphoristic utterance, however, never seemed in the slightest an exhibition of cleverness, so firm was the underlying structure and so compelling the moral earnestness that burned beneath the words.

Change, said Dean Emerson, is a condition of all life, but in human life progress can only mean change in a defined direction. "There must be unchanging principles if life is to be orderly." The discovery and the following of such direction depend, first, upon the exercise of creative intelligence; secondly, upon the motives by which our hearts are moved; and thirdly, upon the exercise of what in Scripture is called charity—"perhaps the nearest word for it today would be goodwill or the will to do good." Such has always been the conviction and the teaching of this College, said Dr. Emerson, and he repeated reverently the names of the men (Hyde, Robinson, Lee, Chapman, Hutchins, Johnson) who, with others unnamed and still living, in his own day "drilled their facts into our heads and drove their sense of value into our hearts." Summarizing his discourse and bringing fittingly to a close the more formal part of the Commemorative Exercises, the preacher ended:

"The awakening and encouragement of the creative faculties for the discovery and appropriation of truth; the development of personality and its ability to make some addition to the meaning of life and to the worth of living; the enlargement of social vision and the encouragement of social responsibility; the discovery and deepening of those spiritual sources on which depend a man's probity and a man's peace, his endurance in time and his hope for eternity; in short, instruction in all that is worth knowing, inspiration to be all that is worth being, dedication to all that is worth doing—these have been the unchanging ideals of the college in a changing world throughout its history. We remember with gratitude the great and good men who have taught them to successive generations. May future generations, both of masters and men, be faithful and unflinching in their loyalty to the same. Bowdoin Beata! God grant that this century and a half be only the morning and the evening of the first day of thy creative life. AMEN."

Commencement Sidelights

As observed by Professor Athern P. Daggett '25

Early May brought the familiar envelope from 202 Massachusetts Hall. It comes about that time every year, war or peace. There was the usual ballot, with accompanying prospectus, and a slip for room reservations—a recent innovation. And there was a simple calendar of events, "Bowdoin, 1944, Commencement and Sesquicentennial Exercises."

* * * * *

So there was going to be a "Sesqui" after all. For a long time we had been looking forward and planning for it. It would be an occasion not only to commemorate the past, but to plan and build for the future. Committees of the boards, alumni, faculty, and undergraduates had studied Bowdoin's needs and made their reports. There was discussion—at alumni meetings, in less formal gatherings, after dinner, at tea, over cakes and ale. Mrs. Sills started freshmen talking at Presidential gatherings. In 1940 when the class of '44 entered it was impressed with the fact that it was to be "the sesquicentennial class." Even then, though, the long shadow of world affairs had begun to fall across our hopes and plans.

A year ago when the governing boards set up the committee to plan for the event it was uncertain what could be done. The fall and winter found the College in the most crowded period of its history. The committee didn't meet till mid-winter. At that time almost eight hundred fifty men—Air Forces, Army, Navy, and civilian—were using the classrooms, laboratories, dining-halls, and rooming facilities of the College. No one knew how much or in what direction things might change. Williams, the report was, had passed by her "sesquicentennial" with little more than a formal acknowledgement. Yet resolutely the decision was made. The celebration would be in keeping with the times, but it would be held.

* * * * *

And it was. Curtailed? True—tailored to the times, with much that we have come to associate with our college celebrations lacking, with the list of guests and invited institutions necessarily cut down, with the luxury of a reunion permitted only to the fifty-year class, with no alumni luncheon or dinner of the Society of Bowdoin Women. Still it was held, and combined with it the 139th Commencement exercises. There might be only a handful of baccalaureate candidates but they would have the satisfaction of receiving their degrees on the same platform as the Chief Justice and the Earl of Halifax.

LT. COMDR. FIRTH RN AND COMMANDER ALDERMAN USN GREET THE EARL OF HALIFAX AND SENATORS BREWSTER AND BURTON

Brunswick is crowded these days. We're a Navy town with Yankee sailors and English bluejackets swarming. We're a "war industry" town with workers commuting to all three shifts at the Bath Iron Works and the shipyard at Portland. The restaurants aren't looking for customers; they are looking for food to feed those they already have. Some of them close up unexpectedly for a breather of a day or two. The Eagle Hotel was gutted by fire in the spring and it is still closed. Rooms in private houses are almost not to be had. The 1940 census gave Brunswick something around 8,000. Town report, allegedly based on post-office and rationing board estimates, places the present population at easily twice that figure. The town bulged. So the College would have to take care of its own guests. Then the Army left. There was a rumor that it might return, but it didn't. There remained about three hundred fifty to look out for, civilians and Navy.

So arrangements were made. There was Hyde Hall for families; Appleton for bachelor quarters; the AD House for invited guests; and the TD House for members of the boards. The undergraduates, eating in two shifts, could all be crowded into the DU dining-room. The Navy already had the Zete House for its officers' mess. That left the TD dining-room for guests. At the Moulton Union you could always pick up a bite to eat at the canteen. It took up the margin and saved the situation.

* * * * *

The machinery of the festivities was well run. The faculty chairmen of the special committees and their helpers worked long and well. Herbert Hartman was master of arrangements and chief of protocol. Seward Marsh, busy with seeing the Alumni Fund through its record-breaking high, passed the active direction of publicity over to Herbert Brown. Morgan Cushing was in charge of accommodations and transportation for invited guests.

They all had their problems, great and small — Herbert Hartman dropping everything and rushing to the Naval Air Station to greet Lord Halifax, who came by plane. He had to do it three times, for the benefit of photographers. Something of a novelty for a college professor, but apparently nothing new for an ambassador. '09's Senators, Burton and Brewster, had come along, also H. N. Marsh, also '09, whose son, '48, was there to meet him, to the envy of his Deke brothers. Herbert Brown, sweating early in the morning while most of us were still abed, helping the Life photographers drag Peary's sledge out of its wire cage, the better to photograph it. Three weeks later they were still keeping him busy answering queries (If Bowdoin has a President's House why didn't President Chamberlain live in it?) for the article that still hasn't come out.... Morgan Cushing sending Phil Brown posthaste to the Bowdoin Hotel to retrieve President Graham of the University of North Carolina who had been deposited there by a Brunswick taxi driver.

The calendar began on Thursday. The governing boards had that day pretty much to themselves. Harrison Atwood '09 and Bill Crowley '08 came early and dropped in at noon-time daily chapel. They seemed a bit shy and edged into the seats nearest the doors. The next noon when George Eaton '14 and Phil Smith '15 came, they marched right down and sat with the seniors. They had the assurance of frequent term-time visitors at the College. Between them they've had five sons here the last few years.

The trustees met in the President's office in Massachusetts Hall in the afternoon. The overseers began their sessions that evening upstairs in the faculty room. The lights burned late that night, and the next night, too. If there was a past to celebrate, there was also an immediate present full of difficulties, and an uncertain future. Plans had to be made, and decisions taken.

* * * * *

The Phi Beta Kappa meeting was held Friday afternoon in the Alumni Room of Hubbard Hall. Thirty-one members were present, rather more than usual. President Sills presided. In these war days there are initiations after each trimester. This time there were but two candidates, Phil Hoffman '45, editor-in-chief of the Orient, and Fred Whittaker '44, a transfer from Bangor Theological Seminary.

487 alumni, '76 to '44, signed the register in Hubbard Hall. The oldest, Arthur T. Parker '76, of East Orleans, Mass., present at four of the last five commencements and a frequent on-campus visitor of late years

....Henry A. Huston of New York and George W. Bourne of Kennebunk, both '79....Herbert L. Johnson '81 of Hadley, Mass...."Buck" Moody '82, who has personally watched the College for almost half of its one hundred and fifty years....'84 had three, Cummings, Thompson, and Adams....So did '85 with Peters, Freeman, and Neally.

Ralph W. Bucknam M'95 was the farthest from home; he signed Hollywood, California....But there was his classmate, Joseph B. Roberts '95 from Pueblo, Colorado....and James E. Lombard '94 from LaMarr, Iowa....and Henry W. Cobb '00 from Jackson, Mississippi....and Lafayette F. Dow '17 from Oakland Park, Florida.

Class reunions are pretty much "out for the duration"—except, of course, for fifty-year classes, which rate a pretty special priority. More or less impromptu placards were stuck all over the door of North Appleton—1924—1929—1934. A few scattered members gathered occasionally, that was all. Harry Owen gathered six members of '96 for their usual dinner, this time at Miller's Inn on Friday evening. 1916 registered 16 members.

Francis Dana worked hard on the '94 reunion. He had two objectives: every member a contributor to "the Fund"; every member present at the reunion. He pretty nearly made them. There was only one short of a perfect record for "the Fund"; and nineteen of the 25 living members of the class registered at the Library. Good for these, or any, days. Headquarters were on the second floor of the Union; living quarters for most were in Hyde Hall, and there was the Union's pre-war faculty dining-room for meals. The purple and white arm bands were much in evidence throughout the four days.

The December 1940 catalogue listed 175 members of the then freshman class of '44. There were only six of them who signed the book on what they had all once looked forward to as their commencement day. Eb Ellis, after one time-out to work in a war plant, and Al Long, who had a term with the Marines, caught up and graduated just on schedule....Dick Rhodes and Harry Trust had received their degrees a year ahead of time. Dick was back at the College a while, teaching physics to the Army. Now he's waiting for a Navy commission.John Lord had finished in September and then gone to McGill Medical....Bob O'Brien has been with the Marines. He was here while on furlough, trying to cure a knee injury so he could get back in OCS....Jim Bagshaw had just won his bars as an Air Forces meteorologist. He tried a little off-hand weather forecasting, but it didn't work....And that was all of the original 175 who were here to sign the book on "their" day.

There seemed to be fewer uniforms than at the '42 or '43 commencements. In a sense, the war has moved overseas and left us. Brigadier General Philoon '05 was here for the meeting of the boards....and another Bowdoin-West Pointer, Brick Bartlett '17, now a colonel and living in "Professors' Row" at the Point....and while we are on the subject of the Physics Department, Lt. Comdr. Noel Little, also '17, who's been in charge of the Navy Radar School here at the college ever since the summer before Pearl Harbor....Capt. Omer McDuff '41, back after 121 missions over Europe....Lt. Stan Low '35, who went overseas with the tank corps and is back now in this country on limited service....Major Phil Wilder '23 who seems to be kept just as busy at the Special Services School at Washington and Lee as he used to be here. He served as alumni marshal....Lt. (jg) Dick Bechtel '36....and Ed Stetson '41.

Reminiscences of the Centennial... Richard Rhodes '97 recalling how as a freshman he squeezed into the church. There weren't any seats left, so he sat on the steps of the platform, almost under the edge of Chief Justice Fuller's robes. After the exercises he stopped to greet the Bishop of Maine who sat chatting on a bench behind Mem Hall. "I want you to meet Dean Sills," the Bishop said. "I have a son," the Dean said by way of making conversation with a freshman, "in Portland High School who thinks he'll come to Bowdoin.".... Clement Robinson '03 telling about the dinner in '94. It was a broiling day, and he waited on table under the big tent in the middle of the campus. The butter melted and ran all over the plates.

The President's reception, planned for the garden, was driven indoors by the rain. It must have been a keen disappointment for Mrs. Sills, but no one heard her complain. The Chief Justice and the President received in the library. There were refreshments in the ballroom, if you could get to them. The house was jammed. You had to judge the current and plan your progress. Just as you thought you had hit the main stream it would turn into an eddy, and then a backwater, and you'd find yourself cornered under the stairs. The high point was Betsy Wilder's presentation to Mrs. Sills, on behalf of the Society of Bowdoin Women, of an antique silver coffee pot. After that no one could depart till Mrs. Sills had shown it to them. A fitting remembrance for Bowdoin's own "first lady."

Scheduled for Saturday evening was the Masque and Gown's 31st Commencement Play. It is no little job these days to cast and direct a play. A student body cut to less than a quarter the usual size gives fewer to choose from, and the crowded schedules of the accelerated program leave little time for rehearsals. With most of the boys on campus for only one, two, or three trimesters, there is no time to explore for and develop talent. For the play Pat Quinby had selected As You Like It. Old timers will recall the 1915 and 1916 productions with Gray, Churchill, Rickard, Ireland, and Achorn in the casts. Mrs. Arthur Brown had directed it then, and Pat used her cutting of the play. For setting—the Forest of Arden—he had chosen the clump of elms just south of the central campus path from the Chapel to the '75 gates. There he rehearsed patiently, endlessly. All went well up to and through the dress rehearsal, for which there was almost a capacity house, mostly students. And then, on the day itself, it rained. "Most emphatically," the director remarked in his impromptu remarks before the curtain went up, "not as we like it." There were no trees in Mem Hall, only the bare stage hung with black velvet drapes. But the cast and the production crew responded nobly. The performance had pace and flow. Not once was the prompter called on for a cue. The light men handled their difficult assignment deftly. Rosalind (Marcelle Drapeau) was "ravishing as herself and captivating as Gany-mede," Orlando (Lamparter '47) handsome, and Celia (Florence Smith) "as pretty and pert a blonde as she should be." Given special prominence in the production were the familiar lyrics sung by Al Long '44 and Lloyd Knight '45, a pair of "gay troubadors." "Despite the breaks against it, this performance of As You Like It was one of the best executed of Bowdoin's Shakespearian plays, and gay fare for a festive occasion," to borrow adjectives and final judgment from the Orient's critic.

The last event of the calendar was the Sunday afternoon concert in Memorial Hall by the Boston String Quartet. It was a program of Haydn, Brahms, and Ravel. The audience was not large, but was closely attentive and enthusiastic.

... THE STATE OF THE COLLEGE

Sesquicentennial Dinner

Professor Herbert Ross Brown Reporting

THERE was lobster salad—the golden orange kind that appears at Bowdoin commencement dinners as faithfully as Chandler's Band. There were distinguished guests, delegates from colleges and universities founded before 1800, and from other institutions with whom Bowdoin has intimate associations above and below the Mason and Dixon line. There were recipients of honorary degrees—nineteen of them, in all their academic glory—including representatives of our gallant Allies, China and Great Britain; the Chief Justice of the United States; commanding officers of the Army and Navy; and leaders from the worlds of letters, science, education, finance, law, Church and State. All these, and Alumni, too,—more than a thousand of Bowdoin's devoted sons and friends. The occasion, it needs hardly be said, was the 150th birthday party of Bowdoin College. A good time was had by all.

As is customary at birthday parties, the guests brought congratulations for the achievements of the past and expressions of confidence in the future. Appropriately, too, the mood of the dinner was characterized by a perfect balance between jollity and seriousness, a proper anniversary spirit for a lusty institution whose history is nearly coextensive with that of the Republic. President Sills—as always the presiding officer without peer—sounded the sobering keynote when he warned that all the valuable lessons learned at the sesquicentennial anniversary would be hollow indeed, if Bowdoin looked to the past, rather than to the days which lie ahead. Following the President's lead, the speakers found in Bowdoin's proud history heartening evidence of the survival of free institutions.

"We cannot be isolated from our heritage and history," declared President Frank Graham of the University of North Carolina. "This celebration becomes, through Bowdoin College, not merely the commemoration of a great tradition, but a dedication to the ideals of freedom of the mind and the brotherhood of man around the world." This dedication eloquently phrased by Dr. Graham was echoed again and again throughout the addresses of the afternoon. Bowdoin's heritage as a New England college, "the product of intense devotion to the cause of religion and human freedom," inspired Dr. Francis Sayre to prophesy that "during the difficult days ahead, Bowdoin will stand at the forefront, battling for the great American tradition of freedom of the mind."

In what was perhaps the most militant and challenging of the anniversary dinner addresses, Dr. Sayre reminded his audience that "Human freedom does not drop like the gentle dew from heaven. It must be fought for and won by blood and toil; and the fight is not confined to the battlefield of war. After the present struggle is won . . . the reactionary forces, with resurgent power, will make a new stand Those who would champion human freedom have a bloody course to follow. They must fight against vested interests armed with the deadliest weapons which entrenched privilege and wealth can command." It is to educational institutions like Bowdoin, Dr. Sayre concluded, that America must look "for men to lead and rally the forces of liberalism."

This challenge to the colleges of liberal arts to train their students for careers of leadership in the postwar world was supported eloquently by Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, President Emeritus of Union Theological Seminary. Speaking in behalf of the churches of the nation, Dr. Coffin, a former Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, declared that "The tradition in which Bowdoin was born and by which it has been sustained is a tradition which stresses primarily the presence of God in history. We did not succeed in getting the world into the conscience of this country, or we would not have become isolationists. We have not succeeded in getting a passion for economic justice into the hearts and consciences of our people, or we would not have needed the revolutionary circumstances of our time. ...Is it not the task of the Christian Church and Christian institutions like Bowdoin to stir up the passion for economic justice?"

The compelling theme of education for responsible leadership was continued with masterly emphasis by the Right Honorable, Earl of Halifax, Ambassador of Great Britain to the United States, and Chancellor of Oxford University. "The task of education is the building of citizenship," he declared. "And if we were asked what is meant by training in good citizenship, should we not place high up on its needs an inculcation of the right standards of value? It is, I believe, a dangerous tendency in democratic society to be over-much concerned with price and not enough with value. ...That is a habit of mind which must be destructive of any society. 'Physician heal thyself' is an old and a very true injunction. In my humble judgement, we can only hope to keep the world in order if we make our own lives and that of our nation's a pattern of that which we would feign make the world."

These words of wisdom from high places served to remind the gathering that Bowdoin's sesquicentennial celebration was being observed in the midst of a world-at-war, heavily freighted with future destiny. Bowdoin's own alumni, many of whom are making great contributions in this struggle for human freedom, were not forgotten against the grim background of the times. Speaking in behalf of the alumni, Brigadier-General Wallace Copeland Philoon '05, the ranking officer of all Bowdoin men in the Army, made a stirring plea that "Bowdoin may continue to turn out leaders—more and better leaders—leaders whose example others will be proud to follow, leaders whose ideals are 'Duty, Honor, Country'."

Affectionate gratitude for Bowdoin's own leadership was voiced by representatives of sister institutions, and by members of the far-flung family of the College. Dr. Yung-Ching Yang, President of Soochow University in China, and in 1942-1943 a visiting professor on the Tallman Foundation at Bowdoin, spoke of the friendly atmosphere of the intimate college of liberal arts, a friendliness which recognizes no distinctions of caste, creed or birth. "The homecoming is sweet," he said feelingly, "and today, when I return to Bowdoin, now my Alma Mater, I can assure all my former colleagues and good friends in Brunswick that my wife and I have never had a better time or felt more at home than when we were here at Bowdoin College."

Greetings from the other colleges of the State of Maine were brought by President Arthur Hauck, of the University of Maine. His words were charged with the warm admiration which President Sills's administration has inspired in his fellow administrators in New England and throughout the nation. Affecting a "down East" habit of understatement, Dr. Hauck allowed that Bowdoin's honor and distinction among the great colleges of the country enabled him to say that "she has averaged pretty well for these parts." Indeed, the felicitations of Dr. Hauck and the other delegates and guests, led Governor Summer Sewall to remark joyously, "I almost felt that Bowdoin was getting an honorary degree. It made me tremendously happy." The Governor, whose own LL.D. was conferred as a token of the respect of the College for his two brilliant terms of office in the Blaine House, spoke humorously but proudly of the Bowdoin Succession in Augusta, "When it happens that one Bowdoin man follows another Bowdoin man in the office of Governor, that is an occasion particularly joyous to us all." "When I say 'all,'" he explained, "I mean you, myself, and Horace Hildreth."

The honor of representing the undergraduates of the College in its

cendant of James Bowdoin, who testified to the pride of his fellows now in College in Bowdoin's past, and their awareness of the responsibility to justify their presence in the classroom at a time of world war.

Not unlike other birthday celebrations, this notable party inspired gifts as well as good cheer. Dwight Sayward '16, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Fund, translated alumni loyalty into dollars when he presented to the College an Alumni Fund check for more than fifty thousand dollars, a record-breaking Alumni Fund total. One of the host of indefatigable Class Agents who made this total possible, Paul Kendall Niven '16, was awarded the Alumni Achievement distinction amid deafening applause. Scott C. W. Simpson, President of the General Alumni Association, made the presentation address.

This citation ended the party—save for the most significant words of all. Significant, because in reporting on "The State of the College," President Kenneth C. M. Sills pledged the College to a forward-looking year in which the glories of the first one hundred and fifty years would serve only as an inspiring reminder that Bowdoin must look—not to the past, but to the future. This was by all odds the most valuable lesson learned during the sesquicentennial program.

And wonder of wonders—nobody sang Phi Chi! Perhaps the hearts of Bowdoin men were too full of the praises of their Alma Mater's ancient glory for further affirmation. Whatever the reason, no son of Bowdoin College on land, on sea, or in the air on this Sesquicentennial Day of June 24, 1944, had the slightest shadow of a doubt that Bowdoin would "thunder evermore!"

Chairman Sayward Reports New Highs — Class of 1941 Wins Cup

"If there lingers in anyone's mind any doubt of the loyalty and affection of Bowdoin men for their college, the results of the 1943-44 Alumni Fund must dispel it." So spoke Dwight Sayward '16, Chairman of the Fund Directors when he announced at the Commencement Dinner that the proceeds had already passed $50,000.

The objectives for the year were $40,000 from 3,000 contributors. When the College and Fund books were closed on June 30, 2,971 contributors had given $52,128.33. One objective was missed by a hair; the other was exceeded gloriously. Tables shown herewith reveal how the results were obtained.

A complete report and analysis of the 1943-44 Fund has been sent to officers of the College, members of the Governing Boards, the Alumni Council, Class Agents and Fund Directors. There can be mentioned here only the highlights of the campaign which brought to Bowdoin the largest total to income from the largest number of contributors in the Fund's history.

Thirty-nine classes made records in number of contributors, forty-four in total gifts, and thirty-seven in both respects.

Fifteen classes joined the thousand dollar group, three of them—1898, 1910 and 1916—contributing more than $2,000. 1898 and 1910 broke the previous high record held by 1903 for gifts to income from any class.

reported gifts from 100 or more members, 1929 setting a record with 111. 1898 and 1916 enrolled all their members as contributors.

Though technically not an alumni class until after the 1943-44 Alumni Fund year and therefore not part of the Cup competition, the Class of 1944 requested the privilege of making an organized effort for the Fund. Their 104 contributors (87 of them in service) and their gifts of $557.00 to income in addition to $546.30 to their class scholarship Fund are valued and welcome evidence of the support our youngest alumni are giving to the College.

Slightly more than half the Bowdoin alumni of known address contributed something and thereby became subscribers to the ALUMNUS for next year. Included were nearly 400 non-graduate alumni and about one-half of the Bowdoin men in the armed forces.

The average gift to income rose to $17.05.

Once again a class but three years out of college has won the competition for the Class of 1906 Cup. Enrolling 100 of its scattered members (84 of these givers and the class agent are in the service) the Class of 1941 contributed over $1,000 and posted the amazing performance score of 297.40.

The Class of 1940, last year's winner, is again high in the competition as are the classes of 1938, 1943, 1937, and 1942. That these young alumni are to be found with seasoned older groups in the tabulation of demonstrated devotion to the College, augurs well for Bowdoin in the years to come.

The nineteen Alumni Fund Scholarships awarded during the past year bring to 61 the total of awards to freshmen who might not otherwise have entered Bowdoin. These awards and the support of the newly established Placement Bureau constitute the two major specific projects for which the Fund was sought. Other sums are being used to underwrite the ALUMNUS, to build a reserve for Fund Scholarships after the war, to provide travel to interest prospective students and to furnish the alumni office with additional help and equipment. But the most important use of the Fund this year, is the substantial alumni gift to the unrestricted funds of the College. Until the emergency passes and enrollment approaches normal proportions, that annual gift may well be the means by which Bowdoin is able to continue its enviable career.

Chairman Sayward, however, believes long range planning is wise. Although Bowdoin has recently been notified of a $500,000 bequest which will be available on the expiration of a life interest, large gifts to colleges are likely to be less frequent than in years past. Not only is the combined giving of many alumni through the Alumni Fund important to current budgets but that sort of financial support may become a valuable aid in acquiring major additions to plant or endowment. Mr. Sayward suggests that even so large an undertaking as a much needed building could be handled through the Alumni Fund over a period of years. He reminds us that the subject of a war memorial will soon be under discussion and proposes that a useful, practical memorial might be had by employing the machinery of the Alumni Fund.

Laying great stress on the work of the Class Agents as the most important of all factors in a successful Fund, the chairman urges continued organized effort to the improvement and the intensifying of their appeals to the end that more and more Bowdoin men shall participate and consider it a privilege to do so. As two of the most promising fields in which to cultivate contributors he mentions the non-graduate and medical groups.

While we at Bowdoin have not yet reached the heights of Alumni Fund performance at Dartmouth, we have made notable strides toward those heights and may perhaps be forgiven a paraphrasing of President Hopkins' recent remarks.

Such results do not accrue in an alumni body except after painstaking thought and effort upon the part of some comparatively small group which organizes and mobilizes the loyalty of the whole. It is then to the Class Agents that we express thanks for proving what Bowdoin alumni can do—what Bowdoin is. As Dr. Butler, who eulogized the strawberry, might have said, "Doubtless God could have made a better alumni group but doubtless God never did."

On The Campus

Athletics

IN addition to the wartime physical education program, whose requirements are being rigidly met, some Bowdoin teams have enjoyed a competitive schedule. Varsity baseball and tennis teams, made up from young civilian students, have met teams from Bates, Colby and Harvard as well as teams representing the Naval Air Station and the Radar School. While some students are playing golf, no Bowdoin team has been formed. Two student softball teams are included in the league organized under the Brunswick recreational program.

The naval military swimming classes are being held in the pool and one advanced class pursues its rigorous course.

Cross country is planned for the fall but there appears little hope that the student desire for football can be gratified, because of the small student body and the difficulty in arranging competition.

Dramatics

DESPITE the absence of their Director on leave at Yale, where he is conducting a survey of college theatres built since 1930, the dramatic club is continuing to function. A number of pleasant comments, including that of Mark Van Doren, have been received concerning the performance of As You Like It, even though it was forced indoors by the rain on June 24. Fortunately, the dress rehearsal was performed outdoors, and a number of excellent photographs will indicate to future generations how we should have liked to perform the play.

For the fall trimester the club will work under the presidency of Dana Little '46, son of Lt. Comdr. Little '17, with Raymond Paynter '47 as Secretary, Eric Hirshler '46 continuing as Business Manager, and Richard Roundy '47 as Production Manager. Plans have been laid for a Gilbert and Sullivan performance, in which the music will be supplied by recordings while the dialogue is handled by actors, during the present session of the College. This performance will be offered to the Red Cross Hospital Entertainment Committee for the vicinity, which serves the hospitals of Southern Maine.

In the fall trimester, monthly play readings will be held in the Moulton Union for the general public in order to keep the actors in trim. The production men will be repairing and refurbishing the equipment used in Memorial Hall, much of which has not been attended to since 1935. And the playwrights will be preparing their manuscripts for the one-act play contest, which will be the first production of the club in February.

The Masque and Gown was fortunate to complete its financial year well in the black, and is therefore able to plan during the fall the building of a new platform for Memorial Hall—which, incidentally, also serves the speakers at the Commencement Dinner. A new proscenium drop will replace the well-worn and battered original which has screened off the ceiling over the stage for the past ten years.

Membership will drop from 22 to 11 with the September graduation, but excellent prospects in the June freshmen promise to fill the gaps. The new executive committee is ambitious and efficient; so the continuous operation of the club will undoubtedly outlast Hitler.

Bowdoin On The Air

FORTNIGHTLY broadcasts continue. June 21 was Masque and Gown night. Songs and readings from As You Like It, the Commencement play, were presented by Professor Quinby, Lloyd Knight, Donald Koughan, William Lamparter, and Albert Long. On July 6 Lloyd Knight broadcast a vocal program. The July 20 broadcast was omitted for want of broadcast facilities. On August 3 Stanley Weinstein introduced President Sills, who spoke on The Future of the Liberal Arts College. A new student clarinet quartet under Professor Tillotson's direction featured the August 17 broadcast. Lifshitz '45, Chadwick '47, Kimball '48, and Larchian '48 made up the quartet; Glover '46 was the announcer.

Music

ACTIVITIES of the department during the summer trimester have been largely the Friday musical chapels. At these services, Lloyd Knight '45, baritone, Thomas Chadwick '47, saxophone and clarinet soloist, have given several programs. A clarinet quartet, something new in college musical circles, has also appeared. These students have been featured on the Bowdoin-on-the-Air programs.

The concert series for the coming season will bring nationally known artists to the campus. October 19 and 20 mark the return of the popular tenor, Yves Tinayre, who, with interesting string accompaniments will head a two-day festival of old music. The Brunswick Choral Society will provide backgrounds for two of Mr. Tinayre's solos.

The Boston String Quartet, whose concert was a feature of the Sesquicentennial observance, will present the first Shostakovich symphony on November 5. Four other concerts during the winter will bring an English vocal duo, Madame Elizabeth Schumann, an instrumental trio, and a Lied singer.

Forty-six freshmen, the first contingent of the Class of 1948, entered college at the beginning of the summer trimester on June 12. They constitute a third of the total civilian registration of 137. Maine and Massachusetts each sent 17; New Jersey, 3; Connecticut and New York, each 2; while one freshman came from each of the following: District of Columbia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Puerto Rico.

Thomas C. Weatherill (Robert W. Weatherill '14), John Whitcomb, Jr., (John Whitcomb '25).

Three of the entering group, James H. Cook, Jr., Stillman P. Hilton, and John L. Tyler, are Bowdoin Scholars and six, Albert W. Chillson, John Cummins, Timothy J. Donovan, Jr., Martin E. Robinson, Joseph C. Wheeler, and James W. Whitcomb, entered on Alumni Fund Scholarships.

Alumni and undergraduates are at work to secure a large freshman group to enter on October 9. Present indications are that at least fifty intend to be on the campus when the fall trimester starts.

As one of the features on Bowdoin's day of celebrating over a cake with a century and a half of candles, on June 24, the Quill celebrated with a cake of forty-seven. Under the very able editorship of Donald N. Koughan '45, this undergraduate literary magazine, one of the oldest American college publications of its kind with an unbroken continuity, came out with an issue of seventy pages, to prove that it can survive this World War as it did the other. The Sesquicentennial Quill presents a sample of undergraduate contributions during half a century and brings things up-to-date by including the winning Hawthorne Prize short story of this year, by Donald Koughan, and John Fried-mann's poem that won the 1944 Forbes Rickard Prize. Among the contributors of the past are Kenneth Sills, Harry Pierce, Wilbert Snow, Kenneth Robinson, Robert Coffin, Forbes Rickard, Hodding Carter, Arthur Stratton, Charles Mergendahl, John Schaffner, Burroughs Mitchell, and Charles Campbell. Remaining copies of the sesquicentennial issue may be had by sending five cents postage to Kenneth Boyer, Bowdoin College Library, Brunswick, Maine.

Among the valued and appreciated observances of the Sesquicentennial was the publication by Dr. Edward G. Fletcher '25 of some fine verses under the title Bowdoin: 1794-1944: A POEM. Dedicated to Professor and Mrs. Ham, the poem was printed by Curtis S. Laughlin '21 at the Machigonne Press in Portland and given a private distribution. Although copyrighted, the poem is not intended for sale or commercial uses. A review by Dr. Burnett appears in the Books section.

In chapel on August 3, President Sills announced that, under the terms of Mrs. Lida A. Turner's will, the College will receive a residuary legacy of $500,000. Mrs. Turner, long a resident of Brunswick, directed that upon the expiration of a life interest the sum shall be paid to the President and Trustees of Bowdoin College as an endowment fund in memory of her nephew, the late George Lincoln Skolfield, Jr., '13.

President Sills voiced the sincere gratitude of the College for Mrs. Turner's bequest and stated that "in a period when so many people are saying that the day of large bequests to institutions of learning is past, Mrs. Turner's thoughtfulness is especially appreciated."

Placement

The questionnaire service survey, sent to all Bowdoin men in service, continues with favorable response. To date, better than twenty-five per cent return has been received. Almost the same number plan to return to College as those who indicate their interest to register with the Bureau. It is gratifying to learn that a large proportion of men who have so far replied plan to return to College to complete their formal education. With this in mind, the Bureau plans to send, in the very near future, to all Bowdoin men in the armed service, an excerpt of the essential provisions of The Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, commonly known as the "G. I. Bill of Rights." This act became law on June 22, 1944. Section 3, Title II explains the educational program for veterans.

Cooperation has been most enthusiastic from all sources. Alden H. Sawyer, President of the Alumni Council, has appointed an official Placement Committee to assist wherever possible in the organization of placement and vocational committees throughout the country. Members from that body include Don J. Edwards '16, Chairman, Boston; Neal Allen '07, (from the Governing Boards) Portland; Roy A. Foulke '19, New York; and Roliston G. Woodbury '22, New York. Active placement committees have been established in the following cities under these chairmen: New York, Hugh Mitchell '19; Boston, Ted Fowler '24; Chicago, Joseph Newell '12; Detroit, Stanley Dole '13; Springfield, Louis Doherty '19; Vermont, James Shea '25.

Philadelphia, under the leadership of John L. Brummett '11 and Gordon Hargraves '19, is in the process of organization, as well as the associations from Portland, Cincinnati, New Haven, Brunswick, Worcester, Manchester, Los Angeles, and several county organizations in Maine. All Bowdoin clubs or associations have been contacted and it is hoped, in the near future the committee organizations will be complete. The Bureau plans to release in the next ALUMNUS the complete roster of all the placement committees, giving the Chairman and names of the members. Those who have not organized as yet should do so as soon as convenient and advise the Bureau. All Alumni would be particularly helpful at this time if they would forward to the Bureau any information regarding offers to assist in placing discharged service men. The Bureau will forward this information to the proper area committees.

Gerald Gardner Wilder '04

"Mr. Wilder dead?" "That's too bad. I'm sorry. He was a good man." These are the words of a Brunswick carpenter spoken to me on the street the day after Gerald Wilder's death; and I have no doubt they express sincerely the feelings of scores of men and women as they heard the sad news of his passing. People of his native town, where he had grown up as a boy and where he had spent his summer vacations; his neighbors and fellow-townsmen here in Brunswick who had known him for years; students and graduates of Bowdoin College; his co-workers in the Library; his colleagues and former colleagues on the Bowdoin Faculty, to whom he had endeared himself as a companion and friend, all these, as they recalled his kindness, his un-failing courtesy, his quiet dignity, his cheerful, imperturbable spirit, and his absolute faithfulness to duty, all these and many others, I am sure, when they heard of his death, said to themselves or to their friends as I did: "I'm sorry. Bowdoin has indeed lost a loyal son. I shall miss him sorely. It is hard to think of the College without him. Gerald Wilder was a good man."

His was not a life of adventure, full of excitement and danger. The life of a college teacher or college librarian seldom is. Not often does it resemble, even remotely, that of a warrior amidst the roar of artillery, planting his country's flag on a bastion of liberty, or even that of an attorney-at-law boldly contending in open court for the rights of his client. More often it is full of what may well seem, at least to an outsider, commonplace, routine work. Even a man who occupied so important a position in the college world as did President Eliot of Harvard, and who initiated not a few reforms, once wrote: "I should say that nine-tenths of my work, from day to day, was routine work." So, too, seemed the work of this Bowdoin librarian. Morning after morning, for forty years, at eight-thirty he was at his desk, and, except for a respite of an hour or so for lunch, seldom left the Library before five at night.

But though full of routine, his work was not petty. Often it called for important decisions. During his administration the Library grew from 110,000 to 201,000 volumes; and the obligation was upon him to see that it grew symmetrically. There was not a large sum of money to be spent for library purposes each year. That money must be spent wisely. Each department must have its quota, and what that quota was to be he must decide. He was always cautious and conservative. The Library must be kept true to its traditions. It must conserve the best. If it was to "preserve for posterity the wealth of the wise," it must shun cheapness, vulgarity and mediocrity. And here of course even doctors might disagree. But whatever decisions were made, everyone concerned was sure of this: The Librarian was influenced never by selfish profit or personal prejudice or pride of opinion, but always by an honest desire to build up for Bowdoin a well-proportioned library suited to its needs.

And to this difficult work Gerald Wilder brought a well-ordered and disciplined mind. He did his work with calmness, system and regularity. In all the forty-five years that I knew him never did I see him in any way so emotionally upset that he did not reason coolly and logically. And his noticeably accurate memory seldom, if ever, failed him. He remembered persons and locations and events not approximately but in specific and concrete detail. It was this logical, incisive, accurate thinking that made him not only an informing but an interesting conversationalist. His, to be sure, was not the mind of a dreamer or a poet. His talk was never "cloud-capt, cloud-based, or lawlessly meandering," neither could it be said that "glorious islets rose out of its haze." His was more the mind of a scientist. He was a close observer and not afraid of facts and figures. Indeed he took pleasure in dealing with them. If circumstances had not made him a librarian, he would, I suspect, have been a teacher of science or mathematics. But I must not give the impression that his mind was simply a "clear, cold, logic engine," or an ample storehouse of accurate information. It was also the servant of a tender conscience. A sense of humor, too, enriched his thought, added spice to his words, and made him a delightful and responsive listener. And while he never wore his heart upon his sleeve, that warm human emotions welled up within him, no one who knew him at all intimately could for a moment doubt. Certain subjects touched him deeply,—his family, the reputation of the Library, the good name of the College, his student days, his native town, his boyhood associations. The last conversation that I had with him, two weeks before he was stricken, concerned his early school-days in Pembroke, where I had taught a term of high school when I was a Junior in college. For a half-hour or more we chatted about that pleasant little Maine village as he and I had known it,—its manners and customs, its schools, its teachers, his school companions; we recalled them by name, and we spoke of his sister whom I had known as a brilliant pupil. Before we closed I could not but notice a bit of trembling in his voice and the coming of tears into his eyes. Memories of a happy past had touched his emotions.

In the death of Gerald Wilder Bowdoin graduates have lost an understanding and dependable friend, and Bowdoin College a devoted son, proud to be for many years her faithful servant.

Books

EDWARD G. FLETCHER, Bowdoin 1794-1944: Occasional Stanzas. Printed for the Author at the Machigonne Press, Portland, Maine, 1944. Pp., 12. Copyrighted.

A college birthday is the occasion of many expressions of esteem, formal and informal. In print or in casual spontaneous exchange men show their sentimental regard for long-persistent service. Bowdoin's cycle of a hundred and fifty years just completed has been such an occasion. It would be ungracious to distinguish among forced and heart-felt tributes, but surely among the latter is one that comes from Texas, where its author, Edward G. Fletcher '25, is a member of the Department of English of the State University.

"Bowdoin 1794-1944: Occasional Stanzas" came unheralded in my mail within a month of the birthday, and I gave myself up promptly and with increasing happiness to exploring it. Uncommonly well treated by its printer, and dedicated with warm feeling to Professor and Mrs. Ham "for all they have meant to me and to so many other Bowdoin men," the eleven stanzas of varying length present in some two hundred lines of free verse the unfolding life of Bowdoin, together with the poet's apostrophe to his college. His fancy selects by right of feeling within a frame-work of stanza topics which I interpret thus:

- I. The Foundation of Bowdoin.
- II. The Formal Opening.
- III. The Planting of the Thorndike Oak.
- IV. The Presidents.
- V. The Teachers.
- VI. The Alumni.
- VII-VIII. Echoes of Undergraduate Life.
- IX. Apostrophe to the Place in the Beauty of the Changing Seasons.
- X. Bowdoin in Three Wars and its Unchanging Heritage amidst All Change.
- XI. Apostrophe to the College.

The style varies with the theme. Sometimes description prevails. Sometimes the poet wittingly emerges as a person directly addressing a companion. Some lines are only an honor roll of names; others are mere colloquialisms; and some are pedestrian in the way often met in free verse. But as item after item flickers upon the mind, one finds that the poet's caprice has prepared a blend redolent of the rich variety of the age-long Bowdoin. There is a gaiety, generous admiration, and sometimes sting in his characterization. Many a reader will smile, and even be surprised into a chuckle, as a line evokes echoes in his own spacious memory; and he will, at some other line, not be quite without a still pang of longing for his own dear past. Before him will vividly rise the " . . . college, close to the dark pines,

And the vast sea, so near and yet unseen:
In the lilac fragrance of a slow spring's cool lingering,
When the new leaves unfold so slowly, one can watch them;"
and other senses salute the lines:
"Or in the bracing fall, when Topsham
Foreside blazes,
And your own oaks and elms and maples glow,

The fallen, unraked leaves crunch under foot,
And the smoke of their burning piles invigorates the air."

In the fluent rhythm of this Ninth Stanza, the poet's free verse rises, for my taste, to its highest level.

The saddest lines are addressed to the College—sad with an unresolved conflict within the poet's feelings:

"Guide us to see, to know life as it is,
Unblinded by romantic, ineffectual dreams, Yield us the sweet assuagement of your years,
Help us to bear, sustain us to endure
The desolate rootlessness of modern life,
The intolerable clutch in the parched, aching throat,
The gnawing loneliness of man."

From which he turns in refuge to the stoic's thought of duty always remaining to be done

"In the fine fellowship of Bowdoin men."

The excellent printing is the work of CURTIS STUART LAUGHLIN '21, of the Machigonne Press, Portland, Maine, who, having acquired the type of the former Mosher Press, worthily carries on the tradition of style for which that press was famous.

CHARLES T. BURNETT

ARTHUR J. RUSSELL '83, Goodbye Newspaper Row, 1943. Privately printed.

Nostalgia is a natural attribute of a good newspaper man, particularly one of the stamp of Mr. Russell, who, Maine born and Bowdoin reared, went west for a distinguished career on the staff of The Minneapolis Journal, while that paper grew from a frontier sheet to full-fledged maturity in the Fourth Estate over the turn of the century.

Mr. Russell's book is one of eighteen chapters, each reviewing an incident in his journalistic career. The variety is typical: the rugged individualism of the publisher; the mystery of a strange "cloud of power" sweeping over a revival meeting; an Indian squaw's stolid first view of a railroad train; and Carrie Nation's militant battle against Demon Rum.

Throughout Mr. Russell's review of the highlights of an honorable career, he pays high tribute to the undying loyalty of a real newspaperman to his profession.

P. K. NIVEN.

LAWRENCE SARGENT HALL, Hawthorne: Critic of Society, Yale University Press, New Haven, 1944. Pp., xiii, 200. $3.00.

In all the interpretations of Hawthorne's life and his writing, no biographer or critic has spent much time on Hawthorne as a spokesman of democratic society. Lieutenant Hall has covered Hawthorne's social criticism and ideals extensively in this volume. It is time they were brought to the attention of students of Hawthorne.

From the time he graduated from Bowdoin in 1825 until his death in 1864, Hawthorne had a more realistic awareness of the social problems in America than Emerson, who refused to recognize evil; than Thoreau, who depended on his conscience; and than Whitman, whose writing was a projection of his own ego—in the transcendental sense. Hawthorne's sojourn in England broadened and crystallized his views of America, and led him, among other things, into active participation in the attempt to improve the situation of American seamen in our navy and merchant marine. His concern over the Civil War was focussed on the spectacle of Americans discrediting democracy by their strife among themselves, and he died with the outcome of that strife unanswered.

This aspect of Hawthorne's life, which dispels the notion too frequently held that he lived apart from his contemporaries and the world about him and withdrew into his Puritan background, should be studied carefully by all future biographers of the novelist.

MANNING HAWTHORNE.

NOTES

The gift of SARAH ORNE JEWETT material to the College, by the Gilman family of Brunswick, consists of nineteen volumes by Miss Jewett (fifteen of which are first editions), thirteen letters to members of the Gilman family, and a framed photograph. One letter is from Athens and describes a visit to the plain of Marathon; one is from Boston; the rest are from Miss Jewett's home in South Berwick, Maine. For the most part, they are concerned with personal and domestic affairs: her gardening, her new horse, recipes, news about friends, Topsham Fair, etc. The following passage, from a letter of July 10, 1901, to Mrs. Charles A. Gilman, Sr., is of especial interest to the College:

"Of course I was delighted and full of pride and pleasure in the degree [the doctorate of letters from Bowdoin], if only because it would have pleased father so much. You know how warmly attached he always was to the college, and how some inheritance of that feeling has naturally come to me."

Miss Jewett's father was THEODORE HERMAN JEWETT, M.D., of the Class of 1834, in memory of whom she gave the stained glass window in Memorial Hall.

Farrar and Rinehart announce for October publication Winds of Fears, a novel of race conflict in the South, by Major HODDING CARTER, U.S.A. '27, whose Lower Mississippi was most favorably received two years ago.

Another authoritative study by DR. ALFRED C. KINSEY '16, of Indiana University, is Edible Wild Plants of Eastern North America.

Recently published at Leicester, England, is The Story of Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, in Modern English, by MAURICE ROY RIDLEY, L.H.D. (Hon. '32), of Balliol College, Oxford, who was the Tallman Professor in 1931-2.

The Oxford University Press announces publication of The War: Fourth Year, by EDGAR MCINNIS, with an Introduction by Viscount Wavell. Professor McInnis, of the Department of History, the University of Toronto, was Tallman Professor during 1941-2.

Looking

Commencement was preceded by the "Burial of Anna" (Analytic Geometry), an elaborate revival of an old-time ceremony. A torchlight procession preceded by a man on horseback and the Bath band, escorting a bier borne by six bearers in funereal garb, paraded down Maine Street and returned to the campus where the corpse was cremated and the ashes buried with elaborate obsequies.

The freshmen journeyed to Bath by train for their farewell banquet at the Sagadahoc House, and necessarily stayed overnight in the absence of return transportation available after the celebration.

The class day orator discussed "Peace Without Dishonor." Seniors' last chapel was held at the close of the class day exercises. Weather conditions compelled the class to hold the Commencement Hop in the Tontine Hotel instead of "on the Green" (i.e., on a platform under the Thorndike Oak).

Thirty-eight graduated, of whom none now survive. Notable in the list were James R. Day, Samuel Valentine Cole, D. O. S. Lowell and Henry K. White, who became heads respectively of Syracuse University, Wheaton College, Roxbury Latin School and Bangor High School; Henry Johnson, who for many years was to be on the Bowdoin faculty, and Don A. H. Powers, who figured prominently for many years in Maine politics and government.

At the Commencement Concert Annie Louise Cary was the soloist, with the Germania Band and the Temple Quartet.

At the Commencement dinner in Memorial Hall, the scheduled speakers were Governor Dingley, Professor Stowe (Harriet's husband), President Allen of Girard College, Philadelphia, and President Hamlin of Roberts College, Constantinople; but a lively, unplanned and somewhat embarrassing discussion of military drill developed. General Anderson and Judge Goddard advocated compulsory military training. Rev. Mr. Hawes and other speakers pungently presented the opposing view.

The Boards radically revised the college calendar, cutting four weeks from the six weeks' winter vacation, and correspondingly extending the seven weeks' summer vacation. Two weeks at Christmas and one in April were henceforth to be the only long breaks in the college year.

Two rival telegraph lines were installed from North Winthrop to South Appleton with two stations between and "gentlemanly operators in constant attendance."

The class day orator (George Merrill) took the Crusades as his subject. The poem was by Henry Andrews; the opening address by F. W. Dana; the history by T. C. Chapman; and the prophecy by Rufus Hinckley. Rain scattered the audience before the exercises were concluded, but the down-pour did not prevent the class from cheering the halls, and smoking the pipe of peace. As usual, the "dance on the green" was held indoors.

The Commencement prize was won by F. J. Libby, who discussed the Youth of Man. E. M. Simpson led the class in scholarship.

Forty-seven graduated, of whom nearly half survive a half century later. Thirty-five honorary degrees were bestowed.

Hon. F. M. Drew resigned as Secretary of the Trustees after twenty-nine years of service.

George T. Files was elected Professor of German.

Chief Justice Fuller was elected a trustee.

Plans for Whittier Field were being prepared. A new wooden grandstand, under construction on the Delta, was later removed to Whittier Field.

The college grounds and buildings were valued at $450,000. The endowment (exclusive of the Garcelon fund) was $400,000, and there were 219 students.

The closet door at 8 Appleton contained the signatures of all the occupants of the room for the seventy years, during which the building had been in use.

This "Victory Commencement" was the first complete Commencement since 1916. It occurred on a weekend. This innovation was approved by those who attended, but met with such objection among the alumni generally that the experiment was not tried again for many years, when a comprehensive report to the alumni by an able committee accompanied with a questionnaire disclosed a change of sentiment, and our present practice was established.

The Baccalaureate address by President Sills discussed the proper use of victory. He foresaw some of the perils which became facts in the ensuing years.

The Masque and Gown gave The Tempest on the Art Building steps.

Kappa Sigma won the interfraternity baseball championship.

Professor Hormell was on leave of absence in France.

The 124th Commencement began on Sunday and continued through Thursday. Eight hundred sixty-eight registered—up to this time almost a record.

The alumni association met for the first time in the new Moulton Union, electing Lyman A. Cousens '02, as president.

George A. Emery '63, and Franklin Littlefield '64, were the oldest graduates attending commencement.

Rear Admiral William Veazie Pratt, receiving one of the nine honorary degrees, spoke eloquently at the Commencement dinner of the perils of disarmament.

The degree of A.M. was bestowed on the college librarian, Gerald Wilder.

During the summer 7,200 persons used the swimming pool under the auspices of the Red Cross.

In twelve years, the average height of men entering Bowdoin had increased over an inch, and the average weight, four pounds.

From The Mail Bag

... We have trained for two years for this job. That was a real period of training, during which we lacked only one thing—language classes. That's one thing we all were weak in, although Johnny Doughboy gets along all right anywhere, anytime, without the benefit of linguistic preparation. But it would help. I'd like to stress that in my A.B. course, which I boast was liberal arts at its best, so far as exposure to education is concerned, we should put more stress on relationship with people, not books, and really require a higher standard of language ability, especially conversational ability.

We hit the beach of France on D-Day and during our first real air raid, what do you think I thought about? That's right, I wished that I were back in the cupola of the President's House in Brunswick where we used to be served coffee during the thick of things. It was a far cry from such recollections D-Day night, however, but we pulled through all right and have been shuttling back and forth ever since taking over the Army and bringing back casualties.

—1943

... I shall never forget the Commencement of 1942 on Memorial Day when I received my degree. It was a very happy moment of my life and at that moment I began to realize how much that diploma meant to me. It now hangs in our living-room at home beside Dad's and I hope that before too many years there will be a third diploma to distinguish our home.

—1942

... Does the campus look the same as ever? It makes me homesick to think of it. I have a beautiful colored picture of the chapel in the fall here in my office. Every time I get the idea I'm going to get a job after the war I look at it and that changes my mind. I find the system fool-proof.

—A non-graduate of 1945

—1944

... I have just received my copy of the Bowdoin ALUMNUS. It was waiting in the mail here, as we returned from maneuvers. I want to congratulate you on this issue, the finest I can remember. And I also want to thank you for it, for what it means to me. The picture on the front cover is superb; I am homesick. But it's a happy kind of homesickness, if you know what I mean. It's what I had, and was fortunate to have, and it's what I'll have again. It's not lost to me. It's just out of sight, around a corner, like prosperity used to be....It's all the same, isn't it? Bowdoin, I mean. It hasn't changed physically. Twin spires; those fire escapes on the rear of the library—they cast such dark shadows; the chimneys of Hyde just visible through the trees; the Zete House roof, two levels, where a softball became an automatic two-bagger or home run; and isn't that the twelve-forty bringing my girl down to a house party? ...There isn't much else I can say. It's not necessary, anyway. Bowdoin is Bowdoin, and everyone who has been there understands how I feel. Just don't let it change; just keep it there for me and my children and all the others who will be sending their "sons to Bowdoin in the fall." Thank you again for the ALUMNUS.

—1944

Here I am in the land of my ancestors. My grandparents traveled across three thousand miles of water to get out of here, and where do I end up—in Italy! ... We stopped in Africa before coming here. ... The Arabs were good for plenty of laughs. The funniest thing that I saw was an old Arab riding along on his donkey singing "Shoo, Shoo, Baby."

—1944

... You would be surprised to see how coolly we go about it when we know in a few minutes we are going out to give 'em H---. We are more apt to crab about the steward who sticks his finger in our soup than the actual fighting. Not that I believe in fighting, but each time we go out it brings us one day nearer home and love and the only things that count.

... My regiment was the first of the foot troops in and through Rome. To do it, Sunday we made a forced march of two miles of mountains and about twelve or fourteen miles on the level. (We were also the first to hit Naples.)...Lord only knows where we'll be when you get this but I sure hope it is way up Italy and well towards Germany and Berlin. We've got them running and I just hope we can keep them going.

...We're really going to town over here now. If we can keep going at this rate, at least the end is in sight for the European campaign. I can't say that I'll be sorry even though it has been interesting at times.

... I have met several Navy men who spent six to eight weeks studying at Bowdoin. They have only the highest praise for the caliber of instruction Bowdoin offered....We will have gained a tremendous amount of good will throughout the country—surprising how many in the service know Bowdoin. The College could well capitalize on this and attract boys from all over the United States. The mingling of boys from other sections would benefit the College and the undergraduates. I do not feel the wider representation would affect Bowdoin's background or reputation as a New England College of liberal arts.

—1932

... I wish I could adequately convey my feelings of great pride occasioned by the article in July 3rd TIME. It came at the end of a long, rough trip and as a sort of climax to a full year of bouncing about in the Central Pacific with little contact with the College. So the feeling of pride was mixed with a large measure of nostalgia and topped with an even greater desire to contribute in such ways as are possible my small bit to help the College continue its success in the future.

1937

... I drank a toast to the College on the 24th, which was the best I could do for the moment. How I look forward to attending a commencement again when peace returns!

with visiting uniformed alumni—all are used to make this listing complete.

It is, however, no mean task to overcome the handicap which we face because service men themselves do not keep us informed as to their whereabouts, rank, and activity. So we renew our plea for help from all members of the Bowdoin family that our proud record of war service may be kept accurate.

Censorship continues to ban the publishing of addresses. The Alumni Office will be glad to supply any that we have on request.

Necrology

1874 THOMAS KNEELAND, dean of the Minneapolis bar, died July 6, as a result of injuries suffered a month before in a fall at his home. Mr. Kneeland was born in Harrison, July 19, 1851. After his graduation from Bowdoin, he served as principal of South Berwick Academy for three years before turning to the study of law. He spent two years in Portland and in 1879 moved to Minneapolis, Minn., later being admitted to the bar in that state. A law partner of the late United States Senator Thomas D. Schall and the late Freeman P. Lane, he was a member of the State House of Representatives for sixteen years, serving on the House Judiciary Committee for several terms. Prior to his accident, Mr. Kneeland remained active, visiting his office daily.

1875 Former President of the Maine State Dairy Association and retired industrial engineer of the Maine Central Railroad, WILLIAM GEORGE HUNTON died July 31, at the age of ninety-one. A graduate of Kent's Hill Seminary, after completing his college course, Mr. Hunton studied law and moved to Emporia, Kan., where he maintained a practice for a short time. He returned to Maine in 1881, settling in his native town of Readfield. From 1913 until his retirement in 1939, he was employed by the Maine Central Railroad. He was an early 4-H Club enthusiast, a member of Lafayette Lodge, F. and A. M., and very active in agricultural organizations. His wife's death occurred in 1940. Mr. Hunton was a member of Zeta Psi fraternity.

1876 HON. ALPHIEUS SANFORD, former overseer of the College and a prominent Massachusetts lawyer, died August 10, at the age of 88. He was born July 5, 1856, in Attleboro, Mass. He attended Boston Public Latin School and in 1872 entered Bowdoin where he was captain of the baseball team his junior and senior years and president of his class and of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity his senior year. After graduation from college, he studied law and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in 1880. He was a member of the old Boston Common Council, of the House of Representatives of the Massachusetts Legislature, and of the Boston Election Board Commission. He was chairman of the Boston Board of Aldermen for two years. In 1917 and 1918 he was a member of the Massachusetts Senate and in 1919 he was appointed Clerk of the Municipal Court of the Dorchester district of the City of Boston, which position he held until 1935. Then, giving up all business, he remained at his home in Dorchester. His wife, Mrs. Mary Gardner Sanford, and three grandchildren survive him.

1882 WALLACE EDWARD MASON, Ed.D., retired president of Keene Teachers College and prominent New England educator, died June 13, following a short illness after his return from a winter in Florida. Dr. Mason was born in Conway, N. H., June 24, 1861. Except for two years of law practice in Tennessee, his life was devoted to school work. He had served both as a high school principal and superintendent of public schools before accepting the principalship of Keene Normal School in 1911. During the twenty-eight years of Dr. Mason's service at Keene, the school grew from a two-year course to one of four years with degrees. He was one of the founders and first president of the Keene Rotary Club and only recently had filed papers as Republican candidate to the New Hampshire Legislature, having served in that capacity for the past two years. A member of Alpha Delta Phi, he received a master's degree from Bowdoin in 1927, and later an honorary degree of Doctor of Education was given him by Rhode Island College of Education. His widow and three sons survive him, one of whom is Wallace E. Mason, Jr. '14.

1888 The death of JOHN HERBERT MAXWELL of Livermore Falls occurred at his winter home in St. Petersburg, Fla., on June 20. He was born in Webster, seventy-eight years ago. Becoming a teacher upon his graduation from college, Mr. Maxwell soon left that profession and turned to law, establishing a practice in Livermore Falls in 1895. He had served as judge of the Municipal Court of that community for many years and was active in politics, being a member of the State Republican Committee. He established the Livermore Falls Light and Power Company, which was later absorbed by the Central Maine Power Company, and was closely connected with the business life of Livermore Falls until his retirement a few years ago. He was a member of Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

1893 HARRY CLIFTON FABYAN, associate justice of the Brighton District Court since 1903, died August 15, in Boston, Mass. He was born in Portland, June 15, 1870, and after graduating from Bowdoin, he received an LL.B. from Boston University Law School in 1896. A Boston lawyer, Judge Fabyan also had been president of the Brighton Five Cents Savings Bank since 1913. He was a past president of the Bowdoin Alumni Association, chairman of the Boston Group of Mutual Savings Banks, and a member of the Selective Service Board in the Brighton District. During World War I, he served as a government legal adviser and as chairman of Brighton District Public Safety Committee and of the same section's Red Cross chapter. He is survived by his widow, and a brother and sister, both of Portland. He was a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity.

1902 BRIG. GEN. GEORGE EDWIN FOGG, Ret., born in Portland, June 21, 1878, died in the Veterans' Administration Hospital, Bronx, N. Y., July 26, after several months' illness. After his graduation from Bowdoin in 1902, he studied in France. In 1906 he was admitted to the Maine bar and continued his legal practice until 1917, when the Coast Artillery, Maine National Guard, was called to active service. As a major, he saw service in France before the Armistice and with the Army of Occupation. Upon returning to the States, he resumed duty with the Coast Artillery Reserve, receiving the commission of colonel in 1921 and at the same time being given command of the First Coast Defense, which he held until his retirement with the rank of brigadier general in 1942. Resuming civilian life in 1921, he was economist and statistician for the duPont De Nemours Export Company for a year before entering the employ of the Maine Central Railroad as general solicitor. He held this position until ill health forced him to retire in June, 1943. Always active in the interests of Bowdoin, Gen. Fogg served as a member of the Alumni Council and as president of the General Alumni Association. One of his most valuable contributions to the College was his long service as chairman of the Council Committee on Prospective Students. He was the composer of one of the most popular and singable of Bowdoin songs, "We'll Sing to Old Bowdoin." Among the survivors are his brother, Col. C. Eugene Fogg, M'14, and a son, Lt. George E. Fogg, Jr. '43. He was a member of Psi Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities.

1904 The death of GERALD G. WILDER, College librarian for the past twenty-nine years and treasurer of the General Alumni Association, occurred June 28 after a brief illness. He had served as clerk of the faculty for thirty-two years and was a former president of the Maine Library Association. He was born at Pembroke, April 30, 1879, was graduated from Bowdoin in 1904, and in 1929 was awarded an honorary master of arts by his Alma Mater. On July 16, 1908, he married Kathleen Eliot Hobart of Pembroke. In 1899 he joined the Bowdoin College Library staff and in 1915 was named librarian. He was prominent among librarians in Maine and in New England and a member of the American Library Association, American Historical Association, Maine Historical Society, New England Historical Genealogical Association, and was a former vice-president of Bowdoin's Phi Beta Kappa chapter. Active in church work, he was a member and clerk of the First Parish Church for more than twenty years and edited its weekly publication. During World War I, he served as educational secretary at the Marine Training Camp, Parris Island, S. C., and in the Y.M.C.A., Key West, Fla. After spending some time as Director of Education of the Christian Association in Havana, Cuba, he returned to the States and taught in Bridgeport, Conn. He was the former area redistribution and salvage agent for the Army Air Forces materiel command and Rochester's first rationing administrator. He was a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

1909 HARRY ARCH MORRELL, for thirteen years a member of the staff of the Press-Telegram and The Sun, died in Long Beach, Calif., on June 25, following an operation. Mr. Morrell was born September 29, 1886, in Gardiner. Leaving college before graduation, he became interested in journalism, working as a reporter for the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, and as night editor of several New England papers before he enlisted in the Navy in 1917. After serving on the destroyer Cummings in European waters, he returned to the States in 1919, and, receiving his discharge a month later, accepted a position as copy reader on the Buffalo (N. Y.) Courier. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. His widow and one son survive him.

1911 On June 30, RICHARD WESLEY SULLIVAN died suddenly of heart failure at his home, 18 Landseer Street, West Roxbury, Mass. He was born in Boston, August 13, 1889, and had always made his home there. A graduate of English High School where he had acquired no outstanding athletic prowess, "Sully" came to Bowdoin determined to win a varsity football letter. Despite inexperience and a slender body which tipped the scales at about 135 pounds, he plugged away at his goal until he became a heady, skilful quarterback. That determination and grit, coupled with a rare sense of humor and a hearty, infectious laugh, gained lasting friends in college and during his long service as a traffic engineer for the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company. During all his graduate years he was an active member of the Boston Bowdoin Club. Not without a considerable talent in music, he will probably be more widely remembered as a composer of topical verse and particularly for "The Portland Boy" which has been popular with Bowdoin men for over thirty years. His widow, four daughters, and two sons survive. Richard, Jr., '40 is a lieutenant in the overseas forces. He was a member of Delta Upsilon.

Seven years later he took up new duties as an executive of the Ames-Kennedy Company, with headquarters in Boston. His son is a member of the class of 1948.

1920 HAROLD MERLE SPRINGER died at his home in Wethersfield, Conn., on June 19. He was born in Lamoine, April 2, 1897. His college days were interrupted by service in the Navy during World War I. An employee of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company since his graduation, in 1934 he became assistant actuary of the company, and was a member of the Actuaries Club of Hartford. 1941 CAPT. ROGER DAVIS DUNBAR, veteran of more than one hundred air combat missions, was killed in action May 27, according to a War Department telegram. Holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Clusters, Capt. Dunbar was based in England and piloted an A-20 Havoc attack bomber with the Eighth Air Force. He was born July 3, 1919, in Portland. While in high school he set a record in the state interscholastic backstroke that still stands, and as a freshman at Bowdoin, he won the National AAU junior 150-yd. backstroke. He entered the army in April, 1941, and graduated as a combat pilot from Turner Field, Columbus, Ga., the following December. After flying ninety-two combat missions in the Pacific, where his squadron distinguished itself in the fighting around Buna, New Guinea, he was given a month's leave at home last July. He then volunteered for further combat duty and was sent to England. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

1941 LT. CHARLES STEPANIAN, reported missing in action over Italy on March 19, 1944, is now presumed dead by the War Department. Born November 26, 1918, at Malden, Mass., he attended Boston Latin School and Phillips Exeter Academy before coming to Bowdoin. After graduation he was co-director of the New England Repertory Playhouse in Boston, and before entering the Air Corps, he directed a professional theatrical group which presented shows in army and navy hospitals in the New England states. Trained as a navigator at Tyndall Field, Fla., Maxwell Field, Ala., Smyrna, Tenn., and Selman Field, Monroe, La., he went overseas last December as the navigator of a B-24 in the Fifteenth Army Air Force. He was a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity. His parents, a brother and his wife, the former Jean B. Wills, whom he married on November 13, 1943, survive him.

After receiving his Bachelor of Science degree cum laude from Bowdoin, Arnie reported for duty with the Marines and received his commission as second lieutenant at Quantico, Va. He was stationed for a time at New River, N. C., and was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. Early this year he went overseas and took part in the action on the Marshalls and on Kwajalein. After spending some time in a rest camp, he was sent back to his base shortly before his death. He was a member of Chi Psi fraternity. His mother and one brother, Capt. Charles Eck '41 USMC, survive.

1942 LT. FRANCIS JOHN DRISCOLL, JR., who was reported seriously wounded in June while serving with the Fifth Army in Italy, died after being wounded again in France on July 10. News of the Classes

FOREWORD

Writing up class news in the last two years, I am impressed by the fact that the younger generation of Bowdoin men, and it is true of all American college men, are scattered to the four corners of the earth, living, fighting, dying, and having all sorts of experiences among many peoples.

The majority of the boys, before 1941, had little thought or desire for these changes of scene and conditions. Most of them looked forward to business or profession, with a home and family somewhere in the U.S.A. Inevitably and unwillingly, they have been engulfed in a world life that they did not know. They have tasted the bitterness of the dregs of war. Will they come home isolationists? I hope not. Outside of asylums and other resorts for the mentally deficient and defective, there should not be many.

Of one thing these returning Bowdoin men may be sure. Their college is prepared to help in the process of adjustment to peacetime activity. For those who plan to resume their interrupted study, Bowdoin will be ready with refresher courses, new courses, hand-tailored schedules, and any possible arrangement that will speed the completion of educational programs. For those who desire to enter the business and professional world, the College offers the services of the new Placement Bureau under the direction of Samuel A. Ladd, Jr. '29. Alumni are co-operating with placement advisors and committees in cities throughout the country to the end that returning servicemen may find suitable and adequate employment. Ever interested in the welfare of all her sons, a grateful Bowdoin offers special interest and help to those coming back from the wars.

1890 Secretary, WILMOT B. MITCHELL
6 College Street, Brunswick

Prof. Mitchell received his second honorary doctorate of letters, from the University of Maine at its Commencement on June 4.

1894 Secretary, FRANCIS W. DANA
8 Bramhall Street, Portland

The Class of 1894 celebrated its 50th reunion in conjunction with the Sesquicentennial of the College, observed in Brunswick on June 24.

Out of the forty-seven who graduated, there are twenty-five living members, of whom nineteen were in attendance, as follows:

Harry E. Bryant, Newtonville, Mass.; Edward H. Butler, Portland; Arthur Chapman, Portland; Rev. Trelawney C. Chapman, Mechanic Falls; W. Eugene Currier, M.D., Leominster, Mass.; Francis W. Dana, Portland; Frank H. Knight, Winchester, Mass.; Rev. Frederick J. Libby, Washington, D. C.; George C. Littlefield, M.D., Webster, Mass.; Rev. James E. Lombard, Smithland, Iowa; Rev. Albert J. Lord, D.D., Meriden, Conn.; Rev. George A. Merrill, Buckland, Mass.; Clarence E. Michels, Boston, Mass.; Frederick W. Pickard, LL.D., Greenville, Del.; Rev. Robert L. Sheaff, Waldoboro; Edgar M. Simpson, Esq., Bangor; Emery H. Sykes, Esq., New York, N. Y.; William W. Thomas, M.A., Portland; William P. Thompson, Esq., Boston, Mass.

Of the six not in attendance, two were unavoidably detained the last minute; one was out on the coast; one was convalescing in a hospital; one couldn't leave his job in a shipyard; and one could not be located.

Wives in attendance were: Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Dana, Mrs. Sheaff, Mrs. Sykes, Mrs. Simpson, and Mrs. Thomas.

Our record in the Alumni Fund drive was as follows: Of the ten leading classes having the highest percentage of contributors, '94 stood fifth, with a percentage of ninety-six. Of the ten leading classes having the highest average gift, '94 stood eighth, with an average gift of $36.75.

Thanks to the splendid co-operation of the College Bursar, Mr. McIntire, and Mr. Lancaster of the Moulton Union, everything possible was arranged for our comfort. Sleeping quarters were provided on the first and second floors of North and South Hyde Hall, and a campus headquarters on the second floor of the Moulton Union was made available. David Dickson of Portland, the father of four sons who have added luster to Bowdoin's name, was in complete charge of headquarters and did a swell job.

As a special tribute to Fred Pickard, whose gift to the College of the Pickard Athletic Field and Field House cannot be measured in words, we were given the exclusive use of the Field House for the full length of our stay and it was here that we held our Class banquet. Emery H. Sykes of New York, Class President, presided on this occasion and our wish for all succeeding classes on their 50th is simply this: May you carry away from your 50th as many delightful and imperishable memories as we did.

The "Stars and Stripes," London, June 1, has a picture of the presentation of a plaque to Red Cross Director Harvey D. Gibson, upon the completion of two years of service with the ARC in England. The presentation was made by Brig. Gen. Royal B. Lord, ETO, Deputy Chief of Staff. The inscription signed by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower reads: "This plaque commemorates the arrival in May, 1942, of the vanguard of the American Red Cross in the European Theatre of Operations. It symbolizes the appreciation of officers and enlisted personnel of the United States Armed Forces serving in this theatre for the contribution to their welfare by the workers of the American Red Cross, headed by Harvey D. Gibson, Commissioner."

Billy Wing says the Fund showing of the class this year is "only the beginning."

1903 Secretary, CLEMENT F. ROBINSON
85 Exchange Street, Portland

There were seventeen members of 1903 back at the Sesquicentennial and a good time was had by all. It pays to come back to Bowdoin even in war times.

Phil Coffin, for twenty-one years vice-president, and also secretary and treasurer of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company, retired from active service July 15. He was honored by his associates and friends at an informal dinner at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C., on June 1.

Lt. Col. Harold B. Pratt USMC is now stationed in Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

Squire Robinson of Portland is chairman of the Central Fellowship Committee of the Universalist Church of America.

1904 Secretary, EUGENE P. D. HATHAWAY
3360 Mt. Pleasant Street, N. W.
Washington, D. C.

"Ought four" had ten members back at Commencement, although there was no formal celebration of its 40th: Beane, Coan, Emerson, Frost, Leatherbarrow, Lunt, Packard, Putnam, Robinson, and Rowe.

George Burpee, president of the General Aniline and Film Corporation, has been elected a director of the Bank of Manhattan Company.

Chester Emerson, Dean of the Cathedral in Cleveland, Ohio, preached a wonderful sermon (soon to be printed) at the Sesquicentennial celebration, June 25. Don't fail to hear him if you go to Cleveland.

Sam Dana's son George, B.S. and M.D. Harvard, is a first lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps and is at present interning at the Ann Arbor Hospital. Sam is still Dean of the Forestry School at the University of Michigan.

Will D. Gould, who has been seriously ill for some years, is gradually returning to health at his home in Kennebunk.

Dr. William T. Rowe of Rumford has six grandchildren. Bill, Jr., '37 is a paratrooper and Lin '40 is an intern in the Hartford Hospital with an Army Medical Corps first lieutenantcy due him in October.

The class has four of its members on the Board of Overseers: Emerson, Frost, Lunt, and Putnam.

2270 Waverly Street
Palo Alto, Calif.

Brig. Gen. Wallace Philoon received a Master of Science degree at Commencement.

Bill Webb's work as Alumni Fund Agent is reflected in marked improvement in 1905's participation.

1906 Secretary, RALPH G. WEBBER
19 Stone Street, Augusta

Mystery surrounds the fate of Eugene E. Wing, who was manager of a Chinese-owned bank in Manila. There is a report that he and Hugo Miller, Far Eastern representative of Ginn & Co. of Boston, escaped in some sort of boat and headed for Australia but were later captured by the Japanese and interned in Mindanao. Unfortunately even this is unconfirmed.

1907 Secretary, FELIX A. BURTON
234 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

Charles R. Bennett, who retired a few years ago to settle in Hanover, N. H., and Andover, Mass., has been called to Washington by the Foreign Economic Administration to take on some work in the China Division. Soon after his graduation, Mr. Bennett started work in London, England, for the International Banking Corporation, and being transferred to the Orient, he has spent most of his life in Kobe, Japan, and Peking, China.

1908 Secretary CHARLES E. FILES Cornish

Chester A. Leighton, back from South America, is living at Hotel Lafayette, New York, N. Y.

1909 Secretary, ERNST H. POTILE
34 Appleton Place, Glen Ridge, N. J.

The twin senators, Brewster and Burton, as well as Senator White '99 and Representative Robert Hale '10, all came to the Sesqui, so Bowdoin's complete Congressional line-up was on hand and as interesting as they can all be when off the record.

Senator Harold Burton of Ohio was elected Moderator of the American Unitarian Association at its biennial meeting in May.

YOU see American fliers training and patrolling up there every day. You read anxiously the news of the thousands more who fight in foreign skies the world around. There is something we at home can do to help these men. They fly on super high-octane gasoline. It gives them a vital edge in air combat. It adds greatly

Right now the job is to get this fuel to these men in battle. To reach Europe or Africa quickly it must come from the Atlantic Seaboard—cutting shorter the scant supplies of petroleum products here.

Before you drive a needless mile... remember this—American boys are flying and fighting for you. Some of them are dying for you. Oil is their ammunition! ... Use it wisely.

THESE FIVE ADVERTISERS have been with us almost since the beginning of modern advertising.

For their problems never grow old. They are always changing. And our methods of answering these problems are always changing, too.

EXAMPLE: Today much of the old guesswork of ad-making has been eliminated at McCann-Erickson by our Continuing Study of Reader Interest.

Now our creative people are guided by a knowledge of the specific factors that tend to make people stop, read and remember.

Now they have the benefit of a detailed analysis of what worked and what didn't work in 40,000 advertisements. They know the techniques and approaches that produce high reader-interest for different kinds of products, different types of media, different advertising objectives.

QUICK HENRY!
THE FLIT!

● "Dive Bombing" mosquitoes — "Four Motor" flies — are just two of the treacherous insect-enemies that wage war on our soldiers on many battlefronts...and two good reasons why the army uses such vast quantities of FLIT and our other insecticides.

FLIT is known as a super-layer for FLIT-like our other insectolayer of foreign pests. Just as it is known throughout America as a deadly weapon against domestic mosquitoes, ants, moths, flies, and roaches.

FLIT has the highest rating established for household insectocides by the National Bureau of Standards... the AA Rating.

Yes, when you're picking a cleanser you must look at results—for years of use! And that's where Ben Am shines. For-

Pfc. Jim Hunter writes from Keesler Field, Miss.:

"The last time I wrote to you I think I was in Lincoln, Neb., where I had just completed a course in airplane mechanics and had been selected as engineer cadet. After that I put in a four-month period as instructor, during which time I endeavored to impart my knowledge to hopeless G. I's. At that time my training was up and I was about to embark on a long-awaited voyage to Yale University School of Engineering and my commission when something happened that could only happen in the army and to me. The first contingent of Fighting French students arrived in the U. S. for specialized mechanical training. By this time you've probably guessed it. I was taken off the Yale program and assigned to the French group, an act which marked the beginning of the most interesting, yet, from my own viewpoint as you can doubtless understand, most humorous period of my army career.

"It seems that Lincoln Field was selected as the best school at which to train these youths, or rather men, for some of them were in the last war, and a great hue and cry was set up for men possessing a speaking knowledge of the French language and complete familiarity with aviation mechanics. I was selected, God knows why, given a pat of encouragement from the Colonel, and told to go ahead. I was on my own. Oh, how many, many times I thought of the Bowdoin French Department during that first trying week. The boys arrived, fresh from Casablanca, able to speak not a word of English. I arrived, not too fresh from the Bowdoin classrooms, with a faint recollection of Moliere, a few French romantics, poets, and a sure-fire dialogue of conversational French, consisting of such trite phrases as "What time is it, I am fine, how are you, shut the door, the book is on the table."

"The course finally started and we gave the boys a brief three-week course in English to enable them to get around the base, town, etc. After that the mechanics started. Fortunately for me, the boys were all mechanically minded and most of them were familiar with French aircraft but not our own. And, thank heavens, all mechanical things work more or less in the same way.

"I soon decided that the best way to get along with them was to live with them, so I moved into the barracks where it was a case of sink or swim. I wound up swimming. Those French fellows were one of the nicest groups I have ever known. As time went on, of course I managed to become pretty efficient at the language, both in conversational and mechanical terms, and "we" finished the course with flying colors.

"My class was composed of both officers and enlisted men, of assorted ages. All had seen combat and even the youngest had seen about four years of service. At first the boys were rather reticent but after a few weeks they loosened up and many were the fine discussions or "bull sessions" we had on politics, philosophy, women, song, and everything else under the sun. I know I made friends I shall never forget. When my first class finished, they presented me with a beautiful wrist watch suitably engraved to keep as a memento. I ate with, slept with, instructed, advised and played "mother" and friend to those fellows for about six months, and the night I put them on the train for Africa I really felt alone.

"After I had taught several groups at Nebraska, I was chosen to take a contingent to specialists' school at the Ford Bomber Plant at Willow Run, Mich. I was there about two months, acting as instructor, interpreter and liaison "soldier" for the detachment. When duty terminated, I went to Washington, D. C., for a few days and then transferred here, where all the Frenchmen in the U. S. A. are getting their ground crew training.

"These French soldiers are very rank conscious and they never heard of a private in a position like mine, so they made me an honorary Captain in the French Air Force and every time I came into the room they all jumped up and saluted, or at least they did until I made them cut it out. I have heard so much of their broken English and can imitate their accent so well by now that my future is assured in Hollywood as a double for Charles Boyer's voice.

". . . and now I must close, for, as my boys say—'Je vais jeter une derriere la cravate.'—which means I am going to throw one behind my necktie, or in other words, have a beer. Quaint, what?"

HOW TO CONSERVE EYESIGHT and LIGHT!

Eyesight and light are both vital to the war effort. Use them wisely by following these suggestions.

1. Clean lamp bulbs and bowls regularly with a damp cloth. Dry thoroughly before using.
2. Use shades with white linings that reflect light, not absorb it.
3. Keep all light properly shaded to avoid harmful glare.
4. Arrange furniture so one lamp serves two or more people if necessary.

Lt. Linn S. Wells USNR has moved from Hutchinson, Kans., to Grosse Ile, Mich.

It has been announced that Prof. Herbert R. Brown, Assistant Professors Albert R. Thayer and George H. Quinby are to teach regularly scheduled classes in Waynflete School in Portland during the coming year in addition to their work at Bowdoin. Prof. Brown will teach literature in the two higher classes; Mr. Thayer will teach literature in the two lower classes; and Mr. Quinby will be in charge of dramatics at the school, directing four one-act plays and a Shakespearean production for which the cast will be drawn from both Bowdoin and Waynflete.
